LLOYD-GEORGE'S DAY

Prime Minister of Great Britain Works 16 Hours a Day

Mr. Henry Suydam, special correspondent of a New York paper, writes: Premier Lloyd-George begins work at seven in the morning. Two large despatch boxes filled with urgent documents requiring immediate attention are placed in the Prime Minister's personal apartments each evening by his private secretaries. He considers these on rising. He works for an hour and a half, and at 8.30 breakfast is served.

At 9.30 promptly, the Premier enters the executive offices and takes up the most pressing war matters that may have arisen during the night. He is thus engaged from ten to eleven o'clock. At eleven o'clock promptly begins the meeting of the War Council. The conference of the War Council usually ends at two o'clock.

Mr. Lloyd-George spends not more than forty-five minutes at luncheon. Officials are again invited for informal consultation. At 2.55 luncheon is concluded, and the Prime Minister is available for special conferences with distinguished visitors whose position demands that they be officially received. From 3.30 to 5.30 another meeting of the War Council is usually held.

Between six and eight dinner is served. This is occasion for further business; there are always two or three guests who know much more about specific aspects of the war than the Prime Minister and who have been asked therefore to place their information concretely at his disposal. Dinner is concluded between nine and ten o'clock. Mr. Lloyd-George retires at 10.30, sleeps for about 8½ hours, and is ready at 6.30 or seven o'clock the next morning to attack the two despatch boxes before breakfast guests arrive.

A GOOD WINTER HABIT

Many people dread winter because the sudden climatic changes bring colds, grippe, rheumatism, tonsilitis or bronchitis. But thousands of well-informed men and women today avoid much sickness for themselves and their children by taking a few bottles of Scott's Emulsion to make richer blood, fortify the membranes of the throat and chest and create body-warmth to resist sickness. Soldiers at war receive cod liver oil; it will also strengthen you.

FEEDING SOLDIERS ON CANADA'S TRAINS

The following list includes some of the staples provided for a battalion en route to Halifax on a commissary train: 4,000 lbs. fresh meat and bacon, 1,200 lbs. beans, 1,500 loaves of bread, 50 bags of potatoes, 1,400 lbs. of sugar, 400 lbs. of coffee, 100 lbs of tea, 300 gallons of milk, 500 lbs. of butter, 600 lbs. of oatmeal.

When a battalion entrains the commissary department is always the subject of keen interest among the men in khaki. The military cooks are for the time being out of action. The comfort of the men, so far as diet is concerned, depends upon the railway's crew, in charge of a specially chosen steward who explains the system of service to the soldiers at the first meal on the train. The non-commissioned officer in each coach appoints his own waiters.

Eight Cooks Very Busy

Serving over 1,200 men in fifteen minutes without fuss or furore means organization and that is the secret of handling the problem. The rule is that every man shall be amply supplied and nothing delights the cook more than to see "boys" relish some favorite dish so well that they come back for "more." Three fine meals a day make happy interludes on the long rail journeys. The appreciation of the officers and men for the service given makes the hard work necessary in carrying out the task a pleasure to the men concerned.

The Grand Trunk commissary car is the largest travelling kitchen ever devised. It is eighty feet long, has a full-sized hotel range ten feet in length, steam-cooking apparatus and sixty-foot refrigerator space and store room capacity for many tons of provisions. Eight cooks work in it without confusion, while a passageway allows the military waiters to pass on their way to and from the coaches. In the movement of a battalion, two of these cars are used, the military special being run as a rule, in two sections. The commissary car is placed in the centre of the train to make it easy of access from all the coaches.

Are Very Punctual

Punctually as the minute hand of the watch reaches the meal hour the waiters from the first car on the train and the last car walk through to the commissary. The coaches have been preparing for hours and everything is ready and piping hot. Along the great counter are spread the various portions of the meal. The breakfast menu calls for oatmeal porridge, meats, potatoes, bread and butter, jam and coffee. Two men take the big trays of meats and potatoes, another man takes the bread, already sliced and buttered, another the porridge, another the coffee and so to the end. As soon as the first two coaches have been supplied two more squads of waiters arrive until all are served. Within fifteen minutes every man on the train is busy with his meal.

Not Yet Bankrupt

The well known economist M. Edmond Thery, writes in the Matin on the economic and financial strength of Great Britain. He says the visible stock of gold which the British Government had at its disposal for its foreign commitments at the end of July, 1914, amounted to £139,820,000, and at the end of December, 1916, amounted to £164,960,000. M. Thery recalls the fact that Dr. Helfferich, former German Minister of Finance, predicted that Great Britain would be bankrupt before the end of the first year of war.

DON'T GIVE UP

hope of being cured if you have some chronic sore or skin trouble. Zam-Buk has cured thousands of obstinate cases.

The superiority of Zam-Buk comes from its rare herbal composition and the skill with which Nature's healing substances are blended. Zam-Buk contains none of the coarse animal fat or poisonous mineral drugs which are to be found in common ointments, but is all medicine.

So refined are the herbal essences in Zam-Buk that the balm has unusual powers of penetration, and whereas an ordinary ointment remains on the surface skin, Zam-Buk reaches the underlying tissues where the disease springs from. It then kills the germs and cures from the root up. Zam-Buk cures are thus thorough and permanent.

Zam-Buk is of unique value in curing eczema, chronic sores, ulcers, ringworm, boils, blood-poisoning, and piles, as well as cuts, burns, scalds, and all skin injuries. All druggists or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto; 50c. box, 3 for $1.25.

EFFICIENCY OF THE POST

A newspaper correspondent writes: When one thinks of the millions of letters that pass to and from the army at the front each week, one cannot but feel a pride in the excellence of the public service that is performed in the handling and distribution of the vast bulk of mail matter. The almost absolute certainty that a letter will reach the man it is meant for is a surprising thing, considering the seas crossed, the difficulties intervening, and the confusions that attend war. As we have said, this postal work is a public service, and there is, in the success of it, a complete answer to those who assert that there canndt be efficiency in any service unde public ownership. Where is there any service more efficient than that of the post?

"TIZ" FOR ACHIG, SORE, TIRED FEET

Use "Tiz" for tender, puffed-up burning, calloused feet and corns

People who are forced to stand on their feet all day know what sore, tender, sweaty, burning feet mean. They use "Tiz." and "Tiz" cures their feet right up. It keeps feet in perfect condition. "Tiz" is the only remedy in the world that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet and cause tender, sore, tired, aching feet. Your shoes won't tighten and hurt your feet.

CANADIANS IN FRANCE

"Byng Boys" Not Inured to Mud But Daily Bear Troubles

The Canadian front in France, says Lord Northcliffe, is a replica in miniature of the whole vast Dominion. It is a world of the railroads, the forests, the farms, the mines, the lakes, the rivers, the banks, insurance, real estate, the lumber camp, and—dare I whisper it?—even politics. The Canadian soldiers have had good and bad luck. At home many of them are accustomed to and willing to rough it in all sorts of ways, and they were, therefore, inured to discomfort. They had not experienced damp mud, and the dreadful mud of that first rainy winter on Salisbury Plain was a piece of real misfortune. They bore their trials nobly. All their ill luck, however, has now been more than balanced by the all-important fact that they have secured for their leader one of the ablest, as well as one of the best liked, generals in the whole war—Sir Julian Byng, a worthy representative of a great fighting family. The Canadians call themselves the Byng Boys. Quite lately they gaily signalled back from within a few yards of the artillery barrage that "The Byng Boys are Here," denoting their arrival at the second German trench.

Japanese Wages Small

M. Ryuto, in an article entitled "Making Munitions for the Allies," says: "The wages of the Japanese armed worker are small compared with the same kind of man abroad, being from 30 sen a day (16c) to 1 yen (50c) for a day of ten hours. The men are paid 20 per cent. more for overtime, so that a man who receives 30 sen a day will get 42 sen if he has to work overtime, while the man who gets 1 yen a day will get nearly 2 yen a day for overtime. The men have no time off, save on Sundays and national holidays."

Senator Died of Grief

Charles Sebline, Senator for the Aisne Department, died of grief and privation while being taken to Germany as a hostage. Senator Sebline who was 71 years old, remained in his home at Montercourt among his constituents throughout the German occupation. He was forced to accompany the retreating Germans after seeing his house and sugar plant destroyed and his estate ravaged.

LESSONS ON FOOD

Baden-Powell's Experiences of Boer War Taught Valuable Lessons for Prepared For What to Expect

He says with the opening of the years the Boers had stored grain in proper quantities, and had the British not been prepared for this the Boers would take the field against us and still have that force to oppose that field for two years against our organized forces. It was just feasible but not probable.

In speaking of the siege Baden-Powell says: The grain was isolated out on the broad grass plains, the nearest town being two hundred miles away, with all rail and other communications cut by U-boats in the shape of Boer forces and patrols on every side. The supplies we had were calculated to last our crowd for four months with proper care. But we managed just to make them last for nearly twice that time—until the U-boat campaign was put a stop to. Taking stock of our resources was the first step dictated by common sense. We took stock and kept close watch on expenditure, private as well as public stores of food were collected, and fair prices paid for them.

Used Bones Ground For Flour

The daily ration of the staff, which was slightly lower than that of the fighting men, was this: Meat, 8 oz. (including bone); Boer flour, 2 oz.; mealie (maize), 2 oz.; rice, 2 oz.; tea, ½ oz., or coffee, 1-2 oz.; sugar, 3 oz. Looking forward was another important item in our preparation, and vegetable growing on a system was carried out. Our 7,000 natives were warned that beyond what they grew for themselves no vegetable fare would be available for them, and round each of their huts crops of Indian corn were soon sprouting, while for the Europeans market gardens were worked by five Chinamen who happened to be laundrymen in the town.

Bones from the soup had at first been thrown away as refuse till it was observed that the native came round collecting them and that they then pounded them between stones and ate the powder with evident relish and benefit. So we promptly adopted a similar plan and thereby increased our flour available for making biscuit. After the first two months our stock of flour ran low, and what was available was supplied to the hospitals and children. We had to improvise our foods.

Horse a Useful Animal

Continuing he says: I had never found a proper economic use of a horse after he was dead! As far as the rest of him went—and we made it go pretty far—there was value in every bit of him, for we not only ate him, but we utilized his various by-products to the best advantage. His shoes were taken off and sent to our shell factory, while his mane and tail went to stuff mattresses at the hospital. The hair was scalded off his hide, and head and hoofs and hide were boiled and chopped and mixed to form brawn. His flesh was minced in a big machine, and his inside used for sausage skins for the same. His bones and scraps were then boiled into soup for all, and the bones themselves were afterwards pounded up and employed for adulterating the flour.

Once we knew what our supply was and our daily expenditure we could compute how long we could hold out; and when after three months of it Lord Roberts got a message through to us asking how we stood in January we were able to reply that we could stick it out till May. On May 18 our relief force arrived.

Richest of English Peers

Lady Howard de Walden is married to the richest peer of the realm, is remarkably beautiful and posseases an exceptionally good voice, which has been carefully trained. The income of Lord Howard de Walden, who went to the front as a major in the Westminster Dragoons is calculated at $2.50 a minute, or $3,600 a day. His lordship is exceedingly skilful with sword and gun, and once he achieved the unique feat of shooting a pheasant and hare at practically the same moment. He fired at the bird and brought it down. The report disturbed the hare, which jumped up almost at his feet and made off. Like a flash, he turned round, fired off the other barrel, and killed the hare.

Had Severe Cold
PAIN IN CHEST
SPASMODIC COUGHING

Many people when they contract a cold do not pay any attention to it, thinking perhaps it will pass away in a day or two. This is a mistake for before they know it, it has settled on the lungs.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that on the first sign of a cough or cold it must be gotten rid of immediately, otherwise it may cause years of suffering from some serious lung trouble.

Mr. A. George, 30 Blevin's Place, Toronto, Ont., writes: "Having greatly benefitted from your remedy, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I take the liberty to write you a few words about the effect of that wonderful syrup. Two years ago I caught a severe cold followed by a spasmodic cough and pain in my chest. I was treated by many doctors but without any benefit, and also took many proprietory medicines which all failed to cure. One of my friends recommended Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after using three bottles I was completely cured. I recommend it to anyone as a God-sent remedy."

CHATHAM, April 16—The sad circumstances of the death of Mrs. Lillie Holmes, aged 42, who died in St. Joseph's Hospital, leaving six young children and her husband, Pte. Geo. Holmes, who went overseas with the Kent Battalion, has been brought to the notice of the military authorites in the hope that he will be given his discharge from further military service. Not wishing to distress her husband when he left the city with his battalion, the late Mrs. Holmes hid from him the fact that she was suffering from a cancer. She consented to an operation after his departure, and unfortunately died from the effects.

FIGHTING IN DESERT

The following is an extract from a soldier's letter: Our little affairs out here have been very brilliant on the whole, but you would be better able to form a right idea of what has been accomplished if you could only see what a real desert is. Water there is none; shrubs, even of the salty sort, are non-existent; and, stranger still, there is not a speck of sand. Simply hundreds upon hundreds of square miles of hard, sun-baked limestone, curiously glazed, level as a billiard table in places, and in others cut into wide, step-like formations, and covered with a sprinkling of hard pebbles. Here and there one comes across a piece of petrified wood, which, when struck with anything hard, rings like steel. Desert lizards, beetles, or, indeed, any form of insect or animal life, there are none on many of these enormous stretches. The way our men have stuck to it and routed the Senussi and kindred tribes from the few oases makes me feel proud that I'm a Briton.

"GET OUT OF RUTS"

Lord Shaughnessy's Speech on "After the War" Problems

When asked for a statement as to Canada's greatest need in these critical times, Lord Shaughnessy spoke in part as follows: We want to get out of ruts. We do our thinking in ruts, and that keeps us acting in ruts. Take agriculture, for instance. People have a habit of thinking and saying that intensive farming is not suitable to Canadians; and, accordingly, it is not developed. But Canadians pride themselves on their adaptability; and many of them might transfer their energies, from extensive to intensive farming with great advantage to themselves and to the country. This is a line of industry which partly disabled soldiers, with sufficient training, could carry on both easily and profitably. It involves thorough co-operation, of course. But is it too much to hope that co-operation, or government organization of buying and selling—in other words, national co-operation—may be applied in the near future to the agricultural industry in general, intensive and extensive alike?

While we must avoid impracticable schemes, we must not turn down a scheme off-hand as impracticable just because we have had no experience of it. Nor must we be scared of big things just because they are big.

We must investigate all plans that seem to contain any promise of usefulness; experiment with those that still seem promising after being subjected to rigid examination; and boldly adopt those that stand the test of experiment. At a critical time like this, with tremendous problems to solve, we must be bold, without rashness, and not flatter our timidity with the name of caution.

Sugar Largely a Stimulant

This war has brought many blessings in its terrible train, says a London doctor. Among these blessings is going to be the lessening in the amount consumed not only of alcohol, but also of sugar and sugary things. Up to a certain point let good sugar be taken, but let it be realized that, as sugar is taken now to excess, it is largely a stimulant, and is a cause of many all too common troubles. How much better it would be if people had less of the white sugar and sweets, etc., and more of the crisp foods (such as potato chips, toast, fried bread, biscuits, rusks, etc.) in so far as they really need carbohydrates.

Battered to Death by Guns

Many ugly tales have come in of German doings. Tales of smitreatment of prisoners of war. There is one story of brave Russian sergeants and corporals who died like martyrs, battered into a mass of dead flesh by Prussian rifle butts; they had steadfastly refused to buy their lives with work done to aid the enemy in his trenches.

How England Honors Them

A live shell, about 12 inches long, was found in a shrubbery at Walton-on-Thames and removed by the military authorities.

All fat should be saved, tried out, and put into a can for frying.

FILL THE CARS

LITTLE more co-operation between the merchants and the railways will do much to re- the present freight situation. railways are not trying to shift responsibility on to the public. are asking the public's help. h more tonnage, for instance, d be handled with the existing lo- otive power and terminal facili- if cars were loaded to capacity ead of being so often only two- ds full. In the old days when he was lighter, it mattered less to railways if a shipper did not use the space he paid for—that was shipper's loss. But now it is real- that the extravagance of one per may cause delay to others g to the limited amount of loco- ive power and terminal facilities. shortage is not so much in equip- t as in train crews, and labor in yards and roundhouses. Any- g which can help to secure ker clearance and freer move- t in the yards, helps to speed up movement of freight. Another wback to the economical move- t of freight is that a great many ightless order not the full carload freight, but merely the minimum wed under the classification. It ld materially help to solve the blem if in placing orders con- ees would order enough to fill a to capacity instead of the mini- m, which very often does not re- ent more than half a carload. The question of the capacity of cars lf the subject of investigation. standard of loading grain, for in- nce, has remained the same for ny years, but improvement in the ineering of cars has gone on stead- , so that the modern freight car bear stresses greatly in excess of t was possible twenty years ago. e result is that there is prospect of nsiderably increasing the load line quite a large proportion of freight uipment, thus increasing the train pacity without requiring additional in crews. Grain cars rated for

MEASURING DEPTH OF GRAIN IN CAR.

80,000 lbs. are found capable of carrying over 90,000.

It has been figured that if the average load could be increased on Canadian railways in 1917 by five times over that of 1915, this would be equivalent to 54,800 additional cars, requiring no additional locomotives or man-power.

Canadian business men are, therefore, being urged to co-operate with the railways in their endeavor to increase the existing carrying capacity, by using to better advantage the present available rolling stock. Light bulky commodities, of which there are many, should be loaded to the full cubic capacity of cars. Heavier freight should be loaded to the full carrying capacity which is 10% in excess of their stencilled capacity.

The following figures are taken from the Railway Statistics of the Dominion of Canada, issued by the Deputy Minister of the Department of Railways and Canals, and cover all the railways of Canada:

	1907	1915	Increase
Total tons freight carried 1 mile	11,687,711,830	17,661,309,723	51.1%
Aggregate capacity of freight cars (in tons)	2,908,903	6,731,265	131.4%
Total freight cars	106,540	201,690	91.1%

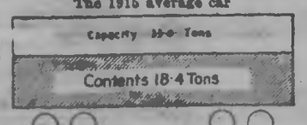
The 1915 average car



The car capacity increased 5.8 tons. The contents increased 3.0 tons. 48% of the additional capacity provided was not used.

The public is asked to co-operate with the railways in an endeavor to remedy the existing car shortage.

It can be done by utilizing to better advantage the present available rolling stock.

By increasing the average car load to 23.4 tons or 5 tons more than during 1915 would be equivalent to the placing of Light bulky commodities, of which there are many, should be loaded to the full cubic capacity of cars. Heavier freight should be loaded to the maximum carrying capacity authorized.

PAIN? NOT A BIT!
LIFT YOUR CORNS OR CALLUSES OFF

No humbug! Apply few drops then just lift them away with fingers.

This new drug is an ether compound discovered by a Cincinnati chemist. It is called freezone, and can now be obtained in tiny bottles as here shown at very little cost from any drug store. Just ask for freezone. Apply a drop or two directly upon a tender corn or callus and instantly the soreness disappears. Shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it off, root and all, with the fingers.

Not a twinge of pain, soreness or irritation; not even the slightest smarting, either when applying freezone or afterwards.

This drug doesn't eat up the corn or callus, but shrivels them so they loosen and come right out. It is no humbug! It works like a charm. For a few cents you can get rid of every hard corn, soft corn or corn between the toes, as well as painful calluses on bottom of your feet. It never disappoints and never burns, bites or inflames. Genuine freezone is sold only in these small bottles packed in a little sealed wood case, bearing a yellow wrapper. Beware of imitations.

TOLD BY A MARINE

By Victor MacClure

(By Victor MacClure.)

Old Peter, my brother, was in the Territorials when the war broke out. He had been in the force since it was first started. We used to chaff him and say that he was in it just to give the girls a treat on that Sunday, when the battalion went on Church Parade in full uniform with a band and colours flying. Most other fellows thought it was pretty much a waste of time, all the drilling and go on—now, we think different. If a few more of us had been in the "terriers" there might have been a different face on the war by this time. The old man was an old volunteer: he had been a volunteer when the shooting competition was held each year at Wimbledon, a "wapenschaw" they used to call it; that will give you an idea that he had been ready to defend his country to the best of his ability. His experience left him with a firm opinion that such times could not come again, and that Britain was half way down the sink.

We were at the seaside when we first got the news that war was declared, and it was at breakfast that Peter suddenly got up from reading the paper and asked. "When is the first train to town?"

"Whatever is the matter Peter?" says the mother.

"Mobilization's the matter, mother, I've got to report at once."

Then it hit us good and straight, that after all our chaff, Peter was really a soldier. It was a revelation to us—we'd always thought of a territorial as a feather-bed soldier. "Feather-bed soldier," says we, 'in the old days—feather-bed soldier! All right, all right, wait a bit—

Good enough. Old Peter goes off to report at his depot while the old boy shouts directions about care of the feet and "cold tea in your water bottle." The next we heard, was that Peter was in a camp nearly a day's journey away from home. He came on leave one day goodish bit later, looking fit and brown—like after each year's camp, only more so. He was quiet and steady, was good old Peter, and didn't say a word about going to the front or that. His leave didn't seem very long. He was back at camp four days after leaving it.

Early in the Spring of next year, '15, that would be, we got a postcard from Peter. It just said he was leaving for the front, and sent his love to all. No muck about going out to fight for his country, and, "if I should never see you again, good-bye to all." None of that blither. Shows you the quiet kind of chap Peter was, that postcard, if you like to think about it. Of course, it hit the old mother pretty bad, but she seldom showed it. If she did, she excused it by saying in her funny old way that Peter had been always a fighter at school and "never had won." She was sure from that that Peter would get hurt.

You know how it gets you when you think your brother is doing something fine? Well, I was twenty-one and the posters all over the place were just hooting it at me, and that the country wanted men. But I waited to see what my pals would do. Peter was killed at the second battle of Ypres. Soon after the official announcement, came a letter from his Company Officer. It said that Peter had died like the good chap he was—fighting like a hero after saving a few of his pals. It seems he took command when his officer and his N. C. O's were gone under. The old man handed me the Captain's letter without a word, after he had read it. I went straight to the recruiting office.

Oh, yes, if I can get a wipe at the Huns. I'll feel a bit happier. I suppose if you boil it down, it comes to looking for revenge. But it goes a bit further than that. In a way it is a reparation.

You see, these fellows like my brother Peter, had been doing their bit for the country, long before the war came along. They were ready. The most of them gave up their summer holidays and a good bit of their spare time getting ready, while the rest of us were loafing about, smoking more fags than were good for us. First we had the regular soldiers, the First Expeditionary Force that stood between the German and Calais. These fellows had a heavier job than they ought to have had, just because we had not been big enough to be ready for what was sure to come. They saved our lazy hides, and got about smashed in the doing of it.

Then came the "terriers" to fill up the gaps in the ranks of the first lot. It would be as mad to expect a six month's apprentice to be as good at his job as a passed journeyman, as to reckon the "Terriers" were as good soldiers as the Regular Tommies. But they were the next best thing and that was pretty good. They put themselves between the Germans and Britain, while men at home were sweating like mad to be ready to take their places. The fellows that joined up at once in Kitchener's army were honest men that tried hard to pay their debts, but it took my brother's death to show me where my duty was.

Revenge? All right. Please God, if I get the chance, I shall not fail to avenge old Peter. And I suppose with a bit of luck, I shall get that chance. That isn't what worries me. It is this. If I fight without stopping for years and years, I can't make up for lost time. I've started too late. Not too late to help in bringing victory to the country, but too late to save the fellows who stood between the country and its danger at the first. Their sacrifice was made for me when I was still hanging round picture-shows and mouching about. I'm too late to save my brother from having to give his life for my folly, too late to spare my old mother a broken heart. If Peter and the chaps that went before him hadn't been ready, if they had been rotters like myself, my services for the country now, wouldn't have been worth a curse.

But these chaps that lie along the road from Mons, and those that are buried round Ypres, are big enough to forgive us rotters if we will only carry out what they started to do.

And I wish I could thank them, but I can't—I can't.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Wm. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

AMERICAN GIRL A PRISONER.

HAVERHILL, Mass., April 14. — letter received by Miss Nellie M. Moore from Miss Pauline M. Jordan of this city, who went with a Red Cross party to Bucharest last November, brought the information that Miss Jordan had been imprisoned by the Germans. She wrote that she had been placed in a basement which was bitterly cold, and that she received very little food.

Previous letters had told of Miss Jordan's escape to the Russian border after the bombardment of Bucharest. The place of her capture and imprisonment was not made known in her letter to Miss Moore.

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP

YOU SHOULD USE
MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS

Perhaps too much worry has gotten on your nerves, perhaps you have overworked yourself, or have been excessive in your use of tobacco, but whatever the cause, the nervous system must be built up again before restful sleep can be assured.

Those whose rest is broken into by frightful dreams, nightmares, sinking and smothering sensations, who wake up in the morning as tired as they went to bed can have their old, peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep back again by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. John Sloan, Haley Station, Ont., writes: "Over a year ago I was very nervous. I could not sleep at night, and I would faint at the slightest fright. I tried several doctors, but they did me practically no good. I noticed your advertisement, and immediately tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am proud to say they cured me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box or three for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE HOUSE AND GROUNDS

A Well Proportioned House of Colonial Suggestion

THIS house was designed by Mr D. E. Shea, of Springfield Mass., with the view in mind of having it face the north. A north exposure gets the early and late sun, while a south exposure receives little or no sun on the longest summer days. Therefore the principal rooms face the south. The dining room is so placed as to get the morning sun from the southeast.

The bedrooms have two exposures. Inexpensive but durable materials are specified. Timber has been chosen as the building material, as it permits a larger house than any other material. The rooms are so arranged as to utilize every bit of available space. The bathroom is easily accessible to all bedrooms and near enough to the kitchen plumbing to keep down the cost. This house could be erected on a comparatively narrow lot. The following is a rough outline of the construction:—

The contractor is to do the work in a thorough and workmanlike manner. The foundation walls and footings shall be stone. The exposed chimney surfaces to be covered with cement plaster. Fireplaces to be laid up in first quality red brick with white mortar joint. Mantel to be of simple Colonial design. Cellar floor to be of concrete 3 inches thick. Girders in cellar are to be supported on 3-inch pipe columns with 16 x 16 x 8-inch concrete footings. Plaster to be of two coat work. The walls of the bathroom to the height of 5 feet, and in the kitchen to the height of 3 feet, to have Keene's Windsor cement lined off in blocks about 4 x 6 inches in size. The framing timber throughout to be well seasoned spruce. The following is a list of the sizes to be used:—

Floor joist, 2 x 8.16 inches, O. C.

Outside studding, 2 x 4 x 16 inches, O. C.

Interior Studding, 2 x 4 and 2 x [illegible] inches, O. C.

[illegible]s, 6 x 10 inches with 2 x 3 [illegible] spiked to sides for support of [illegible]e, 2.2 x 4 inches.

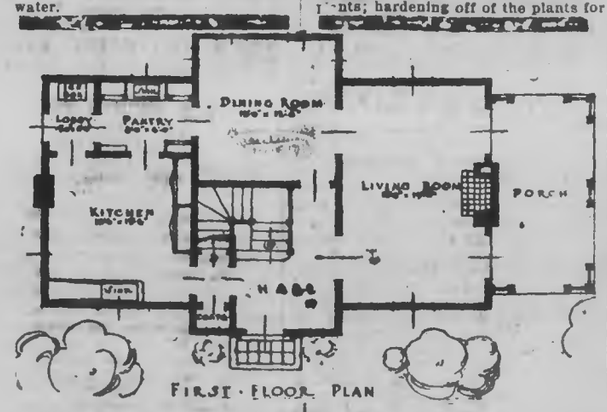
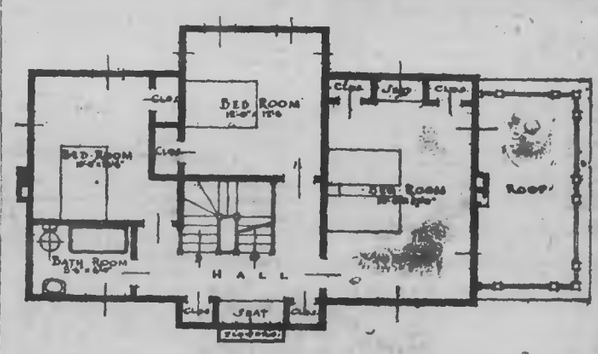
Outside finishing stock to be good clear white pine Colonial siding nine inches to the weather. The house is painted white with green roof and shutters. All tin to be painted both sides before using. Flash around all exposed pieces with same. Inside finish to be thoroughly kiln dried stock. The hall, living room and dining room to be in white wood, same to have two coats, not including filler of flat white and two coats of satinette enamel. The service of quarters to be of B. C. pine finished natural. The heating to be hot water.



FIRST · FLOOR PLAN



· SECOND · FLOOR · PLAN ·

Figures on the house have been obtained from a reliable contractor and he included everything in his contract, excepting the electric fixtures, for the sum of $4,830. Last year this type of house was built for seventeen cents a cubic foot. I am allowing two cents extra a foot, which is liberal, for the advanced cost of material, etc., and with 26,015 cubic feet at nineteen cents, makes the total cost of the house, $4,942.85.

THE VEGETABLE GARDEN

By W. SAXBY BLAIR,
Superintendent of Experiment Station. Kentville, N.S.

(Editor's Note.—The article reproduced below refers largely to cultivation on a larger scale than is generally indulged in by small gardeners. Nevertheless, the amateur and the man or woman with a small garden can gain much valuable information in this bulletin.)

Vegetable growing involves more detail than does the growing of any of the general farm crop Many of these details may be of minor importance in general agriculture, whereas in vegetable growing, success or failure may be determined largely by attention to them. For this reason to deal with vegetable gardening briefly in a comprehensive manner is exceedingly difficult. Consider, for instance, details incident to the growing of tomatoes, or any representative vegetable crop, such as starting the seed, usually under glass, an the management of the hotbed for best development of seedlings; transplanting of seedlings to secure desirable plants; hardening off of the plants for setting in the open field; preparation of the ground; setting out the plants; cultivation; training; harvesting and the crop matures, and the packing of such perishable fruit in attractive and suitable packages, in comparison with a grain or fodder crop, to start which the preparation of the soil is usually not nearly so important; the seed is sown where the crop is to develop; the product is harvested easily, usually all at one time, and in bulk; does not require so careful handling and permits of easy storage.

I shall attempt first to point out certain important details more or less common in their application to all vegetable crops, and follow this with more specific information relative to the growing of some of the principal vegetable crops.

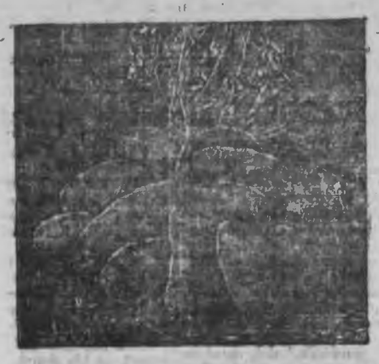
Starting the Seed.

In sowing seed whether in the open ground, hotbed or greenhouse, attention should be given to certain factors which contribute to successful germination. Heat, moisture and air are essential. The temperature requirements for best germination are usually a few degrees higher than required for the best development of the plant. Avoid extreme temperature conditions. A high temperature followed by cold may prove disastrous.

Uniform moisture conditions are imperative. Excessive watering one time followed by drying out is the cause of many seeds not starting. Keep the soil moist, not wet. Seeds if not in contact with moist soil cannot possibly germinate. The reason for pressing the soil over seeds that are small is to bring the soil moisture to the surface to supply the seed. The smaller the seed the shallower it should be planted as a rule. The air requirement is regulated largely by the depth of planting. The depth of planting will be governed somewhat by the condition of the soil, for on light open soils the seed can be safely planted deeper than on heavy compact soil. Small seed, such as celery, may be sown one-eighth inch deep; medium-sized seed, such as cabbage and onion, one-quarter inch deep. Peas and beans may be planted one to two inches deep.

Preparation Tillage

By preparation tillage is meant the tilling of land before planting. With all vegetable crops this should be thoroughly done. The heavier or more compact the soil the greater the necessity for care in this operation. Any manure applied should be well mixed through the soil. The ground should be well worked to at least six inches deep with the two-horse cultivator or similar implement. Crops should never be rushed into poorly prepared ground, for it is not possible to make up for preparation tillage after the crops are planted.



Maintenance Tillage.

Maintenance tillage is the tillage required after the crops are planted. Maintenance tillage should be shallow. The object should be to keep down all weed growth by frequent shallow cultivation, and leave a fine earth covering on the surface of the ground to prevent evaporation from the soil. Two inches is the usual depth for such cultivation. When the plants are young deeper cultivation may be given, but after the roots commence to spread through the soil much injury from cutting or exposing them may result from deep cultivation.

Manuring.

Partially-rotted stable manure may be applied to vegetable land in the fall and ploughed to a depth of five or six inches. Stable manure applied in the spring should be well-rotted. This is especially so in the case of early vegetables. The advantage of well rotted manure is that the plant food it contains is in a more readily available form and can be used by the crop at once. Rough and partially decayed manure may be used to advantage for late vegetable crops if applied in the spring. As a general thing, however, manuring in the fall and ploughing it under is advisable for all vegetable crops.

Commercial Fertilizers

Commercial fertilizers can be used to advantage in vegetable growing. One containing 4 per cent nitrogen, 8 per cent phosphoric acid, and 10 per cent potash will prove the most satisfactory. This may be home mixed by purchasing the unmixed material and mixing it in the following proportions: 150 lb. nitrate of soda, 125 lb. sulphate or muriate of potash and 325 lb. of 15 per cent acid phosphate. From 500 to 1,000 lb. per acre is the usual application of this fertilizer. The practice is to sow broadcast just before seeding or planting, scattering evenly and mixing with the soil by harrowing. Fertilizer scattered at the rate of one ounce to the square yard represents approximately 300 lb. per acre.

Where quick vegetable growth is desired, nitrate of soda at the rate of 200 to 300 lb. per acre may prove desirable. A heavier application than this is not advisable and may prove injurious.

Hotbeds.

For lengthening the season of fresh vegetables and to raise vegetables which require a long season to mature, hotbeds will be found quite necessary. They are constructed in the early spring before the weather becomes warm enough to start growth without some artificial heat. This heat is supplied by using fermenting manure. Hot manure that has not "fire-fanged" or "burnt-out" should be used. When collecting the manure care should be taken to keep the mass well tramped to exclude the air as much as possible, thereby preventing this rapid decomposition or "fire-fanging." When the necessary amount of manure has been secured it is turned and made into a heap, and after a week it may be again turned and made into a hotbed.

An even, unifrom heat is desired and not the quick violent heating which soon spends itself. In order to secure this spread the manure evenly in layers of one foot at a time, distributing the dry and cool parts of the manure with the warm and moist parts, and tramp the whole mass quite firm as the work proceeds. The amount of tramping will be determined by the amount of straw the mass contains, the greater the proportion of straw as compared with the solid the more tramping required. If the mass is very dry it may be advisable to wet it some to make it more compact.

The manure may be made into a hotbed on the surface of the ground or put into a pit made about 18 inches deep. If the pit is used care must be exercised not to allow water to enter it. In any case the bed should be larger on each side than the frame to be used. It will not be necessary to use so much manure if the pit is used as in the case of the surface bed, for the heat will be held better from the bed being protected. If the hotbed is started on the surface the latter part of February, three feet of manure is necessary. If started the last of March, two feet will be sufficient.

The frame for supporting the sashes should be 10 inches to 12 inches high in front and 15 inches to 18 inches at the back, giving a drop of about 6 inches to the sash. They are usually made 12 feet long to support four 6 by 3 feet sashes. The sashes usually contain three rows of 10 by 12 inch glass.

The hotbed should be located on the south side of a building, hedge or fence protected from cold and prevailing winds.

Two or three inches of cinders, sand or soil may be put on the manure inside the frame if flats are to be used, or if the seed or plants are to be grown without flats, six inches of good loam is necessary. The seed may be sown or plants put into the frame about one week after the bed is made or as soon as the first violent heating has commenced to subside. For warm season vegetables the temperature at the bottom of the soil should have fallen to 90 degrees and for cool season vegetables to 70 degrees; up to this time the frames should be left slightly open in the daytime to allow rank gases to escape.

Management of Hotbeds.

Owing to the volume of air in the hotbed being small great care is necessary not to allow the temperature to run too high, nor to leave too much air on the bed and chill the plants. In order to develop stocky, thrifty, plants, as much ventilation as possible should be given. A close confined atmosphere invites disease and produces sickly, "leggy" or drawn plants. More ventilation can be given the cool-season than is the case with the warm-season vegetables, and it is advisable to have two hotbeds, or a division in the frame if only one is used, so that these two classes can be handled under the necessary different temperature conditions.

Watering should be done about the middle of the day, so that the plants and the surface of the soil will have a chance to dry off before the frames are closed. The soil should be kept damp throughout but not wet.

Cold Frame.

A cold frame is similar to a hotbed except that no manure is used to secure bottom heat and the sun is depended upon entirely for heat. The soil inside the frame may be dug up and the seed sown in it, or the seed may be sown in flats and set into these frames for hardening off. They require attention similar to hotbeds. During very cold nights, like hotbeds, they may be protected by a mat covgreater comfort. Less soil will be tered over the glass to give this necessary protection.

Flats.

Flats or small boxes are necessary convenience in handling plants. Flats are usually made of 1-2 inch lumber for sides and bottoms and 3-4 inch ends. Thirteen-inch by 22-inch and 3 inches deep is a convenient size. Old soap or similar boxes may be cut down for the purpose. They should all be of the same size if possible to make use of the hotbed space. The advantage of flats is that they can be moved from place to place, and shifted from one bed to another as desired. The seed starts generally better in flats and, when ready to transplant, the work can be done inside with greate. comfort. Less soil will be required when flats are used.

Handy Helps for Gardening

BEFORE you get too busy with planting, cultivating, weeding and fighting plant enemies, get your labels and sticks ready. If you are ingenious you may paint these and make them quite ornamental. The sticks with birds and other figures at the tops are much liked by many persons.

For those who like a less conspicuous label there is a good one no thicker than a pencil, but very strong. It is made of Japanese bamboo, dyed green, and may be had for fifty cents a hundred.

An excellent label is of special waterproof iron, galvanized and japanned black so that it cannot rust, and will be very durable. The strong stem is eighteen inches long and pointed so that it goes into the ground easily. The top plate is of the same material as the stem and forms a frame for the celluloid card on which the name of the plant may be written with a soft pencil. This is protected by mica. Extra cards and mica covers can always be obtained. These labels cost $2 a dozen.

HOME AND SCHOOL GARDENING

ONTARIO.

By J. B. Dandeno, Ph.D., Inspector Elementary Agricultural Classes.

The methods of carrying on school garden work may be very varied depending upon local conditions, material at hand, and upon the personality of the teacher. Good results are sure to follow any well organized method so long as the educational feature is kept in the foreground.

In the early history of the Ontario Agricultural College, the farmer looked askance at the farm in connection with the college, because it did not pay for the up-keep of the institution. They have since learned that the results were in the student and not in the treasury. They failed at first to see that it was the chief function of the college to train men rather than to produce financial profits from the fields and barns. The same is partly true at the present time with respect to school gardens.

The public is frequently a severe critic and occasionally very unfair. A school garden may be a first-class success, and yet not produce ten cents' worth of marketable stuff. At the same time, unless the garden can be made to show first-class results in the way of produce, there is room for improvement.

The school gardens in Canada in 1917 should be devoted entirely to plants of food value. The war conditions urge this matter upon us. As a general rule, however, a fair proportion of decorative plants should be grown.

As a rule, a small garden well planned for would be more effective than a large one showing lack of attention. This garden should, if possible, be on the school grounds and also in public view. Every plot should be so managed as to answer some question. A community plot of an experimental character can always be made interesting and should have a label in sight of the public.

The care during summer vacation can be managed if experimental plots are a part of the garden. The interest in connection with such demonstrations is usually strong enough to attract members of the school during vacation to provide the necessary care. The illustration here given shows a class on the school plot in July, 1918.

The most important factor in the successful operations of a school garden is the teacher. For Ontario there is a good course given during the summer sessions, but this is not everything. The teacher must be alive and something of a leader. In the fall, owing to a very dry season, the season for fall ploughing was very short. During this season the school garden (in a certain school) needed to be ploughed, and the teacher was told that the school garden would have to go unploughed, but he thought otherwise and went to a neighbor ploughing in his field and asked him if he could spare time to do the work. He said he thought he could and ploughed the garden. In a week or two after this, the teacher asked him for his bill and came nigh insulting him. He replied: "It would be a queer thing for me to make a charge for ploughing a few 'bouts' for the teacher's garden." The country is full of such farmers, but such teachers are not so common.

The time may come when the school garden will be monotonous, if the same routine is followed year after year, but the work and management of the school garden can be varied within limit and this problem of gradual stagnation is not receiving attention from those who have recently received supplementary certificates in agriculture.

KIDNEYS FAIL TO WORK

Galetta, Ont.

"My husband used GIN PILLS for Backache and Kidney Disease which formerly troubled him a great deal. The pain in his back was dreadful and the kidneys failed to do their work properly. After taking one dose of GIN PILLS he found them to be exactly what he needed, and after taking two boxes of GIN PILLS was completely cured. We heartily recommend GIN PILLS at every opportunity to our friends and relatives.

The Origin of Love

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

It was in the month of October. The air was crisp. The sun shone brightly, but not warm. The leaves were all colors, some still on the trees, but most of them on the ground.

Beatrice Thorne and Edgar Swift were walking on this variegated carpet. They had both graduated from college the previous June and their heads were overflowing with knowledge—that modern knowledge which tells us that we are a conglomeration of molecules; that we are fortresses against incursions of bacteria; that our brains are a sort of photographic laboratory containing myriads of plates.

"Do you believe," asked Beatrice, "that life is indigenous to the earth?"

"Sir William Hamilton," Edgar replied, "suggested that it came from a neighboring planet. A pretty conceit, that of the vital principle wafted from Venus to earth as the wind carries pollen from flower to flower."

If this dialogue were to continue in the scientific clouds mention of the planet Venus was unfortunate. While the scientific couple were talking of the vital principle they were really thinking of the love principle.

"Do you believe love," asked Beatrice, "is an entity or simply the result of chemical action within us?"

"I cannot see why love should be different, basically considered, from hate. Two plants, the one containing poison, the other capable of producing curative properties, are built on the same fundamental principle."

The couple had passed from under trees into an open space. An inclosed field blocked their way. Edgar helped Beatrice over the fence, and they were crossing the field when she asked this profound question. Being absorbed in themselves they did not see a bull, who stood looking at them with evident interest. They had nearly reached the fence on the other side of the inclosure when the bull began a slow trot toward them.

Edgar, glancing aside, saw the beast coming. Seizing Beatrice by the arm, he hurried her to the fence. Before they could reach it she collapsed, and, taking her in his arms, he carried her to it and had only time to drop her on the other side and get over himself when the bull's horns perforated his coattail and held him suspended across the uppermost rail. Fortunately the cloth did not hold, and the man dropped beside the girl.

While the bull was pawing the ground on the other side of the fence Edgar held Beatrice in his arms, his eyes bent on her face. She opened hers and looked up into his. The bull stopped pawing and, evidently satisfied with being left supreme in his domain, walked away.

"Are you hurt, dearest?" asked Edgar.

His hands were clasped under her shoulders; therefore his face was not far distant from hers. She closed her eyes, and, considering that she was not hurt, he construed this to be the granting of an opportunity to take a kiss, which favor he accepted. This recalled her to her surroundings, and she sat up, while he said a great deal to her in which the word love figured frequently, but not scientifically. Then there was a cluster of kisses, after which they arose, and Beatrice, leaning on his arm, they walked slowly onward. Coming to a large flat stone that formed a convenient seat, they sat down. The place was elevated, and they could see the bull quietly nibbling at the grass. The man, having been satisfied with the quantum of unscientific love he had quaffed, turned again to its consideration as a principle.

"Let me see," he said; "where were we?"

The girl showed the feminine nature by relegating the origin of love to the winds. Love itself was more interesting to her.

"Oh, Edgar," she said, "how noble it was of you to save me! You could easily have escaped by leaving me to my fate. Suppose the bull had gored you?"

She shuddered and clung to him. He took up his coattail and looked at the rents in it.

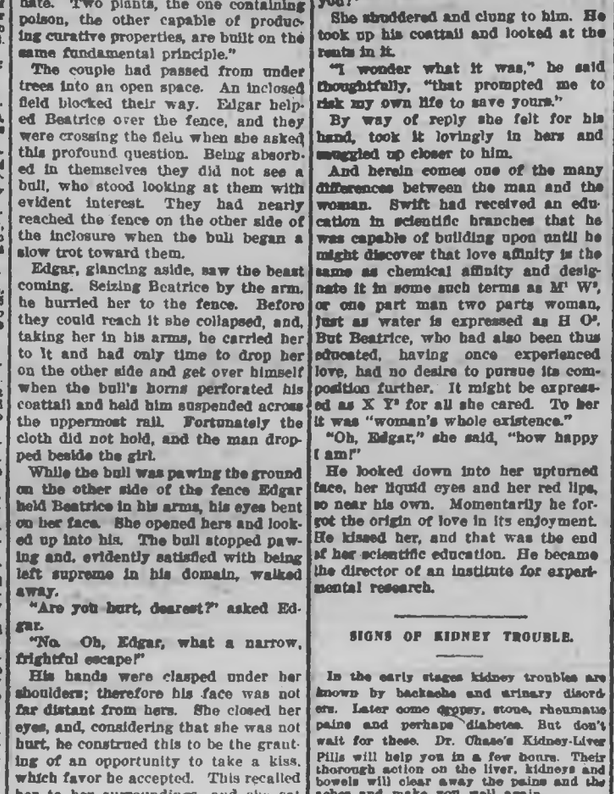
"I wonder what it was," he said thoughtfully, "that prompted me to risk my own life to save yours."

By way of reply she felt for his hand, took it lovingly in hers and snuggled up closer to him.

And herein comes one of the many differences between the man and the woman. Swift had received an education in scientific branches that he was capable of building upon until he might discover that love affinity is the same as chemical affinity and designate it in some such terms as $M^1 W^1$, or one part man two parts woman, just as water is expressed as $H O^2$. But Beatrice, who had also been thus educated, having once experienced love, had no desire to pursue its composition further. It might be expressed as $X Y^2$ for all she cared. To her it was "woman's whole existence."

"Oh, Edgar," she said, "how happy I am!"

He looked down into her upturned face, her liquid eyes and her red lips, so near his own. Momentarily he forgot the origin of love in its enjoyment. He kissed her, and that was the end of her scientific education. He became the director of an institute for experimental research.



SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone, rheumatic pains and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and the aches and make you well again.

EVERYDAY READING

There are two ways of passing our present time here; the one in line with the will of God; the other in opposition to the same. We all have known, to a more or less extent, the hardness and bitterness of living contrary to the will of God. Thanks be to God, through His infinite mercy and love, we can have the past of wrong-doing blotted out and henceforth do His will. It can be said to us as Jesus said to one when on earth, "Go and sin no more." Experience has taught me, that God's will or way is supremely best. No doubt many cannot see, or, rather will not believe, that the way of righteousness is really the satisfactory way. With some, it may be as it was with me, taking our own conception of the way instead of seeking to know of God. This will concern us. There are a great many things we cannot know or understand; but we can know God's will concerning us, if we seek to know it. In order to have the joy and realization of doing God's will there must come to us a change of mind. We must turn from our way and take God's way. We cannot serve two masters. Prove for ourselves the blessedness of doing God's will. Forego anything, that will hinder us from knowing the joy of doing His will. There is a secret connected with being the will of God. Blessed is the man that knows this secret.

GET READY FOR GARDEN

How to Plan Your Work and Work to a Plan.

EVERYBODY GROW EATABLES

First of Series of Timely Hints—Get Your Ground Ready Now, but Don't Be in Too Much of a Hurry to Put in the Seed.

(By S. C. JOHNSTON, Vegetable Specialist, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

At no time in many years has the necessity and importance of the home vegetable garden been so clearly shown as for this coming summer. France, our wonderful ally, has since the French Revolution been a nation of small farmers, her people of small means cultivating some available land to produce a portion of their own household foodstuffs and to increase the wealth of the nation; Great Britain, threatened with a shortage of foodstuffs, determined to cultivate all available land possible to offset this shortage and we in Canada bending every energy toward facilitating these great nations should do all in our individual power to do something in the hope of helping ourselves and assisting the commercial vegetable growers who are seriously handicapped by the shortage of labor in the production of vegetable foodstuffs. Every city, town, and village dweller has an opportunity to help this great work, in that there are hundreds of available plots now practically unproductive which could be made grow vegetables and thus add to the wealth of the country.

Vegetables should form an important portion of the daily food of the average human being, for they possess qualities which we are told are essential in the proper digestion of the heavy foods, such as meats. To help you do your part in your backyard this column will discuss some of the practical problems in connection with vegetable growing during the next few weeks.

All backyards cannot be prepared in one year to grow vegetables of an excellent quality. Some portion of the yard, however, may be devoted to this purpose, or, if it is convenient, there are usually many vacant lots which are not too far from one's place of abode which possibly could be devoted to the growing of vegetables.

Some Essentials.

First of all it is essential that the vegetable garden, no matter how small, be planted according to some plan or rule. No one attempts to build a house or to set out a perennial flower border without using some drawing or chart to go by. Why should the vegetable garden be treated differently? Haphazard planting will prove a failure, and in order to overcome this it should be remembered in laying out the garden that—

(1) Tall plants will be most effective if placed behind low ones, not intermingled with them.

(2) All plants closely allied should be grown together, not in the same row, but in rows adjoining one another.

(3) The fences may be decorated with vine crops which may be supported on the fences by means of strings or lattice work.

(4) All quickly maturing vegetables should be planted in a portion of the garden by themselves so that they may be harvested and the ground used for other crops later on.

The work of planning the garden to determine what vegetables and how much of each is to be grown will be influenced by one's individual tastes. One should grow an abundance of such crops as one consumes the most.

Secure Seed Now—But Plant Only When Soil is Ready.

The backyard gardener should decide very early which crops are to be grown and should purchase his seed as soon as possible. It must be remembered, however, that much of this seed may be wasted if it is planted too early in the season. The soil must be warm to receive the seeds, and amateur gardeners must have patience until it is certain that good growing weather is really here. It is possible in ordinary seasons to plant some vegetables in April, and yet many backyard vegetable enthusiasts will be well advised to wait until the middle of May before doing very much in the garden.

Asparagus — Palmetto, Conovers Colossal.
Beans—Davis White Wax, Golden Wax, Refugee.

Found in Man's Body.

Blade of a pocketknife.
Bone handle of the same knife.
Button from the victim's trousers.

The wound fully exposed the femural artery, but did not break it. The patient will recover.

Englishman Found Aniline.

It was in 1856 that an English chemist W. H. Parkin working in a London laboratory at the problem of producing aniline artificially, accidentally discovered aniline dye. There are now about two thousand aniline dyes known to commerce, practically all of them made in Germany.

Horton's Unusual Honor.

It is very rare for a British officer to receive the Order of St. George, with which the Tsar has decorated Commander Max Horton, who commanded the submarine which sank the German cruiser Pommern in the Baltic. One of the few other Englishmen who wear the Order is Lieutenant-Commander William Whittall, who, whilst engaged as a war correspondent during the Boxer riots, remained by Admiral Jellicoe and a Russian General when they were wounded, and got them to a place of safety. Lieutenant-Commander Whittall was decorated by General Stoessel.

Lived Long Enough To Report Results

British Headquarters in France, April 16.—These days are filled with thrilling incidents of individual exploits which are difficult to sort from the mass coming in from so wide a battle front. One of the most remarkable is that of a young airman, who, although shot in the eye and the leg in an air duel, succeeded in bringing down the opposing machine in his own lines, dragged himself from the aeroplane, made a verbal report on his mission, and died a few moments later.

Weak, Nervous, Anaemic School Children

PETERBOROUGH, Ont., March 12.—It is only necessary to watch the children coming out of school in order to learn what a large proportion of them are weak, anaemic and nervous. One indication of exhausted nerves is the large number who wear glasses.

The school age is a most trying time because of rapid growth and development both mentally and physically and the added strain of examinations and class rivalry.

Because of its gentle action and great blood forming qualities, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is admirably suited as a restorative for anaemic, nervous school children.

Mrs. M. E. Robson, 150 Dublin street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "When about the age of 14 or 15, my daughter was on the verge of a nervous breakdown. She had a very poor appetite, lost all her colour, and at times had a twitching of the nerves in her limbs. I secured some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and gave her a treatment, using five or six boxes. The results were splendid, entirely curing her of her nervous trouble and restoring her appetite. I find Dr. Chase's Nerve Food a splendid spring tonic, and best results to be found by taking some of the Kidney-Liver Pills at the same time."

Mrs. James Deane, 230 Dublin street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Three years ago I noticed that our children seemed to be suffering from bad nerves and poor appetites, and were inclined to be anaemic. Knowing the good of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I started to give them a treatment of this medicine. I found it built them right up, made them bright and cheery and restored their usual good health. I have also used the Nerve Food myself, and found it very beneficial for nerves and heart. In fact, I have found Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to be such a valuable medicine for general family use that I have recommended it to many of our friends and acquaintances."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

DID it ever occur to you that all teas are not "Just tea?" In reality, there is as much difference in teas as there is in silks.

There are many varieties of tea: Indian teas, Ceylon teas, Java teas, China teas, etc.—Indians and Ceylons being the choicest of all.

These teas are all just ordinary garden teas, while Red Rose Tea is a blend of teas selected from as many as sixteen different gardens, using largely Assam-Indian teas skilfully blended with Ceylons. The result is that rich strength and smooth flavor that has made Red Rose Tea so popular.

One level teaspoonful of Red Rose Tea goes as far as a heaping teaspoonful of ordinary tea—that proves the true quality and economy of Red Rose.

PASSING OF THE POSTER

Posters have gone, and the English public now buys its paper without an inkling of its contents. It was on a Friday night that the passing of the poster took place. Some of the papers referred to the event on their latest edition bills: so the Star and the Westminster Gazette, and the Evening News, which came out with "Poor Old Bill," accompanied by a picture. The suppression of posters comes as another discouragement to sensationalism of the large-lettered sort, but there will be no improvement on this line if newsboys are once more allowed to cry the news. It was on the Sunday night following the disappearance of the poster that the fall of Bagdad was officially given out, and it was not the fault of the newsboys if London did not know it before going to bed.—Monitor.

TRIES RECRUITING AMONG THE BRIDEGROOMS.

Cleveland, Ohio., April 16.—Since April 6, the date of the declaration of war against Germany, 589 men have been recruited in all branches of the service in Cleveland, and during the same period 598 marriage licenses have been issued here.

Two uniformed recruiting officers were placed in the Court House today, and sought recruits among the prospective bridegrooms.

GERMAN PRESS SEES RICH PRIZE IN MONEY HERE

AMSTERDAM, April 16. — The Koelnische Volkszeitung, after abusing President Wilson in the style which appears popular in Germany at present, says:

"We are entitled to a thumping war indemnity, and we do not care who pays it. Those States which have sacrificed immense sums will be unable to pay it. Therefore, America, which has earned thousands of millions through munitions and supplies, will have to unbutton its pockets. We need not force America itself to pay, but we hold so many pledges in hand that for the Entente it is most important to have America as a banker behind them."

On the other hand, the Frankfurter Zeitung, in a remarkably outspoken article, freely admits that the constant Pan-German sabre rattling has been to a large extent the cause of world-wide hostility toward Germany. The newspaper discusses a new pamphlet on "The Pan-German Movement in America," by Otto Baumgarten, which consists of a collection of articles on Pan-Germanism, and especially the chapter entitled "The Pan-German Threat to America" in which is reproduced the appeal made in July, 1915, by Baron Kurt von Strantz to "the 30,000,000 Germans in the United States to form with the Irish an independent State."

The Frankfurter Zeitung also cites violent tirades by various writers against all non-German peoples, the advocacy of frightfulness, the exaltation of hatred, and says:

"All this sorry rubbish, especially the crazy, ever recurring idea that Germany will seize parts of South America, serves nothing but to strengthen the hands of Germany's enemies in America. These are people who have harmed our cause abroad immeasurably, and they have made foreigners believe that their views are those of the German nation."

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone; and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

Railway Must Pay For Officials' Courtesy

By a decision of the New York State Court of Appeals a railroad will have to pay for a kind act that cost a life. In October, 1911, Nicholas J. Fagan boarded a train "stupidly intoxicated," it is alleged. At first the trainmen could not learn where he was going.

He finally handed the conductor a ticket to Carson, Va., a little town just south of Petersburg. At Carson the express train was not supposed to stop. But the conductor, employed by the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company, accepted the ticket. He and the porter assisted Fagan to a plank at the side of a woodpile, about 140 feet north of the station at Carson.

The following morning Fagan was found a little further up the track so terribly injured that he died later. A train had run over him. Mrs. Margaret Fagan, as adiministratix of his estate, brought suit in New York state under a Virginia statue permitting her to do so. After passing through several courts a decision was handed down by the court of appeals that the railroad had a right to eject Fagan as a trespasser, but having accepted him as a passenger it was charged with due care for him and was negligent in leaving him in the dark, endangered by his condition and his situation.

Best Man Has A Round Head

That Advice of Dr. Katherine Blackford—Look at His Nose and His Chin, Too, She Advises.

What? Look at your young man's business rating? Nonsense! Look at his head. Spend your time looking up his habits? More nonsense! Look at his nose. Worry about his bank account? Not at all. Worry about his chin, if you like, but never about his bank account, because if he has the right sort of chin the bank account will just naturally come, and if his nose is the right shape so is his family tree, and if he is a roundhead—well, if he is a roundhead, grab and wed him on the spot.

This advice to young women with a longing for matrimony is given by Dr. Katherine M. H. Blackford, of New York city, and she ought to know, because she has been going about with a tape measure and a notebook for years, measuring ears and noses and heads, and then checking up characters, Bradstreet reports and prison statistics.

TIP FOR HAND HOLDERS' SOCIETY.

She has got things to such a fine point that she can look at a man and tell exactly what he will do in any given circumstances. And she has a tip for the Hand Holders' society that ought to be worth fortunes. The horny-handed man isn't what poetry says he is. He may be noble and a pioneer and all that, but his heart is likely to be harder than the callous on his palm, and he can't be made to loosen up except with dynamite or a threat to jail.

Dr Blackford says the man with a soft hand is also likely to have a soft heart, and any girl knows what she can do to a soft heart. The only drawback is that the soft-hearted man is likely to be mushy and wants to spend his time in kissing when he should be hustling for the wherewithal to pay the landlord. Dr Blackford says science has shown that the space in front of the ears is occupied by the brains that control the soul, the intellect and the esthetic things of life, while the space behind the ears is filled with animal instinct.

HIS EARS IN THE MIDDLE

Working on this theory she explains that the perfect man is the one with ears in the middle—and that generally means a round head. The flat head means he probably will develop into a deacon and a leading citizen, but have a leaning toward cantankerousness, while if his head is long on top he is going to thirst for monkey dinners and the privilege of setting next to the smart set. And the man with the high head—that is, one whose dome slopes up from the eyebrows like a cocoanut—that's the man who writes "The snow that snows in the spring, let us sing," and maybe tries to interpret Greek emotions by means of Greek dances. He's ornamental, true, but instead of doing the feeding, he has to be fed.

Some Detroit women doctors were asked about the matter, but they backed away in haste and said they didn't know anything about it. So the chronic investigator who wanted someone to confirm the reports tried Dr. Leo. J. Dretzka at the Receiving hospital. Dr. Dretzka said he thought she was right.

So you can figure out for yourself just how hard and firm her rules are. If your Percy or George has the good points you can believe in the science; if he hasn't you can declare it all nonsense.—Detroit "News."

TEDDY'S SON TO BE AIRMAN.

MONTREAL, April 14. — Quentin Roosevelt, son of former President Roosevelt, has applied for permission to become attached to the Canadian air service for instructional purposes, and it has been granted him. If an American army is sent to one of the war fronts he will transfer to it, but if not he will serve with the Canadian air forces. He will go to Camp Borden, Ont., for his instruction.

This information was handed out today by Col. Mulloy, one of the organizers of the "win the war" convention, who said Col. Roosevelt had promised to try and attend the convention's banquet here on May 24.

San Francisco, Cal., April 14. — A special squadron of three Japanese cruisers, under command of Rear-Admiral Ichizem, Yamaji, has been directed by the Japanese Government to co-operate with the American Asiatic squadron, according to a special cable from Tokio, printed today by the Japanese-American News. The paper says the cruisers Iwate, Nisbin, and Tokiwa have been assigned to this duty.

City Inspectors Find Them in Lodging Houses.

TORONTO, April 14.—That large numbers of able-bodied young Americans, too proud to fight, are seeking a shelter in Canada is apparent from the reports of those whose duties lead them to the places of abode usually inhabited by immigrants.

One city official found in three lodging houses twenty-five young Americans, some of whom candidly admitted their repugnance to taking up arms, and had sought refuge in Canada from the recruiting officer. All of them it is alleged, were apparently qualified to perform military duty.

They were found in some of the cheaper lodging houses, where on account of temporary financial embarrassment, they found a haven pending the securing of employment.

RECIPE TO CLEAR A PIMPLY SKIN

Pimples, sores and boils usually result from toxins, poisons and impurities which are generated in the bowels and then absorbed into the blood through the very ducts which should absorb only nourishment to sustain the body.

It is the function of the kidneys to filter impurities from the blood and cast them out in the form of urine, but in many instances the bowels create more toxins and impurities than the kidneys can eliminate, then the blood uses the skin pores as the next best means of getting rid of these impurities which often break out all over the skin in the form of pimples.

The surest way to clear the skin of these eruptions says a noted authority, is to get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of hot water each morning before breakfast for one week. This will prevent the formation of toxins in the bowels. It also stimulates the kidneys to normal activity, thus coaxing them to filter the blood of impurities and clearing the skin of pimples.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent drink which usually makes pimples disappear; cleanses the blood and is excellent for the kidneys as well.

A HUMILIATING SPECTACLE.

On the editorial page of yesterday's Globe, there appeared a group picture of the members of the Imperial War Council, with Canada's "Hon." Robert Rogers occupying the most conspicuous place in the front row. As usual, when the Premier and the Minister of Public Works appear together, the former meekly plays in the picture the part of subordinate, in accordance with the well understood relationship established between them in actual life by Mr. Rogers himself. In the same row are Mr. Lloyd George, Mr. A. J. Balfour, General Smuts of South Africa, Premier Massey of New Zealand, Sir Robert Borden, and others who do credit to the places they occupy. Nothing could show more clearly than this picture does the wrong inflicted on this dominion when Sir Robert chose Mr. Rogers, first as a member of his Cabinet, and later as his fellow-member of the first Imperial War Council. This is an offence that will not be forgotten or forgiven by the Premier's fellow-Canadians.—The Globe.

Hairs Will Vanish After This Treatmen

(Toilet Helps)

You can keep your skin free from hair of fuzz by the occasional use of plain delatone and in using it you need have no fear of marring or injuring the skin. A thick paste is made by mixing some of the powdered delatone with water. Then spread on the hairs and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and all traces of hair have vanished. Be careful, however, to get real delatone.

IF RUSSIA BECOMES A REPUBLIC.

(New York Times.)

Should Russia become a republic, ours will no longer be "the great republic." Russia has 60,000,000 or 70,000,000 more population, and her all but 9,000,000 square miles give her room and verge for who knows how many millions more. And China, the last new republic but one, has, say, four times our population. And China has always been moved by the spirit of democracy. She has had twenty-six revolutions in her time, the last in 1911, the first in 1776 B. C.

"It is necessary that the country should not be left without an adequate force for home defence in case of emergency".
SIR EDWARD KEMP,
Minister of Militia and Defence.

CANADA

"I voice the feeling at the front when I appeal to Canadians to support the proposals to partially mobilize the active militia of Canada".
SIR ROBERT BORDEN, Premier.

Serve Canada at Home if You Cannot go Overseas

If circumstances have prevented you from serving in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, you can still play a man's part in winning the war by enlisting in the Canadian Defence Force.

To provide adequately for home defence, and release for the Front the Overseas units held here, men are still needed. The term of enlistment, training, clothing, equipment and subsistence are the same as for overseas service. Separation allowances for married men in addition to pay.

If you are between 18 and 45, physically fit, and keen to serve as best you can, enlist now in the

CANADIAN DEFENCE FORCE

For full particulars enquire at Armories of the Regiments listed below.

MEN STILL REQUIRED FOR OVERSEAS IN THE CANADIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCES.

More men are required for reinforcements at the Front. Those who desire to volunteer for Overseas service may enlist through one of the regiments ordered to mobilize for Home Defence.

GREAT BRITISH-FRENCH DRIVE CONTINUES

ALLIES' OFFENSIVE INCREASING IN VOLUME

FIVE KEY POINTS IN THE HINDENBURG LINE SOON TO FALL INTO ALLIES' HANDS

Lens, Lafere and St. Quentin Expected to Fall at Any Moment While Huns' Retention of Cambrai and Laon Much Longer Seems Impossible in View of the Fierceness of Great Franco-British Drive--Both British and French Have Made Further Gains, Pushing Closer to Their Objectives.

ITALIAN OFFENSIVE EXPECTED SHORTLY

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, April 17.—Field Marshal Haig to-day jammed his British forces a mile closer to Lecatelet and the main line of German communications between Cambrai and St. Quentin. "In the neighbourhood of Epesy, we captured Tombois Farm, and at night gained ground along the spur north-east of Epesy Station, taking a few prisoners," he reported to-day. All the way from Fayet, a scant two miles north of St. Quentin, to Epesy—eleven miles north—the British now are established within two miles of the St. Quentin-Cambrai high road. The road is really the artery giving life to the German forces at St. Quentin and Lafere. Once it is cut, the cities below must fall. The British now hold Fayet, Fresnoy-Le-Petit, Prontu, Le Verguier, Villeret, ground near Hargicourt, Ronssoy, and to-day, ground near Epesy. All are nearly equi-distant from this "Hindenburg line" of Cambrai-St. Quentin.

Five key points to the much vaunted "Hindenburg line" were struck at so savagely by the great Franco-British drive to-day that their continuation in the enemy's hands much longer seems impossible. Of the five, Lens, Lafere and St. Quentin may fall to the Allied onslaught at almost any hour. Cambrai and Laon are less closely enveloped, but the menace of the drive was none the less potent.

PARIS, April 17.—An official statement more than confirmed the most sanguine hopes of success in the joint offensive entertained here.

Paris had the great offensive brought forcefully home to her to-day when thousands of the eighteen-year-old boys of the city crowded the railway stations, leaving for active service. They were of the 1917 class.

(By William Philip Simms)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES AFIELD, April 17.—France's brilliant part in the great offensive stimulated the British forces to redoubled energy to-day. General Haig's forces continue their advance. Outposts and patrols pushed steadily forward to the East to-day. Two more field guns were captured in Hirondelle Wood. Meanwhile desperate work of destruction by the Germans continues in Lens, now fast doomed by the British encircling movement. To-day the Teutons dammed the Souchez River, backing up the water into Lens. Great explosions marked the destruction of mine shaft machinery, and British observers plainly able to see the enemy at work, declared there was reason to believe it was a part of the German plans of destruction at the last moment to divert the flood waters of the Souchez into the great underground galleries of France's richest coal mines. Lievin, a suburb of Lens, held by the British, was totally destroyed before the Germans were forced out. The great coal mine and coal works there had been wantonly smashed.

ROME, April 17.—The Italian artillery is active all along the Austrian front, and it is thought here there will be an early vigorous offensive.

GERMAN SUBMARINE OFF THE U. S. COAST

U-Boat Hovering Around Jersey Coast Fires Torpedo at United State Submarine Chaser Smith—Measures Taken to Hunt Down the Invaders

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

NEW YORK, April 17.—Official reports of an engagement between the U.S.S. Smith, submarine chaser, and an enemy submarine were received at Charlestown Navy Yard to-day from U.S.S. scout cruiser Chester as follows: "At 12.20 a.m. on April 17, apparently sighted enemy submarine. She fired a torpedo, missing U.S.S. Smith by thirty yards. Wake plainly seen crossing bow. Submarine disappeared."

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The Navy Department this afternoon confirmed the Charlestown Navy Yard report that an enemy submarine this morning fired a torpedo at the U.S.S. Smith. Necessary measures to hunt her have been taken by the U.S. Navy. Reports to the Boston Naval Station indicated that the submarine was hovering off the Jersey coast, midway between Atlantic City and Asbury Park, and only a short distance below New York City itself.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The immediate Government supervision of America's great meat packing industries is expected to result from the offer of the nation's packing kings to turn their plants over to the Government.

ONE OF THE GREATEST BATTLES OF THE WAR SAYS BERLIN TO-DAY

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, April 17.—A German official statement says one of the greatest battles of the mighty war, and, therefore, also in the world's history, is in progress on the river Aisne and in the Champagne. This morning fighting between Prunay and Auberive developed the battle line there by expanding from the river Ourc into the Champagne. "Our troops anticipate with entire confidence the coming heavy fighting." The losses of the enemy were very heavy. More than 2,000 French prisoners remained in our hands."

PETERBORO' BOY HOME AFTER MANY MONTHS' SERVICE

Corp. Harry Leahy Spent Nine Months in the Mediterranean and a Year in France Serving With the Canadian Army Medical Corps

HOME THROUGH ILLNESS

After nine months' service in the Mediterranean and a year in France with the Canadian Army Medical Corps, Corp. Harry Leahy, a well known Peterborough boy, has been invalided home suffering from the effects of gas gangrene. He reached the city yesterday and is spending a short furlough at his home, 520 Charlotte street, before leaving for Kingston to undergo further treatment at the Convalescent Home.

Corp. Leahy, who was a student in Medicine at Queens' University when war broke out, enlisted with a Queen's Hospital unit which left Canada early in 1915 and was sent to the Mediterranean for service in connection with the Dardanelles campaign. Corp. Leahy was in Egypt, at the Dardanelles and at Salonika. Afterwards he was sent to France, where he served for a year, being finally invalided from there on March 3rd. He became infected with gas gangrene in attending to a patient under his care, who was ill from that disease, and was ill in hospital for nearly two months. He has not yet recovered from the effects of the attack.

Corp. Leahy is a son of Mr. Wm. Leahy. His many friends will be glad to welcome him home.

WHY WE ASK YOUR AID

Already over one hundred sick and wounded Peterborough members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force have returned home from the battlefields of Flanders. Hundreds more of the men who helped to save Canada from the horrors of invasion by meeting the Hun in Europe will come back to Peterborough. The Great War Veterans hope to provide headquarters for those men so that they can gather with their battle-bonded comrades when the spirit moves them. Many of them will need a helping hand. The Great War Veterans hope to give them the aid they will need. But the club-rooms are intended to serve more than the social requirements of the returned men. They are to be the local headquarters for all men who fought for the cause of humanity, wherein practical means of helping the returned men will be devised and put to the test. The organizers of this movement feel that no one is better able to care for the returned soldiers than the returned soldiers themselves. We are and intend to remain clear of any entangling alliance with any political and other organization, our aim and object being to do all that lies in our power for the war-scarred man who needs a friend to help him on the way, a friend who knows and fully understands all he has suffered to keep Canada free.

Two More Peterboro' Soldiers Have Given Their Lives For Empire

Gunner A. G. Hann, C.F.A., Killed in Action, and Pte. Bert Aggis of the 93rd Battalion Dead From Shell Shock and Gas—Others Are Wounded—Staff of 57th C.D.F. Announced—Decoration For Major Davidson—To-day's General Military News.

KILLED IN ACTION

Gunner A. G. Hann, Canadian Field Artillery. 249 London Street.

DIED.

Pte. Bert Aggis, 93rd Battalion.

WOUNDED.

Lieut. H. C. Gillham, late 93rd Battalion.

Pte. Chas. W. Johnston, late 93rd Battalion, 282 McDonnel Street.

Gunner E. Fry, Canadian Field Artillery.

One Peterborough soldier is reported killed in action to-day, and another died from shell shock and gas, while the casualty lists also contain the names of two Peterborough men wounded, Lieut. H. C. Gillham, formerly of the 93rd, is also in the list of wounded.

GUNNER A. G. HANN.

After seeing service in France for over two years Gunner A. G. Hann, of Peterborough, is officially reported killed in action. His wife residing at 249 London street, has received the official message from Ottawa, the news having been broken to her by Rev. R. B. Grobb, of All Saints' Church. The telegram stated that Gunner Hann was killed on April 3rd. He enlisted in Peterborough in the second week of August, 1914, with the 24th Field Battery's first quota. He went overseas as a member of the 2nd Battery C.F.A., and served with that unit from February, 1915, until he met death on April 3, 1917.

LIEUT. H. C. GILLHAM.

Lieut. H. C. Gillham, who left Peterborough as a subaltern with the 93rd Peterborough Battalion, was one of the Canadian officers who fell wounded in the fighting at Vimy Ridge. Lieut. Gillham was for some time signalling officer of the 93rd, and later was a platoon commander in B Company of the same unit. He was secretary of the 93rd Battalion Hockey Club. Recently it was announced that Lieut. Gillham had been recommended for the Military Cross. He was serving with a second Division unit when wounded. His relatives live in Aurora, Ont.

PTE. CHAS. W. JOHNSTON.

Pte. Chas. W. Johnston, who in the autumn of 1915 enlisted in the 93rd Peterborough Battalian, is officially reported wounded. A message from Ottawa received at his home, 282 McDonnel street, this morning, stated that Pte. Johnston was admitted to No. 7 General Hospital, Etaples, on April 8th, wounded slightly in the jaw. He went overseas with the 93rd and was transferred in a draft to the 5th C.M.R.

GUNNER E. FRY.

Gunner E. Fry, who enlisted in Peterborough with the artillery quota for the first contingent and who has been in France for over two years, is officially reported wounded according to to-day's list. His next-of-kin resides in England.

PTE. BERT AGGIS.

News of the death of another member of the 93rd Battalion was received yesterday by Mrs. J. C. Schweir, Sherbrooke street, who received a message stating that Pte. Bert Aggis had died in England as a result of shell shock and gas poisoning. Pte. Aggis enlisted in Peterborough in the winter of 1915-16, and went overseas as a member of B Company. He was afterwards drafted to another Canadian battalion in France.

Pte. T. W. Hardman, who was officially reported died of wounds yesterday, is survived by a wife and by a four-month-old child, which he never saw, living at 563 Bethune street. Mrs. Hardman knew nothing of her husband's death until she read the report in The Examiner last evening, owing to the fact that he was single when he enlisted, and gave as his next-of-kin his sister, residing in England. As a result the official message telling of his death was cabled to England instead of being wired to his wife.

Staff for 57th Regiment.

Lt.-Col. Walker, of the 57th Regiment, C.D.F., announced a portion of his staff this morning. Several other appointments will be given out in the near future.

The list is as follows:

Officer in Command—Lt.-Col. D Walker.

Second in Command—Provisional Major J. J. Duffus.

Adjutant and Acting Paymaster—Capt. K. G. Lech.

A quartermaster and four subalterns are to be appointed.

Lt.-Col. Walker of the 57th Regiment, has received word that Major L. C. Davidson, now acting as a chaplain in France, has been awarded the Colonial Auxiliary Forces' Officers' Decoration, signifying that he has done twenty years' service in the Canadian Militia.

THE CHARGE OF THE FORTY-SIXTH

We read of the gallant deeds of old,
How our fathers fought and fell;
And the glorious stories all are told,
Some are reason to tell.

There is another chapter in the recent events,
That never reach the press;
And the silent men who face the music
Are passed among the rest.

They gathered a few Canadians
From the provinces of the West,
They marched their heroes to Major ——,
And there they stood the test.

French Capture Ten Thousand Huns

General Nivelle Strikes On a Front of 25 Miles From Soissons to Rheims Sweeping Across the Enemy's Trenches and Penetrating to a Depth of Two Miles.

FIGHTING WAS BITTER

LONDON, April 16.—French armies took up the the burden of the allied offensive in the west to-day. General Nivelle struck on a front of twenty-five miles from Soissons to Rheims, sweeping across the enemy's trenches, and in many places penetrating the hostile lines to a depth of two miles. More than ten thousand German prisoners have already been counted and caged.

Hindenburg was not unprepared. For ten days the thunder of French artillery has heralded the attack, and for the last four days the hurricane fire of the big guns has surpassed in violence all previous bombardments of the war. Along the whole front the German command had grouped what the Paris night report describes as "very important forces and numerous artillery."

Five Miles North of Rheims

But the French fire had done its work. The enemy's forward defences lay in wide-rolling furrows of lashed up mud, and scarcely a machine gun remained in place to check the charging battalions hurrying forward along both banks of the Aisne River. From beyond Soissons to Craonne the whole German system of first-line trenches were overrun. In the dip eastward to Juvincourt the success was as great, and south of Juvincourt the German second position was occupied. Turning south-eastward along the old French line, Nivelle's forces drove forward as far as the outskirts of Bermericourt and clear to the Aisne Canal at Loivre and Courcy, a little less than five miles north of Rheims.

The German defenders recovered quickly from the first shock and fought with fury. While the line sags between Craonne and Juvincourt, almost before the French had time to establish themselves Hindenburgs' supports flung forward in a counter-attack following it up again and again as they were thrown back by big-guns barrage and machine bullets.

A Thrilling Spectacle.

Observers with the French armies report the beginning of the offensive as thrilling in the extreme. The day broke under heavy clouds. The mass fire of the guns, which had never broken for ten days, rose steadily to a nerve-shattering pitch. Suddenly, all along the line, as though by a stop-watch, the continuous clangor ceased. The next minute Nivelle's soldiers, thousands and thousands, of them, mile after mile of them, were over the trenches and running into the open. Black patches of bursting German shells rained over them, but still they pressed on, stopping here and there until their grey-blue uniforms were part of the greyness of the day.

WE SHOULD HAVE THE REVENUE.

What Peterborough wants is revenue; money for necessary purposes. It seems that our civic financiers might lay hands on about $7,000 a year, which by all reasoning of right, belongs to the city. We have about 500 autos owned in Peterborough, and the revenue from their licenses amounts to approximately $7,000 a year. This goes in great bulk to the Provincial Government, whereas in justice it should come into the city's coffers.

It should be available to help keep our streets in repair. Our automobilists use our roads and do their share in wearing them out. Autos, like other vehicles, need good streets for the best results from their use. Some say, and some deny, that they wear street surfaces more rapidly than other wheeled vehicles. And why shouldn't they, if it happens to be the case? The auto owners pay $7,000 a year for the privilege of using the streets, and they pay it to an authority that has no authority or control over, or interest in, our streets.

$7,000 isn't a very large sum of money but it would go a long way in repairing and improving our streets, and a very long way if it were added to the amounts appropriated for purposes of street improvement. There are about three-quarters of a million dollars of the money of our citizens invested in autos and when $7,000 in license fees is added the auto owners ought to have it spent in improving the streets that they use. Otherwise the tax on autos is an injustice. Why should they be taxed any more than other vehicles used for similar purposes? Though they are said to be hard on the streets they are not more so, nor perhaps as much so, as narrow tired vehicles on certain kinds of road. We are to have an auto show here next week, and there should be another kind of auto show—a show for city autos to get some value, in the form of improved streets, for the licenses they pay.

DO WE REALIZE?

Do we realize that we in Canada are at war? We know it in one way. We know that the best of our population—the cream of our manhood—is fighting fiercely and winningly, laying down life in the performance of heroic deeds whose fame rings round the world; and win the applause of the greatest military authorities. We know it in our minds, for we read it in the papers, and seem to drop the subject with our papers as a tale that is told.

While Canadians are winning battles and glory, taking towns, death and wounds take terrible toll; but not from Vancouver to Halifax, not in Toronto nor Peterborough, is hung out a single flag in token of rejoicing or appreciation.

If United States soldiers had done half that Canada has done in the past few days, the whole country from Texas to Maine, from Florida to Alaska, would have been ablaze with the Stars and Stripes: the population would have gone mad with joy, delirious with rejoicing.

Do we realize that we are at war? Yes, we realise it in a thousand homes where anxious mothers dread the ring of the door bell, and the sight of the telegraph messenger, and the fatal yellow envelope. To-day there are thousands of homes darkened with sorrow; Rachaels weeping for their children, uncomforted, because they are not. Yet outside these homes the current of frivolous and pleasure-seeking life flows on, as if every moment were not a tragedy. We seem to be indifferent to the fall and sufferings of the gallant Canadian lads who are hourly laying down their lives for us. We drink tea, chatter gossip, play bridge and pursue vanity in its frothiest forms while our neighbours — sealed to us as relatives by the blood of the dear ones shed—are in sackcloth and ashes.

Do we realize the situation? We read in the despatches the "vivid stories of splendid work down by Canadians, who "suffered terribly from exposure and lack of water." That touches our minds, but does it touch our hearts to the quick as it should do? Many of us straightway forget all about it and turn carelessly with a shrug of patronizing pity to our daily round. Thousands have never intermitted a single pleasure since this terrible, heart-breaking, home-emptying and life-wasting war began. We work and play; we plan and purpose; we dance; we sing; and don't let a few spent lives of our fellow Canadians, a few heart-breaks of our fellow hours, cast as much as a pebble in the smooth flowing stream of our daily life. Even to-night we are holding a great public gathering. What for? To help win the war? To hearten the fighters? To comfort the wounded? No; for the purpose of reaping the paltry harvest of party gain.

In a thousand ways we show indifference to the perpetual performance of the tragedy of the war. Do we realise what it all means? If we do we have a mighty queer way of showing it. Statesmen and laymen, men of business and women of leisure and pleasure, let the encircling gloom of the war overpass them like a summer cloud. One does not expect everlasting long faces, but one should expect seemly sympathy, some evidence of realisation beyond the passing thrill of thoughtless childhood; some realization of the stern work others are doing, and the stern work we should be doing if we do our duty in the inexpressibly tremendous crisis in which we are either heroic or heartless factors.

MORE FOOD AND STILL MORE FOOD.

The call to duty, for more military strength, has taken changing forms. First it was men and munitions. Now, the loudest call, the most insistent call, the most urgent call, is for more food. We are fairly well supplied with men and munitions, but we need more food to keep the fighting men fit and the munition makers well fed, so that both the fighting forces of our soldiers may be maintained and the working strength of munition workers may be well fed. And we need more food production to supply the great shortage caused in part by bad crops and by so many—millions of—food producers being drafted from the farms to the fighting lines.

It is a safe estimate that forty million men are under arms, and in addition at least twenty million men and women are busy producing munitions or clothing and other supplies. The majority or a very large proportion of these sixty million men were engaged in food production. This fact and the fact that large areas of farm lands are under war conditions, plowed with shells instead of the peaceful plough, creates a remarkable shortage of food. The want of food is acute. Ten nations are on rations and six are in distressing need of food. Then the submarine menace is a seriously disturbing but not a deciding factor in the food situation. Its destruction of ocean tonnage prevents the adequate movement of the food supplies actually available.

Canada is one of the countries expected to produce a surplus to supply the unprecedented shortage. We must help feed our soldiers and those of our allies. We are well situated to help. We are closer to the central part of the Empire and the scene of conflict than Australia and New Zealand; we have an immense area of tillable and fertile land; but in spite of that our present production falls far short of what should and can be done. Last year we did not do our full best in food production. The acreage of wheat, oats, barley and potatoes was 865,000 acres fewer in 1916 than in 1915. And between 1914 and 1916 the yield of potatoes fell from 28 million bushels to 7 1-2 million bushels.

This falling off is not the fault of the farmers. They have done their best in the face of labour shortage and unfavourable weather conditions.

We must help the farmers to the fullest. We must cooperate with the Ontario Department of Agriculture that is making great efforts to supply or partially supply the extra labour needed if we are to have increased production. It is not an ignoble thing to fight by working on the farm. Thousands of soft young men from shop and college have joined the ranks and are wielding pick and shovel digging trenches, harder work and longer hours than are put in on the farm. We must enlist every able-bodied man, and boy and elderly man, and stout young men and even young women, to help fight the home battle of production, as absolutely necessary to winning this war as fighting in the trenches. Manning the plow and the reaper is as much help to victory as manning the big and little guns. The tractor plow is as essential as the "tank." An extra bushel of wheat can be of as effective help in winning the war as a bushel of bullets.

And we city people can help out the farmer. No matter how much or how little surplus he produces, every pound of food we produce in our home gardens and vacant lots will leave so much of the farmers' surplus to be exported to the Mother Country to help feed and keep fit the forces fighting either in the factory or the battle field. The weather is unpromising and uninviting, and that is one reason why we should plant the more. Big planting with an indifferent season will yield as much as scant planting with greater growth and better yield.

DELAY MEANS DISASTER.

It is a fair argument of the World that if military service is to be voluntary, taxation should be placed on the same basis—a fair argument, and likely to serve its purpose of stimulating thought. The Kansas City Times carries the argument further. It suggests that we might call for volunteers to "build our bridges and railroads, operate our mines and industrial plants, and sail our merchant ships." Men should not be permitted to believe that an all-powerful government proposes to force them into military service. The Government is of the people, by the people. Most of the people have learned, all must be taught, that national defence is a common responsibility in a democracy, and that in times of peril all must serve the State, which is the people, in the fields in which they can render the best service. That is the whole meaning of universal service, of the "conscription" that has caused such an outcry. The obligation to serve has always been recognized. The training has been neglected. Therefore we must waste no time now, when our danger is so great, in starting the training.

A few men on the Military Committee of the House of Representatives, some of whom have consistently opposed every defence measure propose to stand out against the formation of our new army on the principle of universal obligation. Seven men on that committee are dubious about that plan. Only nine members strongly favour it. There may, therefore, be an adverse report which will tend to delay the action, unless Congress hears the voice of the people. Delay cannot defeat the enactment of the bill, but it is perilous. It is to be hoped that the President will not countenance any compromise. We are already employing the volunteer system to increase the regular army to war strength and recruit the National Guard. It is not likely that even the 500,000 men needed for this purpose can be quickly obtained by the old method. It is certain that the first increment of the new army, 500,000 men more, cannot be assembled except by the adoption of universal service. The responsibility for failure will rest with all the people. We have learned by sad experience the disaster that always results from the employment of untrained troops in battle, and our troops cannot be trained unless they are assembled without delay. A leisurely pace will not suffice, and futile deliberations should be discountenanced.—New York Times.

"The mere suggestion that any parts of Africa should be returned to Germany is preposterous. I shudder to think what would happen to the native population if any part were returned. WAR MARRIAGES HEAVILY SCORED BY BILLY SUNDAY

NEW YORK, April 14.—War marriages were roundly scroed by Billy Sunday.

"Men are running for the marriage license bureau instead of getting the spirit of God and patriotism," he said in a prayer, asking Divine assistance in recruiting. "Have we lost the spirit of '76? Have we become a lot of weasles and parasites at the tree of life? I guess Germany and the devil will be tickled to death if they all get married."

"Cleaning the Temple" was the subject of Sunday's sermon at the afternoon session. He spoke of the need of purifying the church and attacked card playing, dancing, novel reading and theatre-going as likely to clog Christians in their efforts to lead a godly life.

Urging the people to go home and burn their playing cards, throw away their beer bottles and begin reading their Bibles, Sunday jumped into a chair and, placing one foot on the desk he uses as a pulpit, shouted:

"All of you who are willing to do whatever you can for Christ, stand up! I want to look at you."

More than half the audience rose.

Another Challenge.

"Those of you who would rather see New York go to hell than to heaven can remain seated," he continued, and several others rose from their seats.

"All the Germans in the trenches would probably shout for you if they were to hear that there were only a few enlisted here," he added.

"I understand," continued Sunday, that there are more foreign-born people in New York City than in any other metropolis in the world.

"Many of you, many of your ancestors, came to this country from foreign shores. This is the chosen land of your adoption. Just as it is the duty of Christians to forget their little denominational differences when they are making a common fight against the devil, so it is the duty of a soldier, when he enlists, to forget that he is a Republican or a Democrat. He is then only an American.

"Now the flag has been unfurled. We are at war with a powerful enemy. The country that gave you your freedom, your clothes, your bread, may need you! Surely you will not fail to respond!

"It is a shame and a blistering disgrace when there are twice as many applications for marriage licenses in New York and Brooklyn as there are applications to join the colours."

American Censorship Question Settled by President Wilson.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The American censorship question was settled when President Wilson created by Executive order a Committee on Public Information to combine the executions of censorship and publicity, and named George Creel, a magazine writer and former newspaperman, as Executive Chairman of the committee. The other members of the committee are the Secretaries of State, War and the Navy, who are authorized to delegate assistants to aid in carrying out the active work of the committee.

WE SHOULD HAVE THE REVENUE.

What Peterborough wants is revenue; money for necessary purposes. It seems that our civic financiers might lay hands on about $7,000 a year, which by all reasoning of right, belongs to the city. We have about 500 autos owned in Peterborough, and the revenue from their licenses amounts to approximately $7,000 a year. This goes in great bulk to the Provincial Government, whereas in justice it should come into the city's coffers.

It should be available to help keep our streets in repair. Our automobilists use our roads and do their share in wearing them out. Autos, like other vehicles, need good streets for the best results from their use. Some say, and some deny, that they wear street surfaces more rapidly than other wheeled vehicles. And why shouldn't they, if it happens to be the case? The auto owners pay $7,000 a year for the privilege of using the streets, and they pay it to an authority that has no authority or control over, or interest in, our streets.

$7,000 isn't a very large sum of money but it would go a long way in repairing and improving our streets, and a very long way if it were added to the amounts appropriated for purposes of street improvement. There are about three-quarters of a million dollars of the money of our citizens invested in autos and when $7,000 in license fees is added the auto owners ought to have it spent in improving the streets that they use. Otherwise the tax on autos is an injustice. Why should they be taxed any more than other vehicles used for similar purposes? Though they are said to be hard on the streets they are not more so, nor perhaps as much so, as narrow tired vehicles on certain kinds of road. We are to have an auto show here next week, and there should be another kind of auto show—a show for city autos to get some value, in the form of improved streets, for the licenses they pay.

DO WE REALIZE?

Do we realize that we in Canada are at war? We know it in one way. We know that the best of our population—the cream of our manhood—is fighting fiercely and winningly, laying down life in the performance of heroic deeds whose fame rings round the world; and win the applause of the greatest military authorities. We know it in our minds, for we read it in the papers, and seem to drop the subject with our papers as a tale that is told.

While Canadians are winning battles and glory, taking towns, death and wounds take terrible toll; but not from Vancouver to Halifax, not in Toronto nor Peterborough, is hung out a single flag in token of rejoicing or appreciation.

If United States soldiers had done half that Canada has done in the past few days, the whole country from Texas to Maine, from Florida to Alaska, would have been ablaze with the Stars and Stripes: the population would have gone mad with joy, delirious with rejoicing.

Do we realize that we are at war? Yes, we realise it in a thousand homes where anxious mothers dread the ring of the door bell, and the sight of the telegraph messenger, and the fatal yellow envelope. To-day there are thousands of homes darkened with sorrow; Rachaels weeping for their children, uncomforted, because they are not. Yet outside these homes the current of frivolous and pleasure-seeking life flows on, as if every moment were not a tragedy. We seem to be indifferent to the fall and sufferings of the gallant Canadian lads who are hourly laying down their lives for us. We drink tea, chatter gossip, play bridge and pursue vanity in its frothiest forms while our neighbours — sealed to us as relatives by the blood of the dear ones shed—are in sackcloth and ashes.

Do we realise the situation?. We read in the despatches the "vivid stories of splendid work down by Canadians, who "suffered terribly from exposure and lack of water." That touches our minds, but does it touch our hearts to the quick as it should do? Many of us straightway forget all about it and turn carelessly with a shrug of patronizing pity to our daily round. Thousands have never intermitted a single pleasure since this terrible, heart-breaking, home-emptying and life-wasting war began. We work and play; we plan and purpose; we dance; we sing; and don't let a few spent lives of our fellow Canadians, a few heart-breaks of our neighbours, cast as much as a pebble in the smooth flowing stream of our daily life. Even to-night we are holding a great public gathering. What for? To help win the war? To hearten the fighters? To comfort the wounded? No; for the purpose of reaping the paltry harvest of party gain.

In a thousand ways we show indifference to the perpetual performance of the tragedy of the war. Do we realize what it all means? If we do we have a mighty queer way of showing it. Statesmen and laymen, men of business and women of leisure and pleasure, let the encircling gloom of the war overpass them like a summer cloud. One does not expect everlasting long faces, but one should expect seemly sympathy, some evidence of realisation beyond the passing thrill of thoughtless childhood; some realisation of the stern work others are doing, and the stern work we should be doing if we do our duty in the inexpressibly tremendous crisis in which we are either heroic or heartless factors.

MORE FOOD AND STILL MORE FOOD.

The call to duty, for more military strength, has taken changing forms. First it was men and munitions. Now, the loudest call, the most insistent call, the most urgent call, is for more food. We are fairly well supplied with men and munitions, but we need more food to keep the fighting men fit and the munition makers well fed, so that both the fighting forces of our soldiers may be maintained and the working strength of munition workers may be well fed. And we need more food production to supply the great shortage caused in part by bad crops and by so many—millions of—food producers being drafted from the farms to the fighting lines.

It is a safe estimate that forty million men are under arms, and in addition at least twenty million men and women are busy producing munitions or clothing and other supplies. The majority or a very large proportion of these sixty million men were engaged in food production. This fact and the fact that large areas of farm lands are under war conditions, plowed with shells instead of the peaceful plough, creates a remarkable shortage of food. The want of food is acute. Ten nations are on rations and six are in distressing need of food. Then the submarine menace is a seriously disturbing but not a deciding factor in the food situation. Its destruction of ocean tonnage prevents the adequate movement of the food supplies actually available.

Canada is one of the countries expected to produce a surplus to supply the unprecedented shortage. We must help feed our soldiers and those of our allies. We are well situated to help. We are closer to the central part of the Empire and the scene of conflict than Australia and New Zealand; we have an immense area of tillable and fertile land; but in spite of that our present production falls far short of what should and can be done. Last year we did not do our full best in food production. The acreage of wheat, oats, barley and potatoes was 865,000 acres fewer in 1916 than in 1915. And between 1914 and 1916 the yield of potatoes fell from 28 million bushels to 7 1-2 million bushels.

This falling off is not the fault of the farmers. They have done their best in the face of labour shortage and unfavourable weather conditions.

We must help the farmers to the fullest. We must cooperate with the Ontario Department of Agriculture that is making great efforts to supply or partially supply the extra labour needed if we are to have increased production. It is not an ignoble thing to fight by working on the farm. Thousands of soft young men from shop and college have joined the ranks and are wielding pick and shovel digging trenches, harder work and longer hours than are put in on the farm. We must enlist every able-bodied man, and boy and elderly man, and stout young men and even young women, to help fight the home battle of production, as absolutely necessary to winning this war as fighting in the trenches. Manning the plow and the reaper is as much help to victory as manning the big and little guns. The tractor plow is as essential as the "tank." An extra bushel of wheat can be of as effective help in winning the war as a bushel of bullets.

And we city people can help out the farmer. No matter how much or how little surplus he produces, every pound of food we produce in our home gardens and vacant lots will leave so much of the farmers' surplus to be exported to the Mother Country to help feed and keep fit the forces fighting either in the factory or the battle field. The weather is unpromising and uninviting, and that is one reason why we should plant the more. Big planting with an indifferent season will yield as much as scant planting with greater growth and better yield.

DELAY MEANS DISASTER.

It is a fair argument of the World that if military service is to be voluntary, taxation should be placed on the same basis—a fair argument, and likely to serve its purpose of stimulating thought. The Kansas City Times carries the argument further. It suggests that we might call for volunteers to "build our bridges and railroads, operate our mines and industrial plants, and sail our merchant ships." Men should not be permitted to believe that an all-powerful government proposes to force them into military service. The Government is of the people, by the people. Most of the people have learned, all must be taught, that national defence is a common responsibility in a democracy, and that in times of peril all must serve the State, which is the people, in the fields in which they can render the best service. That is the whole meaning of universal service, of the "conscription" that has caused such an outcry. The obligation to serve has always been recognized. The training has been neglected. Therefore we must waste no time now, when our danger is so great, in starting the training.

A few men on the Military Committee of the House of Representatives, some of whom have consistently opposed every defence measure propose to stand out against the formation of our new army on the principle of universal obligation. Seven men on that committee are dubious about that plan. Only nine members strongly favour it. There may, therefore, be an adverse report which will tend to delay the action, unless Congress hears the voice of the people. Delay cannot defeat the enactment of the bill, but it is perilous. It is to be hoped that the President will not countenance any compromise. We are already employing the volunteer system to increase the regular army to war strength and recruit the National Guard. It is not likely that even the 500,000 men needed for this purpose can be quickly obtained by the old method. It is certain that the first increment of the new army, 500,000 men more, cannot be assembled except by the adoption of universal service. The responsibility for failure will rest with all the people. We have learned by sad experience the disaster that always results from the employment of untrained troops in battle, and our troops cannot be trained unless they are assembled without delay. A leisurely pace will not suffice, and futile deliberations should be discountenanced.—New York Times.

WAR MARRIAGES HEAVILY SCORED BY BILLY SUNDAY

NEW YORK, April 14.—War marriages were roundly scored by Billy Sunday.

"Men are running for the marriage license bureau instead of getting the spirit of God and patriotism," he said in a prayer, asking Divine assistance in recruiting. "Have we lost the spirit of '76? Have we become a lot of weasles and parasites at the tree of life? I guess Germany and the devil will be tickled to death if they all get married."

"Cleaning the Temple" was the subject of Sunday's sermon at the afternoon session. He spoke of the need of purifying the church and attacked card playing, dancing, novel reading and theatre-going as likely to clog Christians in their efforts to lead a godly life.

Urging the people to go home and burn their playing cards, throw away their beer bottles and begin reading their Bibles, Sunday jumped into a chair and, placing one foot on the desk he uses as a pulpit, shouted:

"All of you who are willing to do whatever you can for Christ, stand up! I want to look at you."

More than half the audience rose.

Another Challenge.

"Those of you who would rather see New York go to hell than to heaven can remain seated," he continued, and several others rose from their seats.

"All the Germans in the trenches would probably shout for you if they were to hear that there were only a few enlisted here," he added.

"I understand," continued Sunday, that there are more foreign-born people in New York City than in any other metropolis in the world.

"Many of you, many of your ancestors, came to this country from foreign shores. This is the chosen land of your adoption. Just as it is the duty of Christians to forget their little denominational differences when they are making a common fight against the devil, so it is the duty of a soldier, when he enlists, to forget that he is a Republican or a Democrat. He is then only an American.

"Now the flag has been unfurled. We are at war with a powerful enemy. The country that gave you your freedom, your clothes, your bread, may need you! Surely you will not fail to respond!

"It is a shame and a blistering disgrace when there are twice as many applications for marriage licenses in New York and Brooklyn as there are applications to join the colours."

American Censorship Question Settled by President Wilson.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The American censorship question was settled when President Wilson created by Executive order a Committee on Public Information to combine the two functions of censorship and publicity, and named George Creel, a magazine writer and former newspaperman, as Executive Chairman of the committee. The other members of the committee are the Secretaries of State, War and the Navy, who are authorized to designate assistants to aid in carrying out the active work of the committee.

ANNUAL MEETING OF BELGIAN RELIEF FUND

Financial Report Showed that the Receipts were $11,851.23 and that $10,854.33 had been Paid out—Old Officers Re-elected—To Continue Work

The annual general meeting of the Belgian Relief Fund was held in the office of the Patriotic Fund on the afternoon of April 16th. Mr. Robert Harstone, President, in the chair.

It was moved by Mr. Harstone, and seconded by Mayor Duffus, that the President's report be received and adopted.—Carried.

Mayor Duffus apologized for it being necessary for him to retire from the meeting, owing to urgent civic business.

The report of the Treasurer was read by Mr. V. Eastwood, showing:

Total amount received to date $11,851.23
Paid out 10,854.33

Balance on hand $996.90

It was moved by Mr. Eastwood, and seconded by Mr. Peever, that the report be received and adopted. Carried.

The report of the supervisor of collectors, Mrs. W. R. Morris, was read by Miss Archer, and on motion of Miss Archer and Mr. Pennefather the report was received and adopted.—Carried.

Mr. Peever moved, seconded by Mr. Eastwood, that the thanks of the Committee be extended to the lady collectors for the work undertaken and so faithfully carried out. —Carried.

It was suggested by Mr. Eastwood that a decision to continue this work be left to a more representative meeting. The President read a letter from the Secretary of the Central Committee in regard to the organization for distribution of relief in Belgium. Mr. Kerr was of the opion that the work should be continued.

Mr. Pennefather said if money was needed it should be gone after.

Mr. Peever suggested that present organization come before a larger meeting with ways and means of continuing the work.

Moved by Mr. Pennefather and seconded by Mr. Edgar, that the present officers continue in office for the coming year. This motion was put by Mr. Pennefather and carried under protest from the present officers.

A lengthy discussion then followed as to the proper means and whose duty it was to keep our subscribers' ledger posted to date. This discussion lasted until it became necessary to adjourn.

It was moved by Mr. Logie, and seconded by Mr. Edgar, that the meeting adjourn and to re-assemble at a call from the President.—Carried.

The president's report was as follows.

ORGANIZATION.

In presenting the annual report of the Fund, I shall endeavour to be as brief as possible and will merely mention in passing the outstanding features.

The organization as you are aware has its origin in a meeting of the citizens called by the Mayor in the City Council Chamber on the 31st of January, A.D., 1916, to consider ways and means to render assistance to the starving and destitute people of Belgium—at this meeting Miss Peck, President of the Peterborough Progressive Club and the ladies of the auxiliary were present.

It was pointed out to the meeting that the Auxiliary had been contributing from time to time to the Relief of the Belgians, but it was now felt that they could not meet the constant and growing demands under the present organization. It was therefore decided to an organization of the men of the city be formed to canvass and collect for the fund.

Mr. Dan O'Connell who was present at the meeting assisted in forming the present organization.

The necessary officers were appointed and Committees were formed.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee held in the T.A.S. Rooms on the 9th February, 1916, the ladies kindly undertook the collection of the subscription under the leadership of Mrs. Morris.

THE CANVASS.

The canvass of the City by the captains and their teams occurred on the 22rd, 24th, and 25th February, 1916. The result of the three days canvass was very gratifying, the amount subscribed by the citizens reached well beyond our objective of $10,000—the sum subscribed being $1.,768.35. The City Council responded to the call for help, in a most hearty manner with a subscription of $3000.00. We were favoured with a splendid subscription of $300.00 from the Knights of Columbus in addition to this we received a handsome subscription of $80 from the Red Cross. This made a total subscription to the fund of $12,946.35.

The number of individual subscribers is over 1,950—in addition these, we were generously supported by the various manufacturing concerns and business interests throughout the city.

COLLECTION OF THE FUND

The amount of the pledge cards for collection by the ladies as entered in the Treasurer's book represents the sum of $5383.80—the unpaid balance as represented also in the Treasurer's collection book amount to $880.20 as at April 12th. There have been some payments since together with corrections in amounts pledged which will reduce this unpaid balance.

The number of individual pledges still unpaid in whole or part represent approximately 195 names.

DISTRIBUTION OF MONEY

Your Committee forwarded cheque to Central Com., Montreal, $1000.00.

June . .—Purchased from Campbell Flour Mills, 500 sacks flour representing $1425.00.

May 29.—Peterborough Cereal Co., 598 sacks of flour representing $1689.35.

Jan 12.—Cheque to Central Committee Montreal, $3600.00.

Showing the total amount paid out, $10,854.53.

In conclusion, I wish to emphasize the important duties performed by the ladies in the collection of the amounts pledged on the cards. They devoted a portion of their time each month during the past year to this work—collections have been well met, with a few exceptions, and the success of the fund is due in a large measure to the thorough manner in which the ladies carried out their duties.

Are we to continue the good work? I feel confident the answer will be in the affirmative.

The citizens of Peterborough have done nobly in the past two and a half years in the stress and strain of this world war. May we continue to do our part until victory is assured and peace and harmony shall prevail.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

R. HARSTONE,
President.

MAY BUY A TRACTOR FOR EACH COUNTY

TORONTO, April 17.—Sir William Hearst, Premier and Minister of Agriculture, yesterday authorized Mr. C. F. Bailey of the department to send a night telegram to the district representatives of old Ontario asking their advice as to the advisability of purchasing a farm tractor for each county, and the necessary equipment, to be put at the disposal of the farmers to assist in greater production. A farm tractor costs about $1,000 and to provide one in every county in old Ontario would involve an expenditure of something like $35,000. A farm tractor will plough three or four furrows at a time, and can be used at night as well as day. It will be a demonstration business and urgency proposition combined.

Plans have not so far been definitely settled upon as the procedure, but should the views of the district representatives favour the proposal, it is not unlikely the tractors will be rented to farmers or some other arrangement adopted.

ENTIRE TOWN OFFERS SERVICES FOR WAR.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., April 16.—The entire population of Shannon, Wyo., thirty in all, to-day offered its services to Governor Frank L. Houx for war. The women and the girls volunteered for Red Cross work.

Correspondence Upon The Temperance Situation

The following correspondence is published, as intimated to the Examiner, at the suggestion of the City Temperance League and consented to by Mr. Burnham, M.P.:

Peterborough, April 14th, 1917.

To The Peterborough Temperance Association:

Dear Mr. Cowan,— In view of the fact that the whole "difficulty," if such it could be called, developing at the temperance meeting in the Public Library on Tuesday evening, centred around the action of the Ontario Government and the Federal Government with regard to temperance or prohibition measures, I, in my own behalf, solely, would be very glad to have some one, on behalf of your organization—say Rev. Mr. Peever or yourself — ask Hon. W. D. McPherson, when here on Tuesday, why the Ontario Government did not give Ontario bone-dry or absolute prohibition. I have written Sir Wm. Hearst that this question may be asked Mr. McPherson and to prepare for it. It is only in such a way as this, in my opinion, that matters can be brought to a head.

If you consent let us know and there will be no difficulty about it.

Yours,
(Signed) J. H. BURNHAM.

County of Peterborough Temperance Association.

Peterborough, April 16, 1917.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P.,
Corner Water and Brock Streets:

Dear Mr. Burnham.—Your letter of the 14th inst., has been carefully noted and your interest in th ematter of temperance reform, as indicated therein, is appreciated. After thinking your suggestion over, however, and consulting with members of the executive of the City Temperance Association I would advise you that we hardly think it necessary to ask Hon. Mr. McPherson the question you suggest, although we would note with interest any reply he might make to it should you ask him the question yourself. There are two main reasons why we do not think it necessary to raise this point.

First.—While there is strong legal opinion in support of the view that the provinces have power to pass legislation guaranteing absolute prohibition within their borders, there is also very learned legal opinion which claims that the provinces have not got that right. Were the provinces to attempt therefore, to enforce such legislation it would almost inevitably result in such legislation being thrown into the courts and much confusion results.

Second—The conditions under which "bone-dry" legislation can be secured under provincial enactment are not such that the temperance forces care to advocate them, at least not until other methods have been tried and failed. It may interest you to know that Mr. Harevson, representing the hotelkeepers' interest, suggested to the provincial temperance forces that it would be possible to obtain "bone-dry" legislation if they would ask for it, but they declined to do so under the conditions involved because they felt they knew what his object was in suggesting it.

While a province has been given power by the Dominion Government to enact "bone-dry" legislation it can only be enforced by interfering with the rights of private citizens, who under this legislation, would be prevented from keeping spirituous liquors in their homes. Hundreds, if not thousands, of people who are in favour of the prevention of the manufacture and importation of liquor would not favour such a provision as mentioned. To attempt to enforce it would arouse strong opposition and might bring about a re-action that would injure the cause of temperance. It is not until the provincial government passes such legislation that the dominion government's enactment becomes operative and prevents the importation into the province. Thus, in order to take advantage of the dominion legislation, the temperance forces would be forced to assume a position, which under the conditions stated, they do not care to be forced into.

What the Temperance People Desire.

At present it is an offence in the "dry" provinces for one citizen of a province to traffic in spirituous liquor with another citizen of the same province. What the temperance people desire is to have this same form of legislation extended by the Dominion government so that it will become an offence for the citizens of one province to traffic in liquor with citizens of another province or with the citizens of a foreign country. (Of course they desire also that the manufacture of liquor in Canada shall be prevented.) This form of legislation as it affects inter-state trade has been granted recently by the United States Congress. It is now a crime in the United States for any person in a wet state to ship liquor to a person in a dry state. Surely, in the free of world conditions and the national problems the allies are being called upon to face and solve the appeal of the temperance forces to the Dominion Government on this question is a reasonable one and one that should be granted in the best interests of the country and of the Empire at large.

What we would like to see you do is forget all about the powers of the provincial government and give the proposed measure your hearty support in the Dominion sphere of legislation. We will not fail in the meantime, to bring all possible pressure to bear on the Provincial government for such measures as we may feel are there required, and will do so with all the more confidence because we heartily appreciate the splendid stand taken by Premier Hearst last year in the enactment of the Provincial prohibitory law. We appreciate your expressed willingness to support a national plebiscite on this question and would still more appreciate your stand if you can see your way clear to support the desired legislation without its being found necessary to submit it to the people whose verdict on it, under existing conditions in Canada, no one can doubt.

Sincerely yours
(Signed) H. B. COWAN,
President.

GERMAN PLOT TO WRECK NEW YORK GLOBE FOILED

NEW YORK, April 16.—What the police believe to have been a deliberate attempt to wreck the plant of the New York Globe was frustrated when an employee of that newspaper discovered a loaded three-inch shell, weighing fifteen pounds, in the press room of the newspaper building, at Globe Square and Washington street.

The shell was so placed, the police investigation showed, that had the press against which it was laid been started it would have been exploded by the machinery. So far, however, the police have been unable to learn how the shell was smuggled into the building and into the press room, in which several persons were at work until a few minutes before it was discovered.

Secret service operatives began an investigation on the theory that the placing of the shell was done by enemy aliens and that the effort to blow up the newspaper plant was part of an organized German plot. The shell was taken to the Greenwich Street police station. It was of American manufacture. So seriously did the police regard the occurrence than about twenty detectives were put on the case and are working in conjunction with the Secret Service agents.

Fry's Pure Cocoa.

NO need to ask if you want your little girl to be bonny, plump and rosy-cheeked. Of course you do! Yet little folks' appetites are "finicky" and sometimes turn from ordinary foods. That is just the time to use FRY'S Pure Cocoa. It makes a delicous food beverage that no child can resist and its rich nourishment is absorbed by the little body as eagerly as the flowers drink in the spring rains. All good grocers sell it, but, of course, remember

NEW YORK, April 16.—As a modern Cinderella, Miss Minerva Menke a one-time Wadleigh High school student, acknowledged her thanks to the Herald last night for the part it played in a unique romance which resulted on Sunday in the announcement of her engagement to Jacks Wolfson, of No. 125 West 116th street. Already Miss Menke is receiving the congratulations of her friends at her home, No. 429 West 130th street.

Here is the story as Miss Menke told it last night with her fiance nodding approval. Miss Menke was a passenger about five months ago on a Madison avenue car. She was on her way to her home, which then was at St. Nicholas avenue and 113th street. She was wearing a new style of pump, in which she took considerable pride.

But an unruly pump was the instrumentality through which romance made an unexpected debut into the young woman's life, for.. as Miss Menke stepped from the car at 113th ..et, the pump slipped from her rig it foot and stayed snugly fitted into a corner of the step. An unromantic conductor gave the bellcord two vigorous tugs and the car, wholly unmindful of the entreaties of the pumpless young woman, resumed its journey northward.

Miss Menke hobbled into a drug store a few doors away, telephoned for a taxicab and was taken to her home. In the meantime Mr. Wolfson, who had been a passenger, retrieved the pump as he was leaving the car.

He took the tiny footwear (Miss Menke stepped from the car at 11.. home with him, pondered over the situation and then telephoned to the Herald an advertisement requesting the young woman who lost a small pump on a Madison avenue car to write to him. His name and address accompanied the advertisement.

The next day Miss Menke saw the advertisement and wrote to Mr. Wolfson. He called at her home and returned the pump. He was invited to call again, and so rapidly did the acquaintance thus formed progress that ... his calls have been growing in number ever since. The wedding, Miss Menke said, will take place early in the fall.

ONWARD, FARMER SOLDIERS!

Onward, Farmer-Soldiers! Go to the furrows now! Put all your toil upon the soil, prepared to hoe and plough! The fighting-soldiers have their place, they've got their part to do, and they'll be there through foul or fair, but that's not work for you. Your field is not the battlefield; your duty is not strife; you sow no seeds of deadly deeds, you sow the seeds of life! The fighting-soldier has to fight that's what he's in it for; but you are lit behind his bit, to carry on the war, because it happens after all, the whole darn shooting match must in the end for strength depend upon the farmer's patch. The strongest nation ever built is sure to break and fall right on the spot unless it's got a decent dinner pail. Brave hearts may knock out coronets, but hearth can't worth a dam if the must meet in cold or heat an empty stomach's slam. No matter how the fighters kill, no matter how they strive they've got to eat and you're the meat to keep the world alive. Onward, Farmer-Soldiers! Take up the hoe and plough! Go to the front to do your stunt, and do it—do it Now!!!

FRANCE AND ENGLAND ABSORBING SHELL ORDERS

Despite the enormous consumption of shells on the western battle lines in Europe, further evidence is appearing that the British and French factories in the home lands are providing abundantly for the appetite of the cannon. It was learned yesterday that so complete was the munition-making business across the seas that a number of contracts placed in Canada several months ago were being switched to British works. Also, reports come from across the Canadian border that some orders on which considerable work has been done have been definitely cancelled. New shell orders in this country, of course, have been a rarity for a long time. France and England were described by a local munition maker yesterday as "vast arsenals," whose working forces have been trained to the highest stage of skill and deftness. A theory expressed in regard to the transfer of orders from Canada was that the British authorities desired to release as many men as possible to work in the grain fields.—New York Times.

Jack: "Who is that fine-looking girl that just bowed to you?"

Tom (gaily): "Oh, that is my sister."

Jack: "Why, old chap, I wasn't aware that you had a sister."

Tom: "Well, I wasn't aware of it myself until last night."—Indianapolis Star.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

WILL STAY TRUE TO THE FLAG OF HIS ADOPTED COUNTRY

"My Heart Feels and Sympathizes With My Native Country Where My Cradle Stood and the Loving Arms of a German Mother Held and Guarded Me," Writes a German Friend of Dr. George Anderson Who is Now Visiting in Peterborough.

AN INTERESTING EPISTLE

Rev. George Anderson, D.D., who is in the city in the interests of the Canadian Royal Naval Institute, and who is to give a series of lectures in the Collegiate Institute on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, has received the following significant and interesting letter from a friend who is prominently connected with one of the universities in the United States. The friendship between Dr. Anderson and his German friend is one of eighteen years standing and following the rupture between the United States and Germany, Dr. Anderson wrote to his friend not as an Englishman to a German but as one Christian gentleman to another Christian gentleman. Dr. Anderson's letter contained words of spiritual comfort. The following letter was received in reply:

Copy of Letter.

April 12, 1917.

My Dear Dr. Anderson,—Your letter has been received and I can assure you that you have done much in cheering me up and allaying the bitterness and sorrow of my heart. You know how I feel and I can tell you that my heart almost breaks when I think of this awful calamity that has befallen us. My heart feels and sympathizes with my native country, where my cradle stood and the loving arms of a German mother held and guarded me. Twenty-two years long I lived there and all my ideals and thoughts were German. Now comes the stern hour between love of native country and duty towards my adopted country. Ah! it is bitter and hard; but duty must prevail. A German does not break his oath. I shall stay true to the flag of my adopted country although my heart weeps and almost breaks. Why is all this? Why this catastrophe? My dear friend, and I know you are my friend, one of the truest and best I have; we will trust in Him who rules the universe. He knows best. His will be done. May God bless you in your noble work for your native land. I say this without bitterness for I admire you and your noble self sacrifice at the age you are. You are and will be my friend forever, and I hope and pray that the time shall come and may it come soon, when we shall take up our pleasant associations as before. The University goes on as usual. We have about 600 students here now and the Foreign Language Department over which I have the honour to preside, is in a good state. My wife and the three children send their best wishes.

Sincerely yours,
Your True Friend.

Celebration of St. George's Day on Monday Next

St. George's Day, April 23rd will be duly observed in Peterborough this year.

The celebration of the day will be gin with a National Service at St. George's church, Braidwood Avenue, next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock, the eve of the Saint's Day. The preacher will be Canon Cornish and the Lessons will be read by Mr. W. F. Johnston and Mr. Scadding.

As becomes such a National Festival the service will be fully choral. On Monday evening St. George's Day proper, a similar service will be held at St. John's church when the sermon will be preached by one of the oldest and most eloquent preachers in Canada, Archdeacon Cody, of Toronto. The various patriotic societies of the city are invited to attend, either of these services, and especially the "Sons of England," and the "Daughters of the Empire."

This Festival ought to appeal very strongly to all patriotic men as St. George was a warrior and all the pictures we have of him represent him as fighting with, and slaying the "dragon." We have another dragon to fight and to conquer to-day, and on that account, if not on any other, such a festival should be duly observed.

Our readers may also be aware, that St. George's Day without the "Red Rose" is almost unthinkable. The Red Rose has played a very important part in the past history of England.

Red Roses will be sold in the street next Friday and Saturday in aid of St. George's church.

Entertainment By Boy Scouts

The entertainment given by the Scouts and Guards at the S. A. Temple last night was very well attended, indeed.

Adjutant Burton made an excellent chairman.

Special mention should be made of the Flag Drill by the Temple Guards and the drill by the Scouts and Guards of Byersville. Further developments are expected to take place in the Guards and Scouts for the summer.

Boys' Band practice on Wednesday night and Young People's meeting on Thursday night.

Bugle Band practice on Friday night.

Suits For Stout Men

Semi-ready Designers Tailor Big Suits For Heavyweights

Many a stout man in the best of health and spirits has been greeted with, "You are not as stout as you were!"

This is a tribute to his tailor, very often. In the Semi-ready Book of Style the designers show how a stout man can dress so that he will appear well proportioned. Models are shown the proper style of business sack which a stout man should wear.

Frank L. Jenne has over 250 different patterns of suitings from which he can make and deliver custom-made suits in six days.

THE HOME GARDEN

Instructions For Amateurs Who Want to Help Win the War by Growing Food Products on Unused Plots of Land —Address Questions to the Home Garden Editor

To obtain the best quality in beets they must be grown quickly and pulled while young and tender; likewise the best varieties must be sown as soon as the ground can be got ready. Either this or the Detroit Red may be depended upon for quality of flesh.

Early varieties are sown rather thinly about one inch deep, and as early as weather conditions will permit. Every so called beet seed is a ball containing within itself several seeds, each capable of growing into a plant. For this reason thick sowing is not advisable, as plants will be crowded and make spindling growth. There will be more tops than root.

A good practice is to delay the thinning until the plants are four or five inches high, and leave them standing from four to six inches apart in the rows. A few of the thinned plants are reset in the rows, where early radishes have been grown, and the balance used for boiled beets or greens. Winter varieties are sown in the same manner, but June is plenty of time for them. That may succeed early lettuce.

Beets thrive best in a rich loamy soil, well prepared and well fertilized. Early varieties develop quickly in a sandy loam or soil of fertile character, and the roots are smoother and have a better appearance, though beets grown in a heavier soil have superior qualities for the family table. Good cultivation makes for steady growth and prevents any hard fibrous growth.

As a rule the small or medium-sized varieties possess the best quality. The flat turnip shaped beets are the earliest. By making several sowing of one of the early varieties, one may have a supply for the table for weeks. For winter storing there are good late sorts, such as the Long Blood Red that are firm of texture and good keepers.

Although the beet is classed as a cool weather vegetable, and is comparatively hardy, the frost sometimes injures or even kills the very early plantings. This, however, is a risk that must be taken with almost every crop.

DANDELION GREENS.

The wild dandelion has long been prized by housewives for using as greens and of late years choice varieties have been introduced for garden cultivation. Commonly the leaves are left to grow naturally, and cut as soon as they attain a fair size. They may be blanched in a manner similar to celery, the lighter colour making them suitable for garnising dishes. There are frilled forms specially suited to this purpose.

While the wild specie is so common it is not likely that cultivation will come into vogue to any extent. Under systematic care seed is sown in rows a foot or more apart. Several cuttings may be made, the first being the finest and most in demand in the market.

A GREEK SLAVE MAY 24th-25th

The Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Society will produce their third operatic work on May 24th and 25th, a matinee to be given on the afternoon of the 24th.

The work to be presented is Sydney Jones' "Greek Slave," which, requiring greater effort and skill, is a worthy successor to "San Toy" and "The Geisha." A splendid company has combined under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devey for this production, the most ambitious yet attempted in this city.

BROKER BELIEVES WHEAT WILL GO TO $4 A BUSHEL

On the Toronto Stock Exchange recently two brokers were discussing the soaring wheat price.

"That's fierce," said one of them when the $2.25 level was reached.

The other replied—"We are going to see it at $4 before it gets back to $2."

This is only one broker's opinion, and is merely quoted for what it is worth in directing the attention of the public toward the present opportunities of forestalling the food shortage which, according to experts is impending.

What we sow in the next four weeks will determine what we will eat in the next sixteen months, and what we will pay for what we eat. This applies particularly to farm production, but it remains with the garden owner to secure as large a yield as possible of vegetables through his efforts at home.

In Ontario last year there were 365,000 acres less sown than in 1915. This year's Canadian crop is estimated to be 68 per cent. below normal.

The United States crop, it is now believed, will be the lowest in 25 years.

The world's wheat supply until August of this year is already 180,000,000 bushels of wheat short of the world's requirement for that period.

It has been estimated that 60,000,000 persons have been withdrawn from agriculture to meet the demands of the war. They have gone into the ranks, the munitions shops, the fleets, the shipyards, literally denuding the soil of its workmen.

If the worst fears are realized before another planting season rolls around those who are deaf to the warnings the Government and other public men are sounding will have only themselves to blame.

A considerable amount of excitement has been aroused in the offices of editorial paragraphers by the question which a Missouri young woman asked of a farm journal, to wit: "What shall I do to keep my calves from freezing?" The question admits of only one answer, however. To keep her calves from freezing, the young woman shouldn't go out of doors until longer dresses become fashionable.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

LONDON, April 17.—Stewart Lyon, Special Correspondent of the Canadian Press, in despatches from the Western front, says the Canadian cavalry, since the beginning of the offensive around Arras, have won six villages from the Germans by spirited dashes and charges, after the way had been prepared by light artillery. Lyon tells of one young lieutenant, who dismounted and captured a machine gun single-handed. Canadian cavalry, he says, charged with long swords, and machine guns are carried into action at the gallop.

PARIS, April 17.—Still driving ahead, French forces to-day organized the positions they conquered in the first smash of their offensive. To-day's official statement stated that strong counter attacks in this region, between Soissons and Rheims, were repulsed. These were particularly desperate in their intensity in the neighbourhood of Allee and Courcy. The German attackers sustained heavy losses.

LONDON, April 17.—The Turkish troops in Mesopotamia are steadily retreating before General Maude's advancing British forces. An official statement to-day declared: "By a night march to the right of the Tigris we advanced to within a mile and a half of the position of the eighteenth Turkish Army covering Estabulat Railway Station. The enemy's advanced troops fell back without offering opposition."

NEW YORK, April 17.—The report of an engagement between a U.S. submarine cruiser and a German U boat reached here to-day. The rumour asserted that the German submarine had fired on the patrolling craft off the New England coast.

PARIS, April 17.—The great offensive opened by the French from Soissons to Rheims is likely to extend still further to-morrow or the day after. The tremendous assault on the German lines had long been carefully planned, and for a month past French artillery had been pounding the enemy's position. Forty miles of the strongest part of the German line were wrested from the enemy with an estimated loss of nearly one hundred thousand killed, wounded and prisoners. All France hails the victory as a brilliant demonstration of skill of her generals and the courage of her troops. According to the latest news reaching Paris, the Germans are bombarding the lost trenches furiously, counter attack after counter attack having been delivered far into the night. The struggle is particularly fierce in the region of Cranne, but the French have so far managed to hold their gains. The French advance averages in depth from two to two and one-half miles beyond the German first position, which is composed of lines of five and six trenches, one behind another.

RUSSIA WANTS CARS AND 2,000 LOCOMOTIVES

NEW YORK, April 16.—A dispatch from Petrograd yesterday said that the new Russian Government had decided to buy 40,000 cars and 2,000 locomotives in the United States, to be delivered July, 1918. If this program is carried through it will not require negotiations from the initial stage with manufacturers. Last year the market contained Russian inquiries for thousands of cars part of which were placed and the greater part allowed to drift along without contracts being closed. A stimulation to the locomotive market will be appreciated by the producing concerns. The American Locomotive Company expects to complete the last of its shell contracts at the Richmond Va. plant by July 1 next, and will then be in a position to take on extensive orders for locomotives to keep the plant busy.

Chicks which die before they are two days old are usually weaklings, which could not be saved easily. They probably come from eggs that had too hard a shell or else from eggs laid by diseased hens.

Experiments in the growing of Manitoba wheat in France have been going on ever since 1912. The imported variety in many cases has given yields equal to those of the acclimatised wheats.

MYSTERY IN DEATHS OF TWO PHYSICIANS

They Pass Away Within Two Hours of Each Other at Weyburn

REGINA, Sask., April 17.—A mysterious tragedy occurred at Weyburn Saturday morning, when Dr. H. E. Hammill of Assiniboia and Dr. Roy Stewart, formerly of East End, and now attached to the Army Medical Corps, succumbed to what is believed to be narcotic poisoning. Dr. Hammill died in his room at the Royal Hotel, and Dr. Stewart at his home about two hours after Dr. Hammill. Dr. Eagleshem attended the two men, and in each case has found indications of poisoning.

Dr. Charlton, Provincial bacteriologist, was brought down from Regina, but as the body of Dr. Hammill had been embalmed he could do nothing in his case. He, however, secured the stomach of Dr. Stewart, and took it to Regina for examination. Dr. Hammill, who was practising at Assiniboia, brought a patient into Weyburn last week. He was the son of ex-Mayor J. D. Hammill, Postmaster at Meaford, Ont., was about thirty-two years of age, and leaves a wife. Dr. Stewart, who formerly practised at East End, left there some time ago to join the 249th Battalion as Medical Officer, but a short time ago severed his connection with the battalion.

ADANAC QUARTETTE AT ST. PAUL'S

The visit of the famous Adanac Quartette to St. Paul's church on April 24th is creating as great interest as it did on its former visit.

Ruthven Macdonald, the basso of the Quartette, says: "The blend of the four voices is finer than ever this season."

The programme forwarded is a very fine one, and includes such splendid numbers as, "What From Vengeance" from Lucia De Lammermoor, and Dudley Buck's "Lead Kindly Light." In addition to the Quartette, solos will be sung by each member of the quartette, and also by Miss Dorothy Allan, soloist of St. Paul's church.

Mr. Arthur Blight will sing that fine recit. and aria, "Why Shakes the Earth," by Johnston, Miss Allan and Mr. Macdonald will sing the brilliant duet, "I Feel Thy Angel Spirit," which was received so enthusiastically at Owen Sound, when sung by them there recently.

St. Paul's choir will contribute two unaccompanied numbers to the programme, and the quartettes will also be sung without an accompanist.

Unaccompanied work is the truest test of a choir's worth. Many choirs can sing well to an accompaniment but fail when tested without one.

St. Paul's choir has undertaken to provide a worthy and permanent "Roll of Honour" to be erected in the church, and the entire proceeds of this concert are towards this object.

EVANGELISTIC SERVICES AT THE GOSPEL HALL

The service in the Gospel Hall was well attended last evening. The message was preceded by a bright song service, after which the Rev. Mr. Doner of Bethany Tabernacle led in prayer.

The address was based upon the First Epistle of John. The Evangelist, Mr. H. M. Harper of Chicago, Ill., said that it was a letter written from the Father, and addressed to "the little children" who had trusted in the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour. He said that the term "my little children" was a tender word, and was the same as that used by Scotch mothers when speaking to their babes, as their "wee bairns." Beginning with Ch. II., 12, he said that the most fundamental thing was a knowledge of the forgiveness of sins, and that this knowledge could be had and enjoyed here on earth. It was based upon divine sacrifice, even the blood of Jesus Christ, and was received by faith. Chapter II., 13, was the next Scripture read, where a knowledge of the Father is presented as the heritage of the little children. The speaker showed that this knowledge was not imparted by man, but by the Holy Spirit, who dwells in each believer in Jesus Christ. Passing from this to Chap. II., 1 and 2, the exhortation was given to live in a state of victory over sin, but that in view of possible failure we had an advocate with the Father, who, by His present work in heaven, maintains us in His presence. It was shown that when a believer sinned the Holy Spirit sought to lead him to confession. Verse 28 of the same chapter was then read and the believers were exhorted to abide (or lodge as the word abide means) in Christ; that they should not be content to know Him simply as Saviour but should search the Word of God and learn of His many names and offices. All this in view of His near return. Finally the last verse in the Epistle was read and the exhortation given "to keep themselves from idols." The Evangelist stated that this exhortation was needed as much to-day and here in Canada as when written. That while Canadian people did not worship idols of wood and stone nowadays, they did have other idols, such as money, fame, pleasure, or anything that came between the heart of the believer and God.

Those who attended the service spoke of help and blessing received.

Mr. Harper will again speak tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in the Gospel Hall, the subject being "The Will of God." Meetings last but one hour. The public are cordially invited to attend.

Funeral of Fred Dickson At Westwood

The funeral of the late Fred Dickson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dickson of Westwood, took place on Wednesday, April 11th, at 1.30 p.m. Deceased was a brakeman on the Pere Marquette, with headquarters at St. Thomas, and while nearing Welland on the the morning of the 6th inst. by some unknown reason lost his balance and fell between the cars. Deceased received injuries which proved fatal, and his remains were sent to Norwood, thence to his parents home near Westwood.

The funeral on Wednesday was largely attended the services at the house and grave being conducted by Rev. E. M. Cook, pastor of the Westwood Methodist church. The members of L. O. L. 2062, of which deceased was a member, attended in a body. Beautiful floral wreaths were sent from the lodges of Trainmen Brotherhood and Personal of St. Thomas, and family and L.O.L. at home. Deceased was 25 years 11 months and 21 days old.

He is mourned by his parents, eight sisters and four brothers, one of whom is in the 25th C. F. Artillery Somewhere in France.

Greater Peterborough Organization Plans Celebration of July 1st.

Practically everyone of the nineteen members of the Holiday and Sports Committee of the Greater Peterborough Association was present at last night's meeting in the Council Chamber at which the first draft of a programme of events for Dominion Day, July 1st was considered. Mr. R. Denne, presided and if the work of this committee is an augury of what the others may attempt, the Association is going to keep things moving in Peterborough. A tentative list of events was proposed as follows: Boy Scouts' parade, tug o' war, horse races, children's sports, baby show.

Prizes will be given for the competitive events. The following committees were struck:

Baby Show—Messrs. Brightman, Sharp, Hooper, Crane and Dobie.

Horse Races—Messrs. Munroe and Brooks.

Boy Scouts—Messrs. Roper and Jamieson.

Athletics—Messrs. A. C. Kay, C. G. Graham, Robt. Dobie, P. Spratt, F. McGrath and Ed. Carr.

Autos and Motorcycles—Messrs. Kay and Dobbin.

Booths and Refreshments—T. H. Hooper and Ald. Smith.

Advertising, Tanks and Aeroplanes—Messrs. Denne and Haslam.

The meeting adjourned until Monday evening next at eight o'clock in the Council chamber when reports will be received from all the committees, and later submitted to the Association for its approval.

Arranging for the Reception of Duke and Duchess of Devonshire When They Visit City on May 25th.

Plans for the reception and entertainment of the Governor-General on the occasion of his visit to Peterborough Friday, May 25, were sketched at a meeting of the Council's reception committee, augmented by the citizens who have been chosen to assist in the preparations. Ald. Duncan presided with the following gentlemen present: Aldermen McIntyre, Langford, Weir, Worth, Dobbin, Taylor and Mayor Duffus, Col. Walker, Rev. Dean McColl, Messrs. Vincent Eastwood, A. L. Killaly, J. J. Turner, J. J. Hartley, A. Mowat, R. H. Turner.

It was proposed that the morning programme would open with a motor drive about the city, visiting at the request of His Excellency, one of the munition shops, the address of welcome and civic reception at Central Park and luncheon at the Empress.

The route of the morning auto run is as follows: Leaving the C. P. R. station up George street to Charlotte to Aylmer and south to the Metal Products Company, where the vice regal party will observe the processes in the manufacture of munitions; thence south to Romaine to Lansdowne, to Park, passing the C. G. E. works to Wolfe to Rubidge to Charlotte to Monaghan Road to Gilmour to Park to Smith to Jackson Park which will be visited; south on Monaghan Road to Weller to Belmont, to Hunter to Aylmer to Charlotte to George and north to Central Park.

In the afternoon the party will leave the Empress over the following route, George to Hunter to Lock No. 6, then boarding the "Bessie Butler," a sail up the Canal and over the Lift Lock to the Norwood road, where the automobiles will be waiting, thence by McFarlane street to Concession to the Oval to Smith, Water, Argyle, George, Murray, Water, past Victoria Park to Hunter to George and to the C. P. R. Station.

These routes the committee accepted for the present. The Mayor and Ald. Duncan were delegated to arrange for the luncheon to the Duke of Devonshire and the ladies of the I. O. D. E. will be asked to assume the details of the reception to the Duchess.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood, Rev. Dean McColl and Mr. A. Mowat will supervise the congregation of the school children at Central Park in the morning, where they will sing two choruses.

The erection of a reception stand at the park was left to Aldermen Weir, McIntyre and Langford. Citizens will be asked to decorate their premises and residences.

The promotion of this detail was left to Mr. R. H. Turner, Ald. Taylor and Ald. Worth. Ald. Stratton and Ald. Dobbin will arrange for bands and the provision of auxiliary accommodation in the Armories to be used in the event of rain, was left to Col. Walker, J. J. Turner and J. J. Hartley.

Messrs. G. A. Gillespie, C. E. Cranfield of the Motor League and Mayor Duffus and S. R. Armstrong were appointed a committee to secure cars for the Governor General's party.

The Reception Committee will meet the regents of the local chapters of the Daughters of the Empire on Thursday night to enlist their aid in the completion of the arrangements.

Government Wants High School Boys to Work on Farms---Mr. G. L. Galley is Behind the Movement Here

A provincial wide appeal to the High School boys of the province between the years of 14 and 18 is being made by the Government through the agency of the local secretaries of the Y.M.C.A. This plan of communication was arranged at a recent meeting in Toronto at which the "Y" secretaries met in conference with representatives of the Department of Agriculture, who acknowledged in their recent experience that the boy farm help movement required experts in boy's work to appeal to them most forcibly.

Last year this movement saw its inception in an extensive and organized way. Over 2,000 boys engaged with farmers, and with rare exceptions gave a good account of themselves. The strongest evidence of the satisfaction they gave is found in the large number of applications received by the Department this spring by farmers who had hired boys last summer. On 50,000 acres in this province last year the only help was from 500 school boys. The result of last year's work, therefore, is a complete guarantee that the "teen" age boys can adapt themselves to country life and work, and that they can render a real and large service during the summer months on the farm.

Local Work.

Mr. Garnet Galley, the secretary of the local Y.M.C.A., was delegated to arouse enthusiasm among all the high schools of this district. This morning he went to Norwood, on Wednesday he will be in Sterling, Thursday in Peterborough, and Friday in Omemee. Boys desiring information regarding the details of the work may obtain it at the Y.M.C.A. Their applications should be sent to the Department. Places will be secured for local boys in this district as far as possible. They are assured of good treatment from the farmer, they will report to the "Y" secretaries and everything will be done to protect their interests. At the same time the boys are expected to give their best service, to regard their work as a patriotic contribution, a feature that will be emphasized, and to edeavour to duplicate the satisfaction of last year.

This, of course, is a boy's affair. The appeal will be made to boys, but indirectly the parents are concerned. They are urged to offer no opposition to the participation of their boys in farm work, but rather to encourage them. Last year's need of farm help was serious, but it was cheerful in comparison with the present outlook.

THREE INDUCED TO ENLIST.

WOODSTOCK, April 16.—Recruiting for the C. D. F. has not been by any means a decided success in Woodstock up to the present. Out of a list of 480 names of eligibles supplied by the National Service Commission, 80 have already been canvassed, and only three were induced to enlist. The balance will be approached during this week.

FORMER OPERA SINGER IS NOW A SCRUBWOMAN

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 16.—Owing to spring reminding her of sunny Italy, or perhaps it was the incessant bird song in the William Penn hotel lobby, Cecelia Samarrari once singer in grand opera, while on her knees with a scrub brush in her hand, opened the casket of her forgotten notes and to the wonder of hundreds of guests scattered sweetest music from "Il Trovatore," and then she whistled arias from the famous opera.

Assistant to President McCargo, A. K. McRae, and Assistant Manager T. F. Mullins were hurriedly summoned from the front office, and they also listened without disturbing the newly awakened singer. As the song stopped and a crowd had gathered around, the woman looked up in surprise, blushed, and went on with her work. Mr. Mullins bade her enter the office, feeling that she could find a better job around the hotel, and she did. She told her story while a waiter translated into English:

TELLS DRAMATIC STORY.

"Three years ago I was married to a French singer connected with Spalletti's grand opera company, playing in Paris at the outbreak of the war. My father disowned me for marrying the man of my choice, and when my husband got killed in his first battle—he had been called out immediately—I was heart-broken and dared not go back to Italy. "It must have affected my mind, and in some way I ceased to please the audiences, as my heart was too heavy. I was discharged. I was never taught to do anything but sing, and with my mind bewildered I made my way to America to go to some friends in Chicago. I had enough money to carry me for a year. I found my friends had moved to Pittsburgh, but I never found them here.

"With my money all gone and my heart sick of all thoughts of the opera, as it brought my dead husband back too vividly to me, I applied at different places, but could get no work."

TO GET A "RAISE".

The woman then dropped her head. Mr. Mullins said something to the interpreter, who stooped close to her and talked. Her face brightened and she nervously grasped Mr. Mullins' hand and kissed it passionately. He had told her the management would give her a position suitable to her gifts.

LABOUR MEN WITH BALFOUR.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labour and members of the Advisory Commission of the Council of National Defense, received a cablegram to-day from Premier Lloyd George of England accepting his suggestion that two representatives of English labour be included in the Balfour Commission. Mr. Gompers cabled Mr. Lloyd George yesterday asking that this be done. The cablegram from the British Premier reads as follows:

Samuel Gompers, Washington.

Delighted to comply with your request.

Two labour leaders and representatives of Welfare Department of Ministry of Munitions will leave for America as soon as possible.

WAS NOT AMONG THE MISSING

In connection with a reference in yesterday's issue to the alleged disappearance of two boys, namely, Leonard O'Toole and Theodore O'Toole, it is stated in justice to the latter, that he was not numbered among the missing when a number of local boys disappeared following the appearance here of a show. Theodore, who resides on Perry street, was at home all the time. It was Leonard O'Toole, who resides on Park street, that failed to answer the family roll call the morning after.

LETTER OF THANKS

The following letter regarding Leonard O'Toole has been received by Chief of Police Short of Lindsay:

Dear Sir,—I am glad to be able to inform you that I have found my boy. He was out in the country about ten miles at a niece's home in Douro. He wasn't with the show at all. Thanking you for your services and wishing you good health. I am with thanks.

E. O'TOOLE,
138 Park street, Peterborough.

Tillsonburg Cereal Mill May Re-open

LINDSAY, April 17.—The Canadian Cereal and Flour Mills, Limited, will not resume operations in the Lindsay mill, but will likely operate their plant at Tillsonburg. It will be remembered that the President and Manager of the Company wrote Mayor Kylie recently asking what concessions or inducements Lindsay would offer in case this firm decided to operate the local mill. The official was requested to visit Lindsay and place his proposition before the council, but failed to do so.

The last issue of the Tillsonburg Liberal states that the Mayor of that town, had received a letter from the Canadian Cereal and Flour Mills Ltd, informing him that the council's offer would be accepted, providing the terms received the approval of the ratepayers.

made to-night that altogether since Monday 14,000 German prisoners have been sent back to the cages, fully a third of them Bavarians, and that 194 captured guns have been parked. The losses of the Bavarians is emphasized in the British report. It was the Third Division of Prince Rupprecht's command which was called on to counter-attack at Laghdurt—the same troops which had suffered so heavily in the battle of Loos in 1915 and again at High Wood on the Somme. Through the pouring rain this afternoon the British advanced at both ends of their line, making more progress to the northwest of Lens and capturing Villaret, near Hargicourt, and the butte known as The Three Savages.

"News of the opening of the great French offensive has spread like wildfire through the British forces," telegraphs Reuter's correspondent of British Headquarters in France today.

SCENE FROM "A LITTLE BIT OF FLUFF."

Albert Brown, the most skilful and popular of all living light comedians, will present "A Little Bit of Fluff" at "The Grand" next Saturday, April 21, Matinee and Evening.

It is good news for all playgoers that the play provides Mr. Brown with a role wholly different from any he has hitherto played in this country,—a role that provides the most complete scope for his unique and brilliant gifts as a legitimate comedian. The play bristles with happy and clever ideas, while the situations succeed each other with a speed that is fascinating. Mr. Brown plays the part of a very dapper but very good young man who is caught in the vortex of these situations, who, indeed, in the course of events has the starch taken out of him in the most delightful way. The performance is by arrangement with Messrs. Herbert Jay and Anthony Ellis, of the Criterion Theatre, London, and the scenic productions and furnishings are a replica of those used in London. The play has been carefully cast and a triumph for Mr. Brown and all concerned, is assured. The seat sale opens Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

The Cause of Sickness

Apart from accident or illness due to infection almost all ill-health arises from one of two reasons. The great mistake that people make is in not realizing that both of these have the same cause at the root of them, namely poor and impure blood. Either bloodlessness or some trouble of the nerves will be found to be the reason for almost every ailment. If you are pale, suffer from headaches or breathlessness, with palpitation of the heart, poor appetite and weak digestion, the cause is almost always bloodlessness. If you have nervous headaches, neuralgia, sciatica and other nerve pains, the cause is run down, exhausted nerves. But run down nerves are also a result of poor blood, so that the two chief causes of illness are one and the same.

This accounts for the great number of people, once in indifferent health, pale, nervous and dyspeptic, who have been made well and hearty by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills; for no medicine ever discovered is so valuable for increasing the supply of rich, red blood and giving strength to worn out nerves. Men and women alike greatly benefit from a course of the splendid blood builder and nerve tonic.

If your dealer does not keep these pills you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Young chicks should not be given food that is liable to become soggy before it is digested.

Why Not Do Your Own Marketing?

And Carry Small Parcels, to Help the Problem of Reducing Cost of Goods

"If you would be well served, serve yourself," is a truism, but never could it be applied with better effect than right now to the ever-new-old problem of marketing and buying for the household. A decisive step is being taken by club women elsewhere toward greater efficiency among housewives, in this important part of the household economy. A joint effort of various clubs is being made to persuade merchants to unite with them in a campaign against high prices, as well as against delivery of small parcels. The women have written to the large dealers in merchandise and foods, asking them to make rules among their customers that any customer having an article sent home on approval shall be required either to return the article within five days or to pay for it. This is to prevent the injuring or selling of the article, thereby causing expense to customers who are doing right.

It may not be generally understood by women that, when an article loses value through being returned, this expense is added to the cost of other articles. In this way great injustice is done careful cash customers. The same result follows from housewives who order their groceries late in the day or more than once a day, which involves the special delivery of small parcels. For this needless expense cash customers, and those who are always prompt and order but once a day, must make up the expense in added cost of food. For merchants have to reckon on this in as "overhead expense," and the customers, wise and foolish, pay alike.

Stores who desire to cut all overhead expenses to a minimum should aim to carry out a strictly cash system and the lessening of express deliveries. Some stores have cut out the delivery system altogether, because the women have urged it on the ground that to do these things they must be charged more for their goods. Some other stores have begun to charge for each delivery five cents, and one cent for every charge account of one dollar or less.

Even at this rate the grocers will be able so to reduce their overhead expense that it is going to make a considerable difference to the housewife's monthly expenses. There is no doubt that the careless, unthinking woman, who now thinks nothing of telephoning her grocer five and six times during the day for articles which she forgot to order in the morning, simply through lack of orderly forethought, thus causing her grocer 20 cents unnecessary expense, and the delivery boy the hard work of climbing her stairs four more times than was necessary, will think before having 5 cents added to her yeast cake or bar of soap which she forgot. It will also reduce the bookkeeping of the merchants, for 1 cent on every dollar or less of a charge account will soon count up, and she will begin to pay as she goes. By this system she will buy more carefully and systematically. It is so much easier, seemingly, to charge and pay, than to pay as you go.

"It is easy to buy and save your pelf,

says a modern 'Mother Goose.' This is the slogan, among others, which the housewives of Chicago are using.

At a recent meeting interesting descriptions were given by enterprising housewives of their trips to market. This really delightful part of the housewife's task has almost disappeared since the advent of the telephone, and this is to be regretted. For there is no gainsaying that usually what you can pick up yourself is far ahead of what you can get by ordering over the telephone. Many are proving this here, and those are women, too, whose lives are full of many family and social duties, who know the value of time. One housewife who does not count the pennies testifies that she has done her own marketing for years. She says she enjoys it for many reasons. In the first place she feels that women of means are greatly to blame for the high cost of living. They get merchants into careless, even dishonest ways of making money. They are thoughtless about ordering, and willing to pay the grocer's price without a demur, forgetting that every time they do so they are making it harder for those less ready to meet the high cost. Again, there is a real training for any woman; one of whose duties surely is providing for her home comforts, in going out and intelligently marketing for her family. She soon learns to know the different cuts of meat, the various kinds of canned goods, how to buy economically, and, by her presence in the market or store, makes the merchant more careful of how his goods are kept."

Then why not all join the efficiency brigade, avoid the waste of the charge system, procure better goods through more intelligent, discriminating information about foods and household furnishings, and incidentally, by going to market each day. Women who are homemakers have much to share, much to learn. "I learned more about my neighbourhood, what was needing a housewife's attention, how my food was handled, and the conditions under which my family live and my children play, by my morning marketing than I ever did in all my years of study of social problems," declared a housewife to the writer, in speaking of this problem of household economy.

FOUR DAYS WITHOUT FOOD

Self-Sacrifice Made by a Young Belgian Girl

One cold morning in January, 1917, a girl, little more than sixteen, joined the bread line, consisting already of some two hundred people, waiting for their daily ration at the soup communale, Quartier No. 3, Brussels. At the end of one hour and a quarter, it came her turn to be served. The bread she put into a wicker basket, the soup she received in a jug, and with a murmur of thanks, she hurried away.

On the following day she again fell in line with other semi-starving people, at Quartier No. 9, and again without touching food herself, she bore silently away the bread and soup given her. She looked pale and sick, but such a condition is so common as to excite little notice and no comment.

The third day she came again for bread and soup, but on this occasion what with waiting in the cold for over an hour, and in a desperate condition of starvation, she was so faint and weak that one of the relief workers was obliged to assist her to walk home, though but a stone's-throw away.

It then came to light that this child of sixteen had every day taken bread and soup to her sick mother, who was unable to move from her bed. Always she assured her mother that she herself had had an ample meal, "all she could eat," but now she confessed that she had touched no food for four days.

This incident demonstrates the spirit of self-sacrifice that dominates all classes of people in Belgium today, amidst their hardships and miseries. Belgium is living on the barest crust that will support existence. But without that crust the entire nation would perish of starvation in a few brief weeks. Help is urgently needed to buy Belgium bread. Will you send a contribution to the nearest Relief Committee, or direct to the Belgian Relief Fund, 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal.

CHINA SHAKES SELF FREE FROM OPIUM HABIT

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 16.—"The opium business has practically passed out of the trade of the far east," says a report from Consul General Anderson at Hong Kong, made public at the state department. "All holdings of opium by private interests in or concerning China now are sold," the report says, "and further dealing in opium in the open market therefore is at an end."

The whole stock now in the country has been taken over by the government, and will be used for the extraction of morphine for medical purposes. No further private importation will be allowed.

This brings to an end China's long struggle to free herself from the terrible drug, which began to be imported in large quantities from British India nearly a century ago. By gradual steps the world has united to fight it, and The Hague conference adopted an international agreement. The coming of the republic struck its death knell.

Motor Cyclists Want A Few More Men

Sergt. Barber of the Motor Cyclists Corps, is appealing to the young men of the city to provide a couple more cyclists. The corps is almost complete and is ready to go into training. Peterborough has given several men, and it is believed there should be others to whom this corps may present a strong appeal. Sergt. Barber is at the Y.M.C.A.

Farm Assistants Over Military Age

Practically all the men who have applied to Mr. G. A. Gillespie for work on the farms are over the military age. There are eight farmers and nine farm labourers on the list to-day and it is largely a matter of placing them to the best advantage. Most of the men are married and were looking for farms that provided a separate house.

NEW TARIFF FOR LIVERYMEN

At a meeting of the Police Commissioners held yesterday afternoon Chief of Police Thompson was authorized to add another man to the police force. A representation of liverymen waited upon the Board and requested the Board's endorsation of a proposed tariff. The Board promised to give the matter consideration.

Editor Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly settle an argument. One person says the moon has nothing to do with the weather. The other man says it has.

Sincerely,
"WATERLOO."

Editor.—Some scientific data concerning the above request for information will appear in a subsequent issue of the Examiner.

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—In your issue of April 13th, the statement is made that farmers of this district have not shown the interest in the Organization of Resources that was expected of them.

The following from the Farmers' Advocate explains this to a certain extent: "Suggestions intended to help farmers never cease. Our towns and cities seem to be supplied with never failing springs and some with overflowing wells. For the most part they serve about as good a purpose as laughing gas in rural communities. The ridiculousness of it all grows painful. How long would manufacturers, business men, professional men, club men or women's clubs seriously consider suggestions farmers might make to improve their business acumen and increase the value of their work to themselves and to the country?

The farmers are a little suspicious of this sudden outbreak of patriotism by city people and they claim they are actuated by patriotism in their offer to advise and help. If so why didn't they enlist and leave our experienced help with us? First, all were taken who could be got to enlist, then the rest were taken into munition factories, where money flows like water, leaving the help on the farms less than one man on one hundred acres. The farmer can not compete with wages paid in these places; if he did he would farm at a loss and we are told to produce at this time, even at a loss, although Sir Sam Hughes said he could not get the manufacturers to engage in making munitions until they were assured a profit. Why should not the farmer be entitled to a profit the same as the manufacturers?

The farmer has decided to get along as best he can with what help he has and cut down his acreage accordingly. He has put up with inexperienced help for some years, but he generally engaged a man for a long period and was able to get some return before the man's time was up, but to expect to take green help for 2 or 3 weeks in the rush of spring seeding is absurd and he is blamed because he does not welcome it as a prize. A neighbour told me he had an inexperienced man for three days last spring and it cost him $50.00 for broken machinery. An experienced might be of some use in harvest to a small extent. A few hot days forking hay would result in a brisk business for all the ambulances available.

It is nonsense to say the men at the front may go hungry. They will be well fed. The Allies have a long enough purse for that and the farmers need not worry, for they eat at the first table anyway. And it looks as though the city nabob's bread baskets will be the ones to suffer, which goes a long way to explain this latest outburst of patriotism. Seeing that these people refused a free market to the farmer on account of the amount involved —two cents a basket—it is only fair to infer that this brand of patriotism has a market value of considerably less than two cents, and I think the farmers generally are well aware of its market value.

Yours,
F. T. B.

ITALY EXPLAINS HER FINANCIAL STATUS.

ROME, via Paris, April 16. — Italian official circles are anxious to prove to the United States, which is about to enter for the first time into financial relations with Italy, the strength of the Italian budget.

From an official statement issued to-day it appears that only 15,500,000,000f. (about $3,100,000,000) in war debts have been contracted, while the new taxes available for the ensuing nine months of the present fiscal year will amount to 900,000,000f. (about $180,000,000) more than during the former year.

It is expected that the surplus the year will be 1,200,000,000f. (about $240,000,000) Thus, after paying interest on the present debts at five per cent., a large margin will exist for the payment of interest on new loans

$34,000,000 WAR INSURANCE.

Over $4,000,000 Bombardment Policies Written by Boston Companies.

BOSTON, April 16.—Insurance men said to-day that bombardment policies amounting to more than $4,000,000 had been written in this city since domestic companies were advised this week that they could accept such risks. Previously, they said, $30,000,000 in insurance had been taken out here by property owners against loss caused by explosions. The bombardment policies also cover fire losses resulting from attack by enemy warships.

The zone system of rates prevails in bombardment policies, cities nearest the coast paying the highest rate. Most companies, it was said, had adopted the general plan of adding a bombardment clause to explosion policies.

MILITARY NEWS

They collected together in England,
Several battalions mixed;
And were known as the Forty-Sixth

They moved us across to the battle-field,
Where none should go but strong;
They classed us as inferior,
But found that they were wrong.

They placed us in the hottest part,
Of the firing line in France;
Our boys were only anxious,
And waiting for the chance.

Before us lay a famous trench,
Which was to be our goal;
The time was up—our guns began,
The heavens seemed to roll.

Wild were the scenes which followed,
As our heroes fought and fell;
But we gained our goal and found at dawn
That everything was well.

Three officers, heroes all,
Were dropped along the way;
And many boys in doing their part,
Broke the ranks that day.

The Canadian boys are all the same
No matter where you go;
They don't believe in marking time,
Just bring along your show.

We wish to let all Canada know,
And the boys who went before;
That we are here to do our part,
They can expect no more.

SERGT. F. HEFFERNAN, Norwood.

Sergt. Heffernan is now in Epsom, England and quite recovered from the shrapnel wound in his face and neck.

A cable received from Lieut. R. P. A. Crisp to-day stated that he is slowly recovering in York Military Hospital. Lieut. Crisp, who went overseas with the 93rd and transferred to the Royal Flying Corps, was badly injured in an aeroplane accident a month ago.

Lt.-Col. Wilson, D.A.A. and Q.M.G. for No. 3 Military District, and Major Campbell, Chief Recruiting Officer for the district, are in the city to-day on official business.

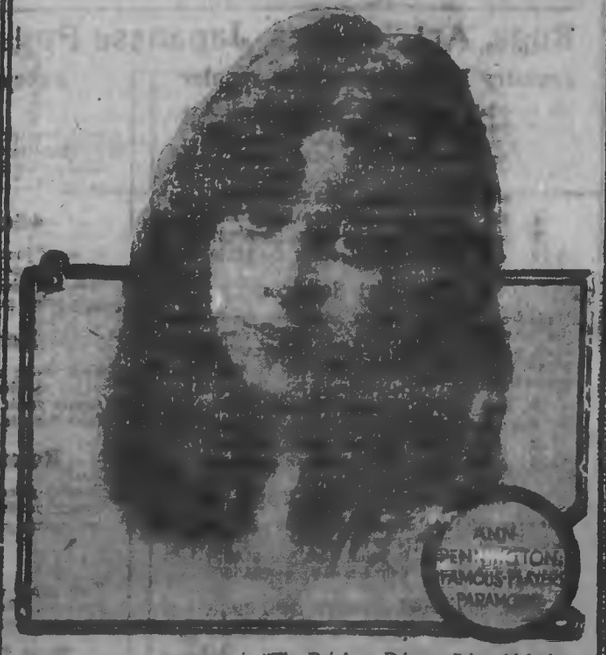
Daniel Frohman presents ANN PENNINGTON in a fascinating photoplay of circus life

"The Rainbow Princess"

By SHANNON FIFE



The court room scenes in "The Rainbow Princess," in which Ann Pennington is being starred by the Famous Players is not the usual motion picture affair. It is an exact replica of the court room at Tarrytown, N.Y., having been reproduced from photographs taken in the local court house. Because of confusion in the issuance of permits to run a circus in the township, several of the members of the Famous Players Company were hailed to court by the sheriff. Realizing that such a place would be ideal for the scenes which he would have to stage later, Director Searle Dawley obtained permission to have his photographer take some pictures of the room. When the members of the company who had been taken to court arrived in the Famous Players studio a few days later and found themselves in the same surroundings from which they thought they had escaped, they were dumbfounded.

French Troops Continue To Sweep Over A Nine Mile Front

Thirteen Thousand Prisoners Taken and Many Guns

French Offensive Extends To Champagne District

Thirteen Thousand Prisoners Taken and Many Guns—Prussian Guard Officers Bitter at Their Troops—Claim the Battle of Vimy Was a Disgraceful Defeat For Their Forces.

MEN WERE DEMORALIZED

PARIS, April 18. — French continue to sweep over a nine-mile front. The offensive is extended to the Champagne district. Thirteen thousand prisoners taken and many guns.

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, April 18. — (By Stewart Lyon, Canadian Press correspondent).—The battle of Vimy was a disgraceful defeat for the enemy troops who took part in the action. This is the strongly held opinion of high born officers of the Prussian Guard captured by patrols on our front, where a whole brigade of this guard has taken the place of the Bavarians, drawn out after the battle.

MEN WERE DEMORALIZED.

An officer who is well known in British Columbia, where he has visited as a big game hunter, says that despite the intensity of the cannonade, of which, it is only fair to say, he had no personal experience, the ridge could have been held against the infantry attack by resolute men who had served on the ridge and who knew the extent of the measures and means of sheltering the force holding it from bombardment. The blow has been the most serious yet inflicted, for the battle not only deprived his country of much war material, but indicated demoralization of the men who garrisoned the ridge.

PRODUCED A PANIC.

Medical returns as to the wounded Germans taken in the battle show that slightly over eight hundred out of a total of four thousand captured required surgical treatment. There may be something in the officer's view that the bombardment produced a panic among the German infantry.

Smoke still rises from Lens, where the enemy seems to be burning everything of value. The mines may be wrecked in the Lens district, but the coal remains and new shafts will be sunk.

The enemy resistance on our front east of the Vimy Ridge has stiffened.

GREATLY ENCOURAGED.

Everybody on this front has been greatly encouraged by the good news from the south of Arras.

During the recent scouting work of the Canadian cavalry a young officer and patrol of less than a dozen men killed or captured several members of the German infantry. A German machine gun then opened fire on the horses. The lieutenant fell wounded but refused the rescue proffered by his sergeant, whom he ordered to run to the infantry lines with the important information gathered during the ride through the enemy's country. The sergeant got through, but the lieutenant is posted as missing and is presumably a prisoner. His self-sacrifice had important results.

GERMAN LINE NO MORE SMASHED UP BY FRENCH

The Fighting is Now Over a Deep, Irregular, Fortified Zone

BERLIN, April 18, via London.—The text of the statement which was issued in summarized from earlier in full is as follows:

"One of the greatest battles of the mighty war, and therefore also in the history of the world, is in progress on the Aisne.

"Since April 6 preparatory fire by the artillery and mine throwers had continued uninterruptedly. By this fire, which was unprecedented in duration, volume, and intensity, the French endeavoured to render our positions ripe for assault, put our batteries out of action, and exhaust our troops.

FRENCH ATTACK LAUNCHED

"Early yesterday morning the French, on a front of forty kilometres wide, launched, with the object of breaking through a deep column attack from Soupir on the Aisne to Betheny, north of Rheims, with the huge weight of strong infantry forces fed by reserves which had been brought up in the rear.

"During the afternoon the French threw fresh masses into the fray and carried out later attacks against our front between the Oise and Conde Sur Aisne. The artillery fight, which was continued to-day, leveled the positions and produced wide, deep craters, rendering an obstinate defence no longer possible.

NO LONGER A LINE.

"The fighting is no longer against a line, but over quite a deep and irregular fortified zone. The battle swayed backwards and forwards around the foremost positions, our object being even if war material were lost, to spare the lives of our forces and inflict heavy, sanguinary losses upon the enemy and thus decisively weaken him. This was achieved, thanks to splendid leadership and the heroic bravery of our troops.

"The great French attempt to break through yesterday the object of which was far-reaching, failed. The sanguinary losses of the enemy were very heavy and more than 2,100 prisoners remained in our hands. Where the enemy of a few places penetrated into our lines the fighting still continues, and fresh enemy attacks are expected.

In the Champagne this morning fighting between Prunay and Auberive has developed, the battle line, thereby extending from the Oise into the Champagne.

"The troops look forward with entire confidence to the coming heavy fighting."

FRANCE TO BREAK ALL HER TREATIES, EVEN WITH ALLIES

LONDON, Eng., April 18—Premier Borden has received intimation of France's intention to denounce her commercial treaties including the Franco-Canadian treaty under which Canada bought fourteen and one half million dollars worth of French goods in 1913-14.

It is understood France has entirely friendly intentions in denouncing these treaties. Her purpose is to clear the ground for the closest possible after-the-war trade with all parts of the Empire and Allied Nations upon a reciprocal basis. Thus she hopes to see Canada supply many classes of metals, iron and steel goods, wooden manufactures, agricultural produce, etc., which France has hitherto obtained from Germany and other enemy countries. Also, she sees chances to secure in some part fifteen million dollars worth of trade which Germany formerly did with Canada.

HOPE BRITAIN WILL FOLLOW

French ministers hope the British government will agree to similar action by denouncing existing British treaties with a view to negotiating reciprocal treaties in place of the present most-favored nation treaties, to which Canada, Australia, and other Dominions always objected.

France's action brings the whole question of the trade relations of the Empire into the foreground. It is most probable that the British and the Dominion Ministers, having accepted the policy of Imperial preference, will now proceed to set up a joint Empire Commission to negotiate new treaties with France, Russia and other Allies, under which Canadian and other Dominions, as well as British exports, will be given a far wider range in these allied markets.

The Canadian representative will presumably be given full power as a member of this treaty-making commission.

Countries Seek Separate Peace With Entente

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, April 18.— Reports persisted here to-day that Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey were all angling for separate peace agreements with the Entente through secret emissaries. The move was said to centre in Switzerland. No confirmation was obtainable here.

SAILORS FEAR COTTON MORE THAN DYNAMITE

At first sight it would seem that dynamite was a cargo to be carefully avoided. But from a sailor's point of view there are far more dangerous loads. He dreads, for instance, a cargo of sugar. Put hundreds of tons of cane sugar in casks in the hold of a vessel and let the ship steam through a belt of hot weather. The odor is sickening. The sailors cannot get the sweet taste out of the mouths. They crave vinegar or lemon juice—anything sour. They lose their appetites and are always glad when a voyage on which the cargo was sugar is over.

Coffee is as disagreeable as sugar, in addition being very dangerous.

Cotton is a really dangerous cargo. If a little oil happens to touch raw cotton the result is what is called spontaneous combustion. A single bale of cotton saturated with such an oil as boiled linseed, and lying at the bottom of the hold, can be compared only to a slow match attached to a bomb.

Acids and other chemicals form dangerous cargoes. Carbide of calcium, for instance, is more dangerous than dynamite. Cetylene gas is made from this chemical, and the gas is constantly given off if the product is exposed to air.

Shipmasters dislike carrying drums of acids where they cannot be reached readily. A Chilean ship put in at the Falkland Islands leaking badly. Her cargo was made up of drums of acid and chalk. The acid had leaked from the drums and mixed with the chalk, forming corbonic acid gas in the hold. This gas is deadly and the crew would not make repairs. Meantime the acid had gathered at the bottom of the hold and eaten away the iron frames of the ship.

A NEW DRUG WORTH $1,000,000

Will Pick Up a Run-down, Weak, Nervous System in 5 to 10 Days

This new drug is a combination of iron and phosphorus, discovered by a Toronto chemist, who is making a fortune out of it. Doctors, hospitals and the public are using it with wonderful success. The iron combines with the phosphorus, forming a new drug called Bonised Phosphorus with iron. Doctor Mainprize says that just as soon as Bonised Phosphorus with iron is taken the iron is almost immediately taken up by the blood, while the phosphorus is absorbed by the nerves. He also says he can take a person who is all run-down, tired, nervous, weak, and build their system up to normal strength in 5 to 10 days, by giving one to three of these tablets after meals and at bedtime. It has of late been discovered that 90 per cent. of all ailments susceptible to the human race can be traced to impurities in the blood and weak, broken-down nerves. To not be taking all sorts of laxatives and poisonous tonics, which only ruin your system, go to the root of all this trouble and strengthen your blood, restore your nerves and your digestion by taking this new drug. Bonised Phosphorus with iron is dispensed by one druggist in each city. F. C. Webber is the agent for Peterborough.

Of course it is absent mindedness when you forget, but its gross neglect when your wife forgets.

Markets Were Very Irregular

Flour Advanced Thirty to Fifty Cents—The Cattle Market

Markets were very irregular yesterday, acting violently both ways, up and down. The range between high and low at Chicago was 15c. Winnipeg finally closed practically steady with Monday's close, while Chicago closed 11 1-2c lower than Monday on the May option. The fluctuations were due to the action of the Canadian Government in removing the duty on wheat, and to proposed measures for control of all foodstuffs at Washington. Flour again advanced 30c to 50c.

Manitoba wheat — No. 1 northern, $2.50; No. 2, $2.45 1-4; No. 3, $2.40; No. 4, $2.30 1-2; track, bay ports.

Manitoba oats — No. 2 C.W., 80 1-2c; No. 3, 79 3-4c; extra No. 1 feed 79 3-4c; No. 1 feed, 78 1-2c; all rail delivered.

American corn — $1.49, nominal; subject to embargo.

Ontario oats — No. 2 white, 73c to 75c; No. 3, white, 72c to 74c.

Ontario wheat — No. 2, winter, per car lot, $2.30 to $2.32; No. 2, $2.28 to $2.30, according to freights outside.

Peas—No. 2, nominal; car lots, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $1.85 to $1.87.

Manitoba flour — First patents, in jute bags, $11.70; second patents, $11.20; strong bakers, $10.80.

Ontario flour — Winter, according to sample, $9.90 to $10, track, Toronto, prompt shipments.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts, $41 to $43; bran, $39; feed flour, per bag, $2.80 to $2.96; middlings, $44 to $46.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2 $11.50 to $12.50; mixed, $9 to $11; straw, $7 to $7.50.

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 60 cars, with 756 cattle, 445 calves, 1,285 hogs, and 108 sheep and lambs.

With light offerings yesterday there was but a moderately active demand and trade was decidedly slow. There was an easier tone all round, and prices are slightly lower.

Calves are 50c to 75c lower.

Sheep and lambs firm.

Hogs are easier and down about 15c from Monday. A few choice quality fetching 5c better than the average.

PLATTSBURG IDEA GROWS.

PANAMA, April 17.—Civilian employees of the Panama Canal have initiated a Plattsburg idea movement at Gatun. Instruction in elementary tactics is being given by officers of the Thirty-third infantry, stationed there to guard the locks and spillway of atun Lake, and this work is to be supplemented by a series of popular ectures on various branches of military activity.

The civilians on the canal zone have generally shown a great deal of interest in arrangements for the defence and many have volunteered for field service. In case of need probably they will be placed on guard duty, relieving the regular soldiers to occupy the trenches well beyond the limits of the canal.

FOUR DOCTORS DISAGREED

Pains Disappeared After Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wilmington, Del.—"I was suffering from a terrible backache and pains in my side, with bearing down pains and was very nervous. I was always tired, always drowsy, never could get enough sleep and could not eat. I had four doctors and each told me something different. I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. I got good results and I now feel better than I have felt for years and I am gaining in weight. I can gladly recommend it to all women."—Mrs. GEORGE W. SEBOLD, 1611 West 4th Street, Wilmington, Del.

Backache and bearing down pains are danger signals which every woman should heed. Remove the cause of these aches and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that good old root and herb medicine. Thousands of women have testified to its virtues.

For forty years it has been making women strong, curing backache, nervousness, ulceration and inflammation, weakness, displacements, irregularity and periodic pain.

JOHN D.'S BROTHER DEAD.

Frank Rockefeller Passed Away in Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 16.—Frank Rockefeller, seventy-two years of age, youngest brother of John D. Rockefeller, died quite suddenly in his apartments in Hollenden Hotel from a stroke of paralysis and blood clot on the brain as a result of a relapse he sustained following an intestinal operation a month ago.

SAYS GERMANS FEAR INTERNAL UPRISING

NEW YORK, April 15.—There was in New York yesterday, staying at one of the large hotels adjacent to Times Square, a person of high military rank in the service of the Allies. He is in this country ostensibly on leave of absence.

As you must have concluded here, the Russian revolution was not an overnight impulse, he said. Had it been so there would have been terrible bloodshed. It worked like a woundup clock. When the clock hand arrived at the hour a wheel whirred and the clock struck. That was all.

"The revolution had been planned for years. At the beginning of the war it had taken concrete shape, but was delayed because the people wanted war, and so did the Czar. The Czar was backed in this popular movement by the then Minister of Foreign Affairs; there have been two since—and war was declared despite the pro-German Council.

"Unfortunately, shortly after the war got under way the Russian troops and the Russian people discovered that they were likely to be betrayed. Pro-German influence was at work. There were rumors that peace might be bought and sold over the heads of the people and the troops. Then came the so-called munitions scandal, of which, now that the United States is practically our ally, it may be permissible to say a few words.

"Considering the vast quantities of munitions bought from this country and the alleged shortage of the same at the Rusian front, you may wonder where they went to. There was a story in the American papers that the Russian arsenals were full of ammunition which did not fit the Russian guns. This was not correct. Such ammunition as there was did fit the guns, but the regular Imperial regime ads were all but depleted. There was delay in the delivery of the munitions not traceable to the American works, but to the seemingly deliberate actions of some Russian officers, sympathizers with the Imperial regime. In Russia, too, the revolutionary sympathizers had secretly stored large quantities of munitions against the revolution which they knew was impending. After the revolution—was over 600 machine guns with ammunition were revealed in such secret storage.

"Those who had planned the revolution thought the war would have ended before this time and the revolution against the Imperial regime be under way. When the war showed no signs of ending and when conditions under this regime and at the front became unbearable, the alarum of that clock was just set a little ahead and it went off as per schedule. The results attest the level-headedness with which the whole movement was planned."

REGARDING RASPUTIN'S MURDER.

In passing, this officer of high military rank referred to the killing of the monk Rasputin, the branding of former Minister of War Soukhomlinoff as a "traitor" and the recent imprisonment in the fortress of Peter and Paul of Mme. Soukhomlinoff.

"The murder of Rasputin," he said, "had little to do with the case. All sorts of darkly romantic stories have been told of the man's influence on the Czar and how he employed it. As a matter of fact, Rasputin was not a bad sort. His weakness lay in trusting his friends overmuch, as did General Soukhomlinoff. The Prince who murdered Rasputin, by the way, had no English blood in him. He was a full-blooded Russian Prince, and, also it so happens, that he was just crazy enough to be utterly irresponsible. As for Soukhomlinoff, he was a very fine old gentleman. In arresting his wife the Russians are getting down to the meat of the thing, just as they did when they placed restraint upon Nicholas Romanoff's wife.

"But to return to the revolution. A fear was entertained by the troops and the Russian people that if the alarum clock were not set a little ahead the pro-German element, which was slowly but surely sapping the earlier enthusiasm of the Imperial regime, would win out. Had the revolution not taken place when it did, I feel sure that German overtures—you must emphasize the word to get its precise sense—would have succeeded and a separate peace would have been bought and sold. The Allies feared this toward the close of the Romanoff dynasty, and no doubt Germany dwelt upon the possibility with pleasant anticipation.

"Then the United States, accidentally or as Fate would have it, took a hand. Just how much America's threat ened entry into the war had to do with the revolution you will know when the conflict is ended; probably not before.

"The fact that the United States and Russia had been more or less at loggerheads for years over the Jewish question, the fact that this difference was to be wiped out under the new regime, and the splendid coincidence, if you care to term it so, that the great sister republic was the first to recognize the new Russian democracy—all made for results which must have been annoying to Germany. An added and decisive turn to the wheel of circumstance was given by the threatened entry of the United States and her vast resources into the war scales on the Allied side of the balance.

NO SEPARATE PEACE.

"Now, if it is not that the Germans are retreating toward their own western border to be ready against an internal revolt against Prussianism, inspired by the example of Russia and the message of President Wilson, it (is surmised that as a last resort Germany plans a drive against Petrograd.

"Germany could do this, I believe, and if they once hammered at the gates of Petrograd a separate peace might be forced, were it not for those international events which have a tremendous bearing upon the future of the Russian republic. And the Russian people, now their own masters and servants, are to-day doubly determined to fight it out to a finish. It is hardly likely that, having already achieved so much for their future welfare, the Russian people would consider any compromise when the Entente Cordiale between her and the other great allied nations, particularly the United States, is so full of rich promise.

Field Pieces and Ammunition Secured Now Turned Other Way.

With the British Armies Afield, April 11.—Swept forward by a storm of shells the like of which has never before been seen even in this greatest of wars, the British advance jammed its way still further through the German wall of steel to-day.

It was possible to-day to understand in a way why the British losses in the great spring offensive to date have been far less than the minimum anticipated. British artillery in its concentrated fury of discharge literally churned the ground the Germans held. It was the same story over again that was first told when the Germans started their retreat. They had to go back, British artillery had made their positions a horror, a shambles, a sea of hummocky earth earth, pockmarked by craters.

A Cyclonic Fire.

German prisoners to-day led back behind the lines declared the British fire was so cyclonic that many of their officers fled for their lives at the first titanic outburst. The terrific hell of shellfire had a perceptible effect on the morale of the Germans.

"As fighters, they are finished," remarked one British officer to-day who had been fighting constantly for two days. "Picked men faced us, but we were better than they. The picked Germans ran both ways from the middle when the assault began. Some ducked towards us, holding up their hands. They were hungry and nerve shattered by their experience. Some showed the black bread that had constituted their ration, and complained it was all they had to eat.

"Tired of War."

"Others declared they were hungry and 'tired of war.' More than one declared the Kaiser was 'finished,' others cursed their imperial ruler, and all of them were very well satisfied to remain as prisoners and escape the hell of British fire."

So irresistible was the British sweep, so tremendously strong its "punch" that the Germans were at many places literally swept off their feet. At one part of the line to-day I saw a German field gun in action—but served by British Tommies and its German ammunition fired against the Boches. The gun and a plentiful supply of amunition had been abandoned in first-class condition by Germans swept away by the dash of the British advance.

TO ENLIST BRITISH.

United States About to Open Way for England to Get Them.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The object of the Administration measure to authorize recruiting by the Entente Allies in the United States is especially to benefit Great Britain, it was learned to-day. Great Britain, which has some 100,000 subjects in America, a good proportion of whom might be available for service in the army, has no reservists while her allies who do have them have thus possessed an advantage over Great Britain, in that they could call their subjects in this country to the colours, and England could not.

The legislation will remove the disability of Great Britain in this respect, enabling her to recruit soldiers in the United States from among her own subjects and possibly from Americans as well. The legislation will not however, enable any foreign Government to conscript its subjects in this country as this would authorize France, for example, to conscript American citizens.

OPEN NOSTRILS! END A COLD OR CATARRH

How To Get Relief When Head and Nose are Stuffed Up.

Count fifty! Your cold in head or catarrh disappears. Your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more snuffling, hawking, mucous discharge, dryness or headache; no strangling for breat at night.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist and apply a little of this fragrant antiseptic cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothing and healing the swollen or inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Head colds and catarrh yield like magic. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable. Relief is sure.

Bourbon Kings' Palace Home of Mutilated Now

NAPLES, Italy. — The war has turned the palace of the Bourbon kings of Naples into a home for mutilated soldiers.

Around the exquisite marble table, where the guests of the "roi soleil" of Naples dined in the garden on hot summer nights—the ladies in powdered head-dress and pannier skirts, the men with lace at their sleeves and embroidered coats—to-day are gathered the pitiable fragments of humanity that war has left in its wake.

There are neither candles nor massive silver, neither sweetmeats nor rare wines. The Italian government allows 70 cents a day for their lodging and maintenance, and food is high in Naples.

WINNER GETS A CENT.

The marble table on warm days in the garden is the recreation centre of the mutilated in their worn and faded uniforms. Before each is an oblong cardboard placard some of whose spaces are numbered.

One of the men (he must be one of those who have lost a leg, for the one armed cannot do the trick) shakes a basket bottle and turns out a numbered counter. In the singsong Neapolitan dialect he cries the number. The one whose placard bears it covers the space with a bit of glass. Whoever covers all his spaces first wins a cent from each of the others.

Those who have no hands at all have grown skillful in flipping their bits of glass on to the placard by means of a bent pin stuck in the empty sleeve.

ALSO HOURS OF WORK.

This is recreation. There are also hours of work. Once sumptuous chambers of the royal palace have been turned into schoolrooms in the month the hospital has been running. In one those who wish are taught tailoring, in another shoemaking—the legless naturally, for one must have two hands to make shoes or clothes.

Those who have lost an arm are generally taught telegraphy or typewriting. But many of the latter must begin further back than that and learn to read and write first. For reading and writing in southern Italy are no common accomplishments, so there is a school room, where the alphabet and multiplication table figure on the blackboard in front of those grown children who have known only to give an arm or a leg to their country.

And an arm or a leg to those simple peasants is livelihood, their own and their families."

WHY ARE MOSQUITOS?

Baffling Query That Interests Both the Young and the Old.

One of the very first questions concerning the immutable laws of nature that occur to the inquisitive juvenile mind is "Why are mosquitos?" In the course of an average intellectual development, we should say, this baffling query is first propounded at about the age of 3. The infant passes through his youth, early manhood, middle age, and old age, annually seeking in vain a satisfactory answer.

To most of the other problems offered by life he can, with reasonable diligence, find more or less satisfactory solutions, but at this one he sticks. And so he passes into the sere and yellow, and at the age of 96 or thereabouts, with countenance deeply wrinkled by the perennial strain of this great riddle, as the breath of life gently flickers away he murmurs in senile wonder: "Why are mosquitos?"

Moral philosophers, of course, meaning those who have more morality than philosophy, have undertaken to explain the purposes of mosquitos. On the supposition a theory that nothing in nature is without a beneficent purpose, we used to be told learnedly that the mosquito consumed malaria germs and other things in the air, and so proved himself a kind friend to man. In view of the good thus conferred, the incidental stinging done by the insect was to be considered lightly.

People who used to talk this way have been doing less of it in recent years, having learned, perhaps, that it was nonsense. It has been demonstrated that the mosquito's favourite habit is to load up his system with poison of some sort or another and then seek out some human victim to inoculate. From all appearances this is the only joy that life affords to a mosquito and it is all that is accomplished by him during his brief lifetime, except to provide an ample number of descendants to carry on the work.

Now even the most foolish optimist would scarcely venture to claim that the transmission of disease and suffering to humanity is a "beneficent purpose." If the mosquito has a beneficent purpose it can be no other than to serve as a chastening influence upon the lives of men. As fleas exist only to keep dogs from forgetting that they are dogs, so mosquitos may be designed by nature to induce a proper humility in mankind and also to impress upon the race the tremendous importance of trifles.

A close acquaintance with mosquitos, such as is rendered possible by a summer residence in Providence, effectually shatters several wild and extravagant notions that have somehow developed concerning the tribe. There is, for instance, the notion that surgical work on the human race is only performed by the loud-singing mosquitos and that these are the females of the species. This is ridiculous, and no one with a decent respect for the cause of Feminism can cherish such a preposterous delusion. Possibly the loud singers are the females and the comparatively modest and silent ones may be the hempecked males, but the latter are quite as vicious in their surgery, and even more exasperating because of their sneaking manners.

There is also a pleasant illusion that screens constitute adequate fortifications against mosquitos in the house. There is nothing in it. Whether the insects use the wires as horizontal bars and by some contortionists gift swing themselves through the small openings, or whether they have discovered the secret of the fourth dimension, no one seems to know. But they do come through screens, in large numbers and apparently without difficulty.

If anything favourable may be said on this subject, it is in the interests of sport. In this city, from the middle of July to the middle of September, the dominant indoor sport is mosquito hunting. Possibly it is a sporting instinct that prompts the practical discontinuance of the municipal anti-mosquito campaign soon after the summer is well started.

The best weapon for this purpose is an all-wire fly-swatter. The mosquito is a gamey insect, as elusive as a trout, and the hunt makes for hot work, but an expert hunter can make the hour yield a rich return. There is a subtle fascination about the sport, but without prejudice it may be said that men are usually better hunters than women. The latter do not seem to find in it the same spiritual exhilaration that they get from swatting flies. In the zest of the fly hunt the lady of the house never hesitates to swat the bald spot on the back of friend husband's head, but she would seldom do this for a mere mosquito.—Providence Journal.

Was Anaemic
FOR OVER A YEAR

Anaemia, or blood turning to water, is caused by the heart becoming deranged, and if the heart becomes weakened it cannot pump the blood as it should. As a result the blood becomes impoverished, and it loses its nourishing qualities. The face becomes pale and thin, and the lips bloodless. There is a weakness, tiredness and loss of weight.

When those suffering from thin or watery blood start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills they can see a change from the outset.

Every dose introduces into the blood those vital elements necessary to make it rich and red. The pale cheeks take on the rosy hue of health, the weight increases, and the whole being thrills with a new life.

Mrs. R. J. Grey, Fredericton, N. B., writes: "When I was a girl working at general house work I overtaxed my strength and became completely run down. For over a year I was very bad with anaemia. A friend told me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I got a box and when it was done I decided to get six more. When I had taken them I gained not only in strength, but in flesh and colour, and best of all was good health."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box; three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

PRUSSIANS EXPECT FUTURE BENEFITS FROM SUBMARINES

LONDON. — It would idle to deny that the initial success of the intensified submarine campaign has filled the German nation with new hope. By its agency the "chief enemy"—to use the designation to Britain—is to be reduced to subjection before Germany itself has been brought to the point of collapse. Military defeat does not—so far as press and public utterances indicate—enter into German calculations, but the spectre of defeat by starvation is ever present. Hence for the last month the U-boats and the "food famine" have overshadowed all other subjects in the German newspapers, and the exploits of the one have been eagerly served up as a set-off to the privations of the other.

The editorials dealing with the submarine war are for the most part compounded of the Schadenfreude and "frightfulness," seasoned with an extravagant optimism regarding its possibilities. But an exception is made by that well known writer Herr George Bernhard, who as the political editor of the Vossische Zeitung leaves the hurling of fire and fury to lesser scribes, and essays to forecast the after war consequences which the new campaign will have for the allies. He says:

A lie has no legs, but it never feels the need of them while on its travels.

Shortly after marrying a widow a man discovers the true meaning of the deadly parallel.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

He Laughs Best Who Laughs Last

By SADIE OLCOTT

Dan Eversham entered a railway station, bought his ticket and, satchel in hand, climbed the steps of a parlor car. His seat was next to a very pretty girl.

Outside on the platform was a party of youngsters who had been seeing off a newly married couple. Passing by Dan Eversham's window, where he sat near the pretty girl, one of the party threw a handful of rice against his windowpane. Then all of them waved goodbys and laughingly passed on.

This bit of fun did not trouble Dan much; but, seeing the pretty girl beside him blush a deep red, he felt sorry for her.

"I suppose," he said to her, "that those persons think that they perpetrated a very good joke."

"It was horrid of them."

This was the beginning of a conversation that lasted till long after the train started. Meanwhile those in the car, who had seen the rice throwing did not doubt that they had a bride and groom aboard. Dan was got up with sufficient resplendence for a groom, and the neat traveling dress of the girl was appropriate for a bride. Then, too, Dan was altogether too polite and attentive to have been long married, and since they were traveling together they were not supposed to be bachelor and spinster.

In the seat opposite the girl sat a woman from New England. There is nothing more interesting to a woman than a bride, and this person was a motherly creature who felt her heart go out to the young thing who had but just embarked in the sea of matrimony, a sea that the Yankee had found a troubled one. She entered into conversation with the supposed bride.

"Nice day," was her entering wedge.

"Quite so," was the laconic reply.

"Going far?"

"I shall travel all day."

"You must be tired?"

"Why do you think so?"

The girl saw at once that the party who had thrown the rice had given a wrong impression. But instead of correcting it, which would be embarrassing, she looked down at an open novel in her lap and said nothing. The woman was not to be put off.

"You're the image of a girl I knew in Salem. I wonder if you're any relation to her. Your name ain't Twitchell, is it?"

"No, it isn't Twitchell."

"Or Saulsbury?"

"No," and to shut off further inquiry the girl told her her name was Effie Trobridge.

"I guess it's got somep'n else to it now."

"Something else! What else can it need?"

"Wall, I guess it don't need nothin' else, but our laws, made for men, force us women to give up our own names and take on a man's—that is, when we tie ourselves up to one of 'em. If I was you I wouldn't do it. You've got a nice name, and I wouldn't take on any more. What's your married name?"

"I'm not married."

The woman looked at her surprised, then said in a low voice:

"I know that brides the first day of married life don't like to own up to it. They think nobody spots 'em fur bein' jist married. But, laws, any one would know that you two was jist married."

Dan, who heard this dialogue, was trying to keep from laughing and was now obliged to swing his chair to face the window, presenting his back to the inquirer. The supposed bride, seeing a number of persons who sat near her enjoying her discomfort, blushed to the roots of her hair and said sternly to her tormentor:

"Madam, you have made a mistake. The gentleman is a stranger to me. I never saw him before he took his chair in this car."

"Oh, land!" exclaimed the Yankee, throwing up her hands. "I've known lots o' lyin' done by brides to hide that they are brides, but I never heard anything like that."

The girl turned to Dan as much as to say, "Help me out of this."

"I regret," he said gallantly, "to confirm the young lady's statement."

A dozen persons sitting near laughed outright.

Dan lost his equanimity, making matters worse. "I'll bet any one here," he said, "that I'm a single man and that I never saw this young lady before today."

He drew forth a fat pocketbook and began to count out ten dollar bills. Not a person interested but thought he was a bridegroom determined to stave off being recognized as such. They laughed all the louder. It was very amusing. Dan looked at the girl, and the girl looked at Dan. He tipped the wink and said to the others:

"I suppose we'll have to own up. Now for a wedding present."

Taking off his hat, he passed through the car receiving contributions. By this time so many persons had become interested in what was going on that a goodly sum was collected, which Dan poured into the girl's lap.

"If you don't want it," he said, "give it to charity."

"I'll give it to charity," was the sharp reply.

A few minutes later Dan's station was called, and, saying goodby to his bride, he got out of the car, leaving her to pursue her journey alone.

Then the contributors laughed again, but a different laugh from before.

Army of Men and Boys To Work On American Farms

WASHINGTON, April 14. — Proposals for enlistment of a work army of two million men and boys for agricultural services, and other drastic steps to increase food production during the war, were given enthusiastic encouragement at the Department of Commerce. Secretary Houston ordered wide publicity given to resolutions adopted at the recent St. Louis conference of agricultural experts looking to production of greater crops as an emergency measure.

They recommended that Congress appropriate $25,000,000 for use by the Secretary of Agriculture in such a campaign.

"Upon the farmer rests in large measure the final responsibility of winning the war," declared the resolutions made public here.

"Because of the world shortage of food, it is scarcely possible that the production of staple crops by the farmer of the United States can be too great this year."

It is recommended that boys under military age and men beyond the age and those physically disqualified should be enrolled in the national army for labour in production of food, munitions and supplies. Other recommendations are for creation of an agricultural body under the Council of National Defence to supervise agricultural matters, and for the vesting of wide authority in the Secretary of Agriculture to regulate and standardize food production and distribution.

CHICAGO, April 14.—More than 600,000 boys from Chicago can be released on Monday from the high schools of Chicago, provided they take a pledge to work on farms in Cook County or enter some employment by which the food supply of the nation may be increased.

The county superintendent has also given authorization to the 200 school boards of Cook County to close immediately all grades above the sixth in rural schools, in order that the pupils may be utilized on the farms.

Though he is often derided it is well to bear in mind that everybody's friend is nobody's enemy.

BIBLE DEFENDED BY BILLY SUNDAY FOR NEW YORKERS

DISAPPOINTED BECAUSE COLLECTION AS NOT LARGER—ATTACKS HIGHBROWS.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The attendance at the Billy Sunday meeting yesterday afternoon was so small that the audience merely dotted the benches of the huge tabernacle.

At night, however, there was a large crowd, and altogether Sunday addressed upwards of 20,000 people. But the collection was negligible—so small that the amount was not made public. Sunday declares he has hopes of New York.

"Some day before I die," he said, "I hope to go to some town where they'll throw in the whole amount necessary on the first day of the meetings. This country is lousy with money. It would be a mere bagatelle for this community to toss it in, and I'm almost ashamed to ask for it. However, ushers, go to it, get all they've got."

Sunday's afternoon talk contained little of the high and lofty tumbling of which he is physically capable, but his words were as characteristically powerful as usual. He flayed the liquor traffic, the double life, domestic scenes, and a long list of minor evils to which the flesh is heir. He strode from one end of the platform to the other, pounded the table, waved his dripping handkerchief, and stood on one leg, but he kept at least one foot on the floor at all times.

EVENING MEETING.

Billy rose to his greatest oratical heights in expounding the Biblical text, "Woe unto you when all men speak well of you." The same sort of slangy, humorous, powerful language, which had drawn only cripples of laughter from the comparatively little group, which heard the afternoon sermon, brought a greater volume of cheering and clapping from the larger crowd in the evening. And Sunday himself was not as quiet as he had been in the afternoon, though he is never exactly static. With hands ever working in emphasis on his direct statements, with feet whose agility partook of that of the trained lightweight, the former baseball player tore the cover off the ball, figuratively speaking, and pounded the devil in various forms all over the lot once dedicated to the pounding of Yankee pitchers.

"I want to say to New York right now at the kick-off that I believe the Bible is the word of God from cover to cover," he said, "and when some highbrow big wig comes and says: 'Mr. Sunday, are you aware that the consensus of the latest scholarship has so and so. I say 'When the consensus of the latest scholarship says one thing and the Word of God another, the latest scholarship can go to hell.' Do you think I am going to follow one of the big wigs who got his philosophy from the beer halls of Heideberg? If so, I say, good night."

"There are a lot of you who feel no more gratitude to God for the food you shovel down your old oesophagus than has the hog swilling garbage at the trough."

"The devil is a smooth guy. He's been practising on this old world for 6,000 years and he never get peritonitis nor appendicitis."

HAD INDIGESTION

COULD KEEP NOTHING ON STOMACH

After a meal you feel that you must get rid of that nasty, bilious, burning sensation; that souring and rising of the food which is so unpleasant and in many cases very painful.

It is not necessary for you to be troubled with indigestion when Burdock Blood Bitters may be so easily obtained. This old and well-known remedy, which is a combination of nature's best roots, herbs, barks and berries will cure indigestion and all stomach troubles.

Mr. Lazare Savoy, Pokemouche, N. B., writes: "About two years ago I was troubled with indigestion that bad I could keep nothing on my stomach. I was sorely disappointed in everything I tried to relieve me. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles and can now eat anything that is set in front of me."

That grand old medicine, B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that it is the best cure for all stomach troubles.

PREPARING THE SOIL

First Things to Do in Getting the Garden Ready.

FEW TOOLS ARE NECESSARY

Information on Digging, Planting, and Transplanting Which Will Help the Amateur to Get Started Right.

(By S. C. JOHNSTON, Vegetable Specialist, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The soil is the workshop in which is found many of the constituents which go to make up plant food. These foods must be so treated that they will be in such a condition that they may be readily taken up by the slender rootlets of the plant so that the plant will thrive and mature.

If possible add some manure to your soil and work it up well before planting time. This manure may be obtained possibly from various sources close to your home; livery stables or firms dealing entirely with manure would be willing to supply it at a reasonable rate. On heavy soils it is particularly recommended that heavy applications be made in order that the soil will be of a much finer condition so that it will retain a large quantity of plant food. Many of the garden soils will be benefited by the application of lime. This may be secured from various sources such as the contractor and builder, lime and cement dealers, and may be in the form of fresh lime or even slaked lime. This lime should be scattered over the surface of the soil after the digging has taken place, and a sufficient amount should be applied to make the surface of the ground fairly white. This should be gently raked into the soil just previous to the planting of the seed.

DIGGING. It is necessary in all gardens that the soil be turned over at one time or another during the early spring in order that it may become dry and fined. We find that many of the troubles of the backyard gardens are caused by digging the soil too early in the spring. One of the easiest ways to tell when the soil is ready for digging is to gather a handful and press the fingers over it. If the soil in the hand sets in a somewhat compact-mass the tin is not far enough advanced for commencing digging. If, however, the soil falls apart into several small parts we may rest assured that it is perfectly safe to dig.

TOOLS. It is unnecessary for the backyard gardener to purchase many tools for this first garden. Those who have been growing vegetables in their backyard for a number of years gradually add to their supply until after three or four years they have accumulated many special tools which are suited for particular operations in the garden. Complaints are sometimes heard that the expense necessary to commence a backyard garden is very great. Many very good backyard gardens have been made and excellent harvests obtained with very few and comparatively inexpensive tools. A digging fork or spade, a rake, and a hoe are about all the tools essential at the outset, and these are inexpensive.

PLANTING OF SEEDS. When it has been determined that the soil is suitable for digging and the weather is nice and warm, it is necessary that the seeds be planted in the garden. As fine a surface as possible should be secured, so that the little seeds will quickly germinate and grow. To sow the seeds quickly, evenly, and thinly requires considerable practice and care. The row may be made straight by stretching fairly tight a piece of string from one portion of the garden to another and using this as a guide for making the trenches or drills for placing the seeds in. After the seeds have been dropped in they should at once be covered with soil by gently drawing some of the loose surface soil in over the seeds with a piece of stick or with the hands. This soil should, however, not be heaped up over the row but should be placed evenly with the rest of the garden soil and packed down.

THINNING. Backyard gardeners should not attempt to grow immense quantities at first. It is necessary to plant sufficient seed to secure a good crop of plants, the more slender plants being thinned out soon after they are above ground so as to assure reasonable room for a good crop of healthier plants. The thinning should be commenced when the plants are from one to two inches in height and should not be left until the plants have become long and slender, because if they are left one plant simply tries to smother another one out; whereas, if they are thinned to the proper distance they will have room to grow to their required size of maturity.

TRANSPLANTING. The city dweller will find it almost impossible to grow plants of first-class quality of such vegetables as tomatoes, celery, or cabbages unless he has other appliances such as a hot-bed, which enables him to start the seeds very early in the spring and some time before they could have been planted out in the garden, in order that he may secure early crops. It is good practice for him to purchase plants which may be taken to the backyard garden and transplanted or set out in the garden at a required distance and good healthy crops grown from them, and in all cases when purchasing plants only sturdy and vigorous growing plants should be accepted. Tomato plants to give the best results should be eight inches high, and the stalk should be at least as thick as a lead pencil and thicker if possible. If the plants already are in bloom this may be considered a very good feature. The root system of the plants should be large and having fine rootlets. When transplanting individual plants care should be taken to make sure that quite a good deal of soil is left around the root of each plant.

WATTERSON OFFERS SLOGAN.

"To Hell with the Hapsburgs and Hohenzollerns!" is His Suggestion.

OYSTER BAY, N.Y., April 16.—"To Hell with the Hapsburgs and Hohenzollerns!" was suggested to-day to the Americans War Slogan Committee of local citizens by Colonel Henry Watterson of Louisville, Ky., as his idea of an appropriate battle cry for Americans in the present war. In a letter received this morning from Louisville, "Marse Henry's" contribution to the slogan contest was accompanied by the clipping of an editorial printed in his paper. The Louisville Courier Journal.

The editorial occupied a place beside Watterson's tribute to Colonel Roosevelt in the editorial headed "Red Blood versus Red Tape." Outlining the features of the slogan contest, the Louisville editor concludes: "If this be a contest for the royalties of patriotism, count The Courier Journal out. We disdain the cash and furnish the battle cry. Now what is the matter with: 'To Hell with the Hapsburgs and Hohenzollerns!'"

ORGANIZED RAG COLLECTING.

British Government Starts a Nation-wide Movement.

LONDON, April 16.—Rag collecting in a nation-wide house-to-house basis is being organized by the Government through the National Service Department. London alone is expected to furnish 5,000,000 pounds of rags before the spring housecleaning season is over.

The official title of the new movement is the "National House-to-House Rag Collection." A woman organizer is being appointed for every district for every important town, and she will enlist the services of Boy Scouts and other volunteers as collectors. A corps of women workers will make house-to-house calls to explain the campaign to housewives and enlist their help.

"Every woman who throws away rags is helping the enemy," says the committee's appeal. "Every square inch of rag which contains cotton can be made into paper. Every scrap of rag which is made of wool can be turned into new clothes."

Lady Amherst and Mrs. Tennant have given the committee houses which will be used as central collecting stations for the London district.

More Enthusiastic Reports On Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Peterboro' People Are Putting This Great Restorative to the Test—Two Interesting Letters To-day

Peterborough, Ont., March 13.—The people of this city were never so interested in any medical treatment as they are to-day in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The Examiner has been reporting cures daily, and this has kept the people talking about their experiences until everybody seems to know about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a most satisfactory restorative for a run-down system.

Almost everybody feels the need of restorative treatment at one time or another. The business man and school boy, as well as sister and mother at home join in praising this well-known medicine.

Mrs. Craig, 45 Macdonnell street, Peterborough, Ont., writes:

"Several years ago when my family was small, I became run down and weak and was bothered with palpitation of the heart. I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and found such good results that I continued the treatment until I had taken about four or five boxes. It helped me and made me feel better afterward.

Since then, when I feel that I need a tonic, I take two or three boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, finding the same good results each time. I can also speak highly of your Kidney-Liver Pills. I have great confidence in the use of Dr. Chase's Medicines as family remedies, and we always keep some of them in the house."

Mrs. J. Freeman, 538 Patterson Street, Peterborough, Ont., writes:

"Last spring, my daughter, aged eleven years, had a serious attack of heart trouble. For three weeks she was in bed under the Doctor's care. After she got up and was going around, we found she did not sleep well at night. We decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with her, so I procured some and commenced giving it to her. We found it benefitted her greatly, and that she did no wake up frightened in the night, as she used to. I continued the treatment, and at present she is still taking them. She sleeps splendidly, and has not had any trouble with her heart since she commenced this treatment. I have recommended the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to many of my friends.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

AMERICANS IN EUROPE URGE IMMEDIATE ACTION

"Fight to the Last Man."

"Great Britain entered the war only after hesitation up to the last minute, and only when every diplomatic resource was exhausted. The German march into Belgium was the deciding factor in British opinion, and the immediate cause of British action. The British were absolutely unprepared for war, except on the side of the navy, which was at its customary phase of efficiency. Can we blame Britain for honouring her signature to the guarantee of Belgian neutrality?"

The above statement is contained in a long and eloquent letter "From Americans Abroad to Americans at Home," signed by many of the principal business men, American born, now resident in Europe, who urge their country to fight to the last man, "with the other enlightened Powers, in the interests of democratic liberty and international right."

Not only did Britain enter the war to vindicate Belgium, but she will certainly never lay down the sword till Belgium has her liberty, and the fullest restitution it is the power of Germany to make.

The plight of that little country to-day is more deplorable than ever. In some towns they are reduced to eating cats and dogs, not because the Relief Commission is inoperative—it is working as efficiently as ever—but because the great outside world is becoming apathetic to Belgium's needs, and will not buy it bread in sufficient quantities.

Canadian Relief Committees are doing their utmost to ensure that their own country at least shall not be guilty of indifference to Belgium's tragic troubles, and redoubling their efforts to raise money for bread and soup. Will you help them Send a contribution to the nearest Relief Committee, or direct to the Belgian Relief Fund, 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S TWO-PIECE SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

Not less than that year, the sport skirt will have very strong position for the season ahead, so if you have not gone in for sports to any extent heretofore you may be persuaded to keep up with the times, especially since the materials are very attractive and the designs in skirts most appealing.

The illustration shows an advance model in a two piece skirt that was designed especially for striped material. The back yoke is a feature of interest; it is made prominent with braid to bind the sides and lower edge. A raised waistline is used for this model which shows a tailored seam down the centre front and back. Braid adds novelty to the front sides, extending to hip depth. The closing is made at the left side of the front, and the lower edge measures, in size 24, 2¾ yards.

Black and white striped worsted is very smart for early spring, and there are silks in great assortment for you to make a choice. In making this skirt it is important that one takes care not to stretch the edges. With very little work and at slight cost you can have the garment for your own by securing the pattern and copying as directed.

The skirt pattern No. 8,140 cuts in sizes 24 to 30 waist. To make in size 24 requires 2¾ yards of 36 inch material and 2¾ yards of braid.

To obtain the pattern send [illegible] to the office of this publication

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

'RICH POOR BOY" TO REMAIN WITH HIS REAL PARENTS

NEW YORK, April 16.—Paternal pride has risen in the breast of Wm. Petconk and he to rear the "rich little poor boy" as his own son and "maybe he'll be President of the United States."

A series of misunderstandings has clouded the unusual case. After Petconk and his wife had taken the boy from the home of Leo D. Shire, at No. 41 West Eighty-second street, the little fellow did not seem satisfied with his humbler surroundings in the Bronx flat, at No. 998 Union Avenue. The Petconk family let the Shires know they could have the boy back, the only provision being that the real parents could see him occasionally.

In some manner not explained a discussion of money arose. Both Petconk and his wife denied they ever intimated that they would accept a penny. In a statement issued by the Shire lawyers Mr. Shire is quoted as saying that "they insisted on certain conditions which I refused to accede to."

Mrs. Shire, who had reared the child from the time she took him from a day nursery when he was six months old until two weeks ago, when his parents found and claimed him, suffered a nervous breakdown in giving up the boy and has been at Atlantic City since.

Efforts by friends of the Petconk family and of others to provide a better home for the boy led them to inform the Shires they could have the boy back if they wished him. In the statement issued by his lawyers yesterday Mr. Shire says they will not take the boy back into their home of comparative luxury, that it would not be wise to do so with his good relatives living so near, and that he doubtless will be happier where he is with his own parents.

Before that statement was made Mr. and Mrs. Petconk had decided that it would not be proper to commit their child again to them, much as the boy might desire it in his childish way at this time.

"We have decided to make a man of him, the right kind of a man," said Petconk last night, his wife approving "He will not have the luxuries here he had at the Shire home but he will have sufficient to make a good man of him. I have a good job now at $25 a week, and I am able to support my family. We soon will move into a better apartment, where the boy will feel more at home.

"He is a mighty good little fellow, and when he is old enough to understand I know he will approve of this step of ours. He is our son and he shall remain with us and we will make him happy. He soon will forget the Shires and he will love his own parents."

Incidentally, the boy from last night resumed his own name. The Shires had named him George Bernard, and his parents permitted him to continue under that name, but from last night he is Joseph William Petconk.

"I like it here much better now than before," said the boy. "My real mother has been just as good to me as Mother Shire, and we are going to have a better home. I guess I'll stay here now."

OLD SAILORS BACK AT SEA.

Men of 68 to 75, Attracted by Wartime Rates of Pay, Sail Again!

LONDON, April 18.—The number of old sailors who have returned to their trade after retirement, owing to the exceptional chances opened in the merchant marine by wartime rates of payment, is emphasized by the number of old men who are rescued from day to day after encounters between small British trading ships and submarines.

A Lowestoft fishing boat, which was torpedoed the other day, had a skipper of 68, a ship's "boy" of 62, while the ages of the other men were 64, 68, 69, 72 and 75. The crew of the three-master Mary Watkinson, which was among this month's casualties, contained eight men over 74. It is estimated that in all the British fishing fleets, a majority of the crews at present engaged are over 55.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

LIBRARIANS AT WORK.

LONDON, April 17—A committee of librarians here is preparing a bibliography of war books, their aim being to make at eventually nothing less than a complete catalogue of everything published anywhere in the world on the subject of the war. Only seven sets of the complete catalogue are to be made, one of which will go to the Congressional library in Washington.

The same committee has a plan for establishing after the war a library and museum devoted entirely to the war, and so far as possible containing all the books, pamphlets and papers listed in the catalogue.

DRINK WATER TO AVOID SICKNESS SAYS AUTHORITY

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast Daily Keeps the Doctor Away

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage-system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone prosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile, and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

SUNDAY'S SON TO JOIN ARMY

NEW YORK, April 18.—George Sunday, son of Billy Sunday, now preaching on Washington Heights, and one of the principal executives of the Sunday organization, may join the Aviation Corps of the United States Army.

While it is understood that the decision has not been definitely made as yet he has been making inquiries about the condition of service and if there is delay in getting the number of men required he may enlist before the New York campaign is over. Otherwise he will probably go to San Diego at the close of the New York revival in June, and may enlist from there.

KEEPS COUNTRIES TOGETHER

Practical Politics, Not Love, in Case of Sweden and Norway.

CHRISTIANA, April 17.—"If the disaster of war should strike one of these countries it would also strike the other two," declares M. Morvicel, president of the Norwegian storthing, at the opening session in the course of a speech advocating co-operation with Sweden and Denmark.

"Our interests," he added, "are binding us close together, and we will keep together, not for love, but on the reason of practical politics. This ought to be made clear to the belligerents."

GENERAL FOCH, HERO, GREATEST STRATEGIST

Wonderful Personality of Victor of the Somme—Many Striking Testimonies and a Portrait

"Like Grant in the Wilderness," and "the d'Artagnan of the War," are the two apt phrases by which the Paris correspondent of the New York Tribune, Fred. B. Pitney, seeks to convey his impression of the personality of General Foch. Mr. Pitney was one of a small party of journalists received by the famous French general at his headquarters near the front. Mr. Pitney begins by quoting a prominent "personality" in Paris for the following appreciation of the great leader of the French armies on the Somme: "General Foch is the greatest general the war has produced in France. He has intuition and the power of divination. He is great in his instant grasp of a situation, his perception of the needs, his vision of the next hour. Gen. Joffre is his warmest admirer."

His Superb Confidence

In a short survey of the war situation, Gen. Foch said: "The battles in Artois and the Champagne have shown that we can cut the German lines, go through them, and drive them back as we please, when the time comes that our plans have fixed." There was a matter-of-fact definiteness about this statement that put it outside the realm of discussion, and when I recall this meeting with General Foch, the picture my mind most dwells upon is of him at that moment. He stood facing us in his most characteristic attitude, with his right foot a little in advance, his left hand in his pocket and his right hand dragging upward the point of his grey moustache, and there was in his expression a mixture of pleased recollection, happy anticipation, and grim determination.

"Steadfast; Relentless"

One must think of d'Artagnan when one thinks of General Foch; but one thinks also of Grant in the Wilderness. There is something in him that is steadfast and something more that is relentless.

Mr. Pitney concludes his sketch by quoting the Order of the Day in which the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor was conferred upon General Foch, and which said: "He has shown under all circumstances, both in defensive and offensive operations, a strategic ability without parallel. Thanks to his indisputable authority and the adroitness of his counsels, he has contributed in a great part to the co-ordination of the efforts of the allied armies, and thus has rendered most eminent service to the nation."

SOLDIERS IN FRENCH HOME

Canadians Find Comfortable Billets, Even to Electric Light

A Canadian boy writes in a letter home: We are billeted in a small village. Our section is placed in a rather small barn, but we are allowed the privilege of hunting up private billets. Six of us have taken advantage of this privilege and have secured a large room in a rather comfortable house. We have straw as well as our blankets and so are able to make up nice, soft beds. We also have the run of a well-heated kitchen in which to write, read and smoke. The madame, whose husband is in the trenches, is young and good looking, and is very good to us, making coffee for us in the morning and allowing us to use the stove at any other time. There is one other comfort. What do you think? Real electric lights, the kind you turn off and on with a switch. That is some change from tallow dips in a dug-out. The whole thing costs half a franc per day per man. This, equivalent to ten cents in our money, is a very small amount, but in comparison with our salary on service (just half of the latter) is quite a consideration. However, we are saving expense even at that, since, there being no Y.M.C.A. tents so far back from the front, we would otherwise have to go to a refreshment room to read and write, and in one evening there we would spend as much as our room here costs us for a day. Besides we are more comfortably housed as we are now.

BULLET BEFORE REPORT

Experiments Prove Sound Travels More Slowly Than Bullet

In the firing line it has often been noticed that bullets travelling at high speed produce two sounds. A man fired at from about 400 yards hears first a vicious crash. That is the bullet passing. A little later the report of the rifle comes along. The speed of sound has, in fact, been beaten by the speed of rifle bullets.

Modern military rifle bullets, when fired, travel at from 2,600 feet to 3,000 feet in one second. Sound can only travel along at 1,100 feet per second. So it happens that when a man who has been fired at hears the report of a rifle, he knows he is safe—at least, from that particular shot.

It is, naturally, at long ranges that the two distinct sounds are most noticeable. At a range of 1,000 yards a bullet arrives at least a second, and sometimes more, in advance of the report. The sound of the flying bullet is caused by a vacuum at its rear.

Stokes Gun a Sinister Weapon

A London paper writes: Accounts of fighting on the British front have referred to the deadly work of the Stokes gun. A "sinister weapon" our special correspondent has called it. "It sends up into the air, like a group of lead pencils, a flight of bombs which sail down on to their objective with deadly accuracy and a terrific explosive effect," was his description of its action.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was roundly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Mrs. Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations the throat and bronchial tubes.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GREY HAIR

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and not a medicine. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

RUSSIA'S WORST FOE WAS WITHIN, HE SAID

As a sidelight on events that led up to the Russian revolution, the following letter found on a fallen Russian officer on the eastern front about a month ago, written to a Sister of Charity who had nursed him, reveals some significant facts. It seems to indicate that the Russian army was fighting more sinister forces than the Prussians and that it was handicapped constantly by conditions within the empire.

"If you were only a man," the letter begins. "But you are a woman — a beautiful woman, innocent, inexperienced. You do not know anything of the terrible conditions around us. You have begun your young life in a terrible time. We live in quarters where Bacchanalian revels are the rule. We are surrounded by jackals, who hungrily wait for our death. They celebrate and hold luxurious banquets while famine prevails. With their venomous jaws they devour our strength and keep us from victory. How I hate them! It is they who, with their wives, go riding in automobiles, while we have no vehicles to transport our munitions or take our wounded to the hospitals. They are vampires sucking our blood. They take advantage of our helplessness while we have to battle with a terrible enemy constantly in front of us. In voluptuous orgies they waste the money that should be used for the purchase of machine guns, rifles and warm clothing for the troops. They are more terrible than our enemies, the Germans. If we are defeated it will not be because of the Germans, but because of these voracious jackals who are ever at our heels."

Humbug is a bug which preys upon the unwary.

Look before you leap and then take the elevator down.

ACID STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

Nine-tenths of all Stomach Trouble, said to be Due to Acidity

A Physician's Advice on Cause and Cure.

A famous physician whose successful researches into the cause and cure of stomach and intestinal diseases have earned for him an international reputation, said in the course of a recent lecture that nearly all intestinal troubles, as well as many diseases of the vital organs, were directly traceable to a deranged condition of the stomach which in turn was due nine times out of ten to excessive acidity, commonly termed sour stomach or heartburn, which not only irritated and inflamed the delicate lining of the stomach, but also set up gastritis and stomach ulcers. It is interesting to note that he condemns the use of patent medicines as well as of medical treatment for the stomach, stating that he and his colleagues have secured remarkable results by the use of ordinary bicarbonated magnesia, which, by neutralizing the acidity of the food, removes the source of the trouble. He contends that it is as foolish to treat the stomach itself as it would be for a man who stepped on a tack to rub liniment on the foot without first removing the tack. Remove the tack and the foot will heal itself—neutralize the acid and the stomach troubles will disappear. Irritating medicines and medical treatments are useless, so long as the contents of the stomach remain acid; remove the acidity, and there will be no need for medicine—the inflamed lining of the stomach will then heal itself. Sufferers from acidity, sour stomach or heartburn should get a small bottle of bicarbonated magnesia from their druggist, and take a teaspoonful in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after meals, repeating in fifteen minutes, if necessary, this being the dose which the doctor has found most efficacious in all cases.

THE BRITISH ARE CLOSING IN ON CAMBRIA

THE FRENCH NOW ENCIRCLING LAON

GENERAL NIVELLE'S FORCES ARE NOW WITHIN TWO MILES OF LOAN

Franco-British Guns Are Pulverizing German Defences---British Drive Closer to Cambrai, at the Same Time Maintaining Their Strangling Pressure About St. Quentin and Lens Which Can Be Taken Any Time Field Marshall Haig Desires ---Chivy Captured by the French.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, April 18.—French forces smashed their way to within two miles of Laon to-day. British troops coincidentally began closing in about Cambrai while still maintaining their strangling pressure about St. Quentin and Lens.

The fighting along the whole of this vast front was bitter. French and British guns roared unceasingly, literally pulverizing the German defences. The French apparently were the most active in the day's fighting.

The official statement revealed another trust "in Champagne," presumably at a different point from where General Nivelle's men have registered their brilliant success in the past few days, forcing the Germans behind their second line defences.

Chivy, taken in the French sweep around Laon, is only two miles' distant from that city. The other points mentioned by the French official statement showed an encircling movement about Laon that must forces its fall into the hands of the French very shortly.

Lens and St. Quentin are both so far encircled by British forces now that their capture will be easy at any time Haig desires.

LONDON, April 18.—Field Marshal Haig's greatest thrust to-day was toward Cambrai. The capture of the Village of Villers Guislain, nine miles south of Cambrai, was reported by the British Commander-in-Chief. Improvements of the British positions around Lagnicourt, some distance to the west of this pivotal point in the Hindenburg line was likewise achieved. In the capture of Villers Guislain, northwest of Epesy, the British have pushed another wall of steel parallel to the lines of German communications between Cambrai and St. Quentin. Like Epesy, Ronshoy, Villeret, Le Vargnier and Maissemy, all of which villages lie to the south, Villers Guislain is approximately two miles' distant from the Cambrai-St. Quentin high road. The British now parallel the high road for a distance of fifteen of the twenty-two miles between the two towns. The drive which enveloped Villers Guislain was from the direction of Epesy, Haig reported, indicating apparently a defined plan to parallel the Cambrai-St. Quentin line by British forces which may at any time strike suddenly somewhere along this twenty-two-mile strece and sever the artery. In the meantime Haig's laconic report "The Lagnicourt position improved," means a blow struck at the key city of Cambrai from the west.

14,000 PRISONERS AND 227 GUNS FOR BRITISH

Special to the Examiner:

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES AFIELD, April 18.—Captures by the British army since April 9th in its great rush, reached the vast total of 14,000 men and 227 guns to-day. There are still more streaming back constantly from the front. Around Lens and St. Quentin, Field Marshal Haig is stretching a tight noose, and increasing the pressure every hour.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The Navy Department shortly before noon to-day received an official report from Boston saying gun-firing had been heard off Provincetown this morning.

LONDON, April 18.—A resolution formally expressing England's appreciation and gratitude and welcoming America to the ranks of the Allies fighting for democracy, was passed by the House of Commons to-day. It had been framed by the Ministry. The vote was unanimous and without a division.

PARIS, April 18.—Official estimates here are that the Germans suffered a total of thirty thousand casualties in yesterday's fighting.

To-day the entire German line from Rheims to Dixmude is menaced by the British-French advance. While the weathere has caused the cessation of fighting at some points, in general the battle is still on.

PARIS, April 18.—Chavronne village was taken by the French drive to-day, and the advancing forces likewise completed the conquest of Chivy. North of Chivy General Nivelle's men occupied all the ground as far as Bray en Leonnois, and all the wood east of Ville Au Bois, the War Office reported. The Germans retreated behind their second line positions in the Champagne following an intense bombardment.

BERLIN, via London, April 18.—The resignation of the Austrian Minister of Commerce, Dr. Urban, and of Dr. Von Barnreither, Minister without portfolio, was announced in Vienna despatches received here to-day. Great significance may be attached to these resignations, since the Ministers were "members of the German parties."

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Determined to rush his selective conscription bill through Congress with all speed, President Wilson to-day went to the Capitol to confer with Chairman Chamberlain of the Senate Military Committee and other leaders. The bill as reported provides for filling the regular army and National Guard to maximum strength, about eight hundred thousand men, and raising an army of one million by draft.

The amendment by Senator McKellar designed to try the volunteer system first, was defeated in committee. An important amendment providing that no liquor can be sold soldiers or officers in uniform, or taken upon military reservations, was appended by the committee.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Government officials here expressed the view to-day that Russia will stand fast with the Entente Allies. Peace pressure, studiously manifested by Germany is merely a propaganda they believe, to which the new democracy will not listen.

America will assist Russia to forge to a more strong position in the war.

PETROGRAD, April 18.—The repulse of an attack by three enemy companies in the region northeast of Koto Mikhale, northern front, by rifle and artillery fire, was announced in the official statement to-day.

A LECTURE ON THE BRITISH NAVY

The public is reminded of the lecture by Rev. Geo. Anderson in the Collegiate Assembly Hall this evening on the British Navy and its work in the great war. Rev. Mr. Anderson who is here in connection with the Sailors' Institute work is familiar with every feature of naval life and his lecture should be a treat. There will be no admission charge. A collection will be taken up for the Sailors' Institute.

LOCAL ITALIAN WHO FOUGHT WITH CANUCKS IS HOME

Pte. M. Massala Who Left Peterborough to Go Overseas With the 80th Battalion Was Wounded in France

TO GO TO KINGSTON

Pte. M. Massala, an Italian resident of Peterborough, who believed that if Canada was good enough to live in she was good enough to fight for, and who carried out that principle by enlisting here for overseas service in August, 1915, arrived home last night, proudly wearing the gold casualty braid on his sleeve, signifying that he has been wounded. Pte. Massala, who before becoming a member of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, was employed at the Boston Cafe, left Peterborough with a draft for the 59th Battalion in August, 1915, and was transferred to the 80th Battalion, with which battalion he went overseas. On arrival in England he was drafted to another Canadian battalion and saw considerable service at the front before he as wounded in the shoulder and leg. He has been in hospital for some time and has to undergo further treatment at the Convalescent Hospital, Kingston. Pte. Massala is very proud of the fact that he fought with the Canadians in France.

Hon. Mr. McPherson Appeals For Greater Production Now

The Hon. W. D. McPherson made a strong appeal in his address last night to Canadian men at home, urging them to give their support to the Organization of Resources Association. By curbing extravagances and increasing production we can place ourselves in a position of the utmost assistance to the Empire in this her great hour of need.

The Provincial Secretary thus resounded the warnings that have been emphasized of late and which it is hoped the people will bestir themselves into immediate action. In making this plea, Hon. Mr. McPherson spoke as a father of a family that is showing its patriotism in no uncertain manner. His daughter is a Red Cross nurse at the front, one son has been wounded, another is in France, and two more are on the way. Of course, Hon. Mr. McPherson did not mention these facts last night.

ACTIVITY AT QUAKER OATS COMPANY'S PLANT

The Leonard Construction Company are advertising for men. These and other signs point to a resumption of activity on the site of the Quaker Oats plant. It is altogether probable that the initial operations will consist of the removal of the debris and the demolition of the six-storey warehouse, which was damaged beyond repair by the devastating fire which consumed the million dollar plant in December last.

THE AIMS AND OBJECTS OF THE GREAT WAR VETERANS' ASSOCIATION

In view of the Great War Veterans' Tag Day on Saturday some people are asking for information as to the objects and aims of the War Veterans' Association.

To quote from the constitution of the G. W. V. A.: "This is an association of honourably discharged men who have seen service in the Great War. It is independent of governments, parties, politics, benefactors and all other outside influences. It seeks to represent the ideals, the principles, the honour and dignity of its members, and it aims constantly to inculcate loyalty to Canada and the Empire, and give unstinted service in their interests.

(1) To perpetuate the close and kindly ties of mutual service in the Great War and the recollections and associations of that experience.

(2) To preserve the memory and records of those who suffered and died for the Empire; to see to the erection of monuments to their valour and to the establishment of an annual memorial day.

(3) To ensure that proper provision is made for the care of the sick, wounded and needy among those who have served and among their dependents.

If you sympathize with these aims and wish to show your appreciation of what the War Veterans have done and are doing, be liberal in your donations on Saturday.

THEY FOUGHT FOR YOU?
WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO FOR THEM?

Sergt. Bradfield The Only Local Name On Casualty List To-day

Lakefield and Chemong Members of the 93rd Battalion Are Reported Wounded---First Recruit For the 57th Regiment C.D.F.--Cable From Lieut. M. Dunsford--To-day's General Military News.

There was only one local name in the list of casualties this morning a welcome falling off in the honour roll as far as Peterborough is concerned. There were several district casualties, including Lakefield and Chemong members of the 93rd Battalion.

Mrs. Richard Bradfield received an official message from Ottawa this morning stating that 426790 Sergt. Fred Bradfield, was admitted to No. 13 General Hospital, Boulogne, on April 10, suffering from a gun shot wound in the knee.

To-day's casualty list contains the name of Pte. P. Gordon Fairbairn of Lakefield, who is officially reported wounded Pte. Fairbairn went overseas as a member of the 93rd Battalion and was transferred in a draft.

Pte. J. Johnston, of Chemong Indian Village, is reported wounded. He went overseas with the 93rd and went to another Canadian Battalion in France.

A. E. Webster, of Lakefield is the first recruit to be medically examined and passed for the 57th Regiment, C. D.F. Yesterday he reached his eighteenth birthday, so he celebrated it by becoming a member of the defence force. His three older brothers are overseas and he was anxious for a chance to do his bit. Pte. Webster expects to secure a number of other Lakefield recruits for the 57th.

Lieut. A. E. Brittain, adjutant of the 247th Battalion, and formerly of the Princess Patricias, with whom he saw much service in France before he was finally wounded has been offered a position as Adjutant of a Canadian Forestry draft which he has decided to accept. Lieut. Brittain was also offered a position on the staff of the 15th Regiment C.D.F., Belleville, but in view of the opportunity offered to get overseas again will go with the Forestry Draft, which is now being organized.

Mr. W. H. Dunsford, of the Bank of Commerce received a cablegram today from his son, Lieut Martin Dunsford with the 18th Battalion at the front, stating that he was safe and well, indicating that he has come through the Vimy Ridge battle unhurt.

Captain Thomson, Paymaster of the 247th Battalion, will pay board bills of all N.C.O's and men to-day and Thursday, April 18th and 19th. All persons having such claims must present them at the Armouries on these dates.

The chief question which all men in Canada must ask themselves to-day is, "Am I doing my share in helping the War? If I am not, why not?"

Unless the country fully understands that every fit man of military age is needed, and needed badly, there will be some who are failing in their duty to Canada.

The greater part of the world is engaged in the greatest war of all times. It is no easy struggle, and, despite the good news which comes from the front, the war is far from an end. The demand for men is so great that all the overseas troops in Canada are being rushed across the Atlantic as quickly as transports can be found for them. Up to the present the overseas troops have undertaken the defence of the country, but when the last of them leave there will be no defence force here.

With a view to preparing for this, and being ready for any emergency which may arise, the government has issued a call for 50,000 men to take up arms for the duration of the war and for six months afterwards to serve in Canada and contribute to the national safety.

The time to enlist in this force is now. Terms of enlistments, subsistence, clothing and equipment are the same as for overseas service, and separation allowances are given in the case of married men.

Lieut. Smyth Killed.

The many friends of Mrs. F. J. Sawers, wife of Rev. F. J. Sawers of Cobourg formerly of Peterborough, will learn with regret that her only brother, Lieut. George Smyth, has been killed in action in the recent battle of the Vimy Ridge.

Mrs. Geo. Laing, 468 Cedar street, received a letter yesterday dated March 28th, from her son, Sapper Norman W. Laing, in England.

Sapper Laing of No. 6 company, Canadian Engineers, was a patient in Queen's Canadian Base Hospital in France, suffering from nervous breakdown. From thence he was removed to England, and at present is in the

The French Offensive Is Extended Again

PTE. GORDON FAIRBAIRN, Lakefield member of the 93rd Battalion, who is officially reported wounded.

General Nivelle's Forces Storm Eighteen Miles [of Trenches—Take Village of Auberive and Capture 2,500 More Prisoners

GERMAN ADMISSIONS

LONDON, April 17. — Extending their great offensive along the entire front east of Rheims as far as the old Champagne battlefield, the French delivered to-day another smashing stroke. In the face of violent gusts of rain and snow, Nivelle's troops stormed eighteen miles of German trenches, wiped out a powerful salient around the village of Auberive, and captured that place and swept in 2,500 additional prisoners.

The total number of prisoners taken by the French in the last two days' operations is 13,500. Unofficial reports place the German casualties on the French front in the last 48 hours at close to 100,000. One division, sent to the relief of another on the eve of the battle, was virtually wiped out, General Nivelle reports.

British Still Advance.

Along the hundred-mile front, where the guns on both sides are incessantly booming, there are not short of 3,000,000 men engaged in the savage battle. Along the French line of attack alone Nivelle's troops are opposed by nineteen divisions of reserves, 285,000 men, and are believed to number twice that force themselves.

The British continued their advance in the region of Arras to-day, but their operations were considerably slowed down by the severe weather conditions. "Encounters occurred throughout the day west and northwest of Lens, where we continue to press the enemy," says Haig's report. The British also gained ground between St. Quentin and Cambrai, capturing the Le Tombois Farm near Epehy, and advancing along the spur northeast of Epehy station.

Germans Make Admissions.

The German official statement, while disputing the claims of both the French and British reports, concedes for the first time the gigantic nature of the conflict now going on between Lens and the Champagne, and the inability of the German defences to stand up under the enemy's attacks.

"One of the greatest battles of the mighty war, and, therefore, also in the history of the world, is in progress on the Aisne," says Hindenburg's report. It speaks of the French gun fire along the whole line as being "unprecedented in duration, volume and intensity." It admits that the German positions were levelled, "rendering an obstinate defence no longer possible."

Hindenburg is preparing his alibi. That is shown in both yesterday's and to-day's reports, in which he speaks of the French efforts as "having a far distant object," and again "an object which is far-reaching." Both these statements, it is firmly believed here, are intended to pave the way for what must be bad news to the German people, however much they are glossed over.

WAR VETERANS TO PARADE TO CHURCH ON SUNDAY NEXT

Peterboro' Returned Soldiers to Attend Divine Service at Knox Presbyterian Church—Flag Will Fly in Honour of Canadian Victory

READY FOR TAG DAY

Considerable business was transacted at the meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association in the Barrie Building last night, when details in regard to the Tag Day on Saturday and the church parade on Sunday in connection with the observance of the second anniversary of the Battle of Ypres, were discussed. Vice-President R. H. Muir presided in the absence of President Peter Victor, who has been in Winnipeg attending the Dominion convention of the War Veterans' Association.

The tag day arrangements are well under way and all details will be completed on Friday night when there will be a big meeting in the club rooms.

THE CHURCH PARADE

On Sunday morning the Great War Veterans will attend divine service at Knox Presbyterian Church, falling in at the Armoures at 10.30 o'clock. This will be the first church parade of the returned men, and it is expected that it will be largely attended and representative of many different Canadian units. An effort is being made to have all the Peterborough soldiers at present in the Convalescent Home at Kingston here for Saturday and Sunday. By permission of Lt.-Col. Walker the parade will be headed by the 57th Regimental Band. One of the returned officers will be in command of the veterans, with Sergt. Major R. T. Biggs of the 6th C.M.R. acting as Sergeant Major.

THE FLAG WILL FLY.

The matter of securing a big Union Jack, to be displayed from the club room windows, was brought up by one of the veterans. "We should take the lead," he remarked, "in flying the flag on the occasion of such victories as our comrades over seas are winning just now. People generally are apparently slow to recognize such victories for there have been no flags displayed in Peterborough since the news came in. It is up to us to lead the way and show that we are still thinking of the boys over there." The suggestion was enthusiastically received and will be acted upon.

NEW EXECUTIVE MEMBER.

Pte. Thos. Hunter, member of the Executive, asked permission to resign owing to pressure of business, which made it impossible for him to carry on the duties of the position. His resignation was accepted and Pte. Gordon Fallon, who went overseas with the 1st Canadian Division, was elected to fill the vacancy on the committee.

Secretary Cooper announced that a wire had been received from President Victor, stating that he would be home on Wednesday.

He will make his report in regard to the convention at Friday night's meeting.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY.

It would be unfortunate, if any local friction, arising from difference of opinion or misunderstanding as to the functions of the Children's Aid Society, should interfere with its important and morally indispensable work, or to any degree impair its usefulness. Without entering into detail of various considerations, it seems plain that attention should be chiefly centred upon the fact that the vital function of the Society is to rescue, maintain and provide for the present and future of "neglected and dependent" children. To this all minor or incidentally related considerations should be adjusted and subordinated, and should influence the attitude towards the work of the Society of all associated with it.

FOR OUR SAILORS AND SEAMEN.

The Collegiate Instituto is a centre of enlightment, but it is doubtful if it has ever given out more timely and appealing information than that to be given by the lectures in the Assembly Hall on the evenings of the 18th, 19th and 20th instant, by Dr. Anderson, in the interests of the Royal Canadian Naval Institutes—nominally, but really, in the personal interests of the sailors and seamen of our navy and mercantile marine. A good work is being done in serving their interests, and it is only hindered by lack of funds. We in Canada owe a special debt to the sailors of the British navy. In the midst of three terrible years of war they have kept ceaseless and monotonous watch and ward, and we have lived in peace and security. Dr. Anderson wil deliver three most interesting lectures—Wednesday: "The British Navy, and its Work in the Great War;" Thursday: Traveloque, "Gibraltar, the Most Unique Spot in the British Empire;" Friday: "British Rule in Egypt." There wil be no admission charge to these lectures but a "silver collection" will be made at the door for the purposes of the funds of the Naval Institutes. Dr. Anderson is authorized by the National Council. He is no paid agent but is voluntarily giving his services. He is well qualified to give the greatest interest to his lectures, as he has been an extensive traveller in all parts of the Empire. The object of his visit is warmly commended to the public, many of whom will be personally called upon in the interests of our gallant sailors "who guard our native seas," and to whom we owe so much of safety and shielding service.

UNCLE SAM "RILED."

Uncle Sam is preparing to jump into this war "with both feet." He is taking the most comprehensive and effective measures to do his share. He "sent into the game" late in the day, but he is making up for lost time. He has a great advantage in war preparations. He won't have to bungle; he will be in a position to take advantage of the mistakes that Britain has made, as Lloyd George frankly confesses. We all expected that the United States would have a great deal of trouble with alien enemies, of which so many exist in that country. But they are watched, and the report that martial law is to be declared in the United States and its possessions, will be a mighty factor in keeping the Hun on his good behaviour. Any such tricks played as blowing up munition factories or other similar outrages will, under martial law, become punishable with death. If the Huns in the United States are confronted with a dose of their own Hun medicine as it is administered in Germany and Belgium—stood with their backs to a wall and shot through and through—they will be a little careful in their plotting and destruction. And it may easily come to this. Uncle Sam will stand a good deal, has stood a good deal, but when the worm turns it means to sting. Uncle Sam in relation to the provocation he receives is like a Yankee character described in one of Charles Reade's books—"Treat me gentle and I'm ile; rile me, and I'm thunder stuffed with pisen."

The United States is making a thorough job of it—speeding up munitions, speeding up shipbuilding, and voting money in 7,000 million dollar chunks. Now we are told that President Wilson is contemplating making a "big push" for food conservation, by making the whole United States "dry"—closing breweries and distilleries to save food stuffs and help meet the world shortage of food. President Wilson is taking a leaf—rather leaves by the handful, out of Lloyd George's book, and is making the United States a mighty factor in winning the victory for humanity.

COUNTRY FIRST.

This war has brought new validity to the motto—Country first, and party second—the nation first and individual interests afterwards. We are told that the position of governor of the jail in Brantford is vacant, and that the Woman's Patriotic League, and the War Veterans' Association are combining to demand from the Ontario government the appointment of a returned soldier, instead of a party politician.

Why should the government need urging to do the palpably fair and patriotic thing? We are not fighting in this war for the good of any party or clique, or anything but the national interests, the interests of humanity. Great Britain has recognized this long ago. To bring greater effectiveness, a party government was replaced by a coalition government—composed of the representatives of the two great parties. To further improve effectiveness, the coalition government gave way to a national—a war—government. This sequence of changes served to put party, and party interests in the back ground, and keeps them there, and to bring national interests to the front of the stage.

We must come up to this high standard in Canada and Ontario, and should lose no time, for we have a long way to go.

Partisanship and its interests are still to an alarming extent the motives of government action. The proposal referred to is designed to break away from the slavery to party, and instal the national ideal in its place. The filling of the Brantford jail position by a returned soldier would at once be an act of reparation and of justice—reparation for the wrong done in all our past political history of robbing the state for the gain of party—justice to the brave men who have done so much for us that we cannot in the way of repayment do enough for them. They have served us well in war; now, when they cannot fight in the ranks any longer, and are only fit for the battles of peace, we should give them a preferred place in the battle ranks of peace.

Of course no one claims a place of service for usefulness for a returned soldier unless he is fully competent to fill it. That, however, is not a standard acted upon in party appointments. Fitness for a government position does not count so much as proficiency in party "pull." It seems to be regarded as a justifiable crime to pitchfork a party heeler into office solely for party reasons, and visit the resultant loss in necessarily ineffective services upon the country; but it would be shocking immorality to appoint a returned soldier if he were not thoroughly qualified for the position.

It is not only on the plea of justice and fair play and decent recognition of war services, that the claim of the returned soldier to preference in public and other employment, is urged, but justice to the highest interests of the public, through the public service, demands it.

This war has taught us in a terrible way that nothing counts but country—country first. The demands, the objects the issues of the war, have shown us the exceeding smallness, the pitiful insignificance of party interests. Canada's participation in the war has been hampered in effectiveness by the application of the party principle in government and administration; immense waste and paralyzing ineffectiveness have resulted. Sir Robert Borden when he was in Opposition, valiantly declared for a non-partisan civil service. He forgot it when he got office, and when war came he forgot it still more. Parliament laid aside party and voted unanimously a deluge of money for war purposes—purposes that were largely paralyzed by the application of the partizan principle.

We now have a chance, an excuse, and a command, to break away from the partizan habit in our attitude toward, and our treatment of, the returned soldier. If at any time partizanship and its employment in national administration takes on more of the evils of Germanism essential to it, it is in war administration, and in dealing with the results of the war. Partisanship has weakened our national war offensive. We must not allow it to interfere with the bigger battle that will follow the war, the battle of reconstruction, and the fitting of the returned soldier into the fighting ranks of peace.

ENLIST HIGHLAND REGIMENT.

Scotchmen in This City Will Offer It to Governor Whitman.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The New York Scottish Highlanders voted to offer a regiment to Governor Whitman for war services at an enthusiastic meeting held at Bryant Hall, Sixth Avenue and Forty-Second St. Walter Scott was selected to be Colonel of the regiment which the Highlanders expect to form within the next few weeks. More than 300 men have enlisted already, and have been organized into three companies under Captains M. McLeod, J. Cummings and M. Stewart. Captain Thomas Wilson is adjutant and is in charge of recruiting.

The organization was founded by members of the Seventy-Ninth Highlanders after the Civil War, and it is affiliated with Cameron Post, G. A. R. The local members of the National Association of Scottish Clans is co-operating in the recruiting. The regimental band already is at full war strength, with thirty pipers and five drums. A subscription is being taken, Colonel Scott having contributed $1,000, to purchase necessary equipment and defray other expenses.

One of the chief causes of trouble with chicks is over-feeding. Over-feeding can be noticed at once, for the chicks will lie down a great part of the time. A healthy chick will always scramble into the thick of the crowd when food is offered.

BRITISH "SOFTNESS" PAMPERS GERMAN PRISONERS OF WAR

A correspondent of the Morning Post, writing in Monday's issue, makes some surprising statements concerning the way in which German prisoners in England are pampered. When we think of the treatment bestowed on our countrymen who have had the misfortune to fall into German hands, it is maddening to read what this writer reveals. The German prisoner, he says, is comfortably housed, abundantly fed (in excess of what Lord Devonport asks the British workman to live on), works when he likes and as little as he likes, and is well paid for his labour or the lack of it. If he goes on strike, his only punishment is the stoppage of his pay. At some limestone quarries several months ago the prisoners refused to leave their camp to go to work. The British commandant was not allowed to punish or to compel them. They even refused to help in the making of a tram line for the transport of material for the making of special huts for themselves. "They allowed British workmen to do the job while they looked on and made jeering remarks in their own tongues. From the seclusion of their compound they also hooted the British soldiers, thus illustrating incidentally how very free a country Old England is." In those quarries English workmen receive less pay than the German prisoners and do six times the amount of labour. And the effect of this state of things is to depress our own workpeople and to encourage the Germans in the belief that we pamper them not out of kindness but out of fear. No doubt their letters inform their friends in the Fatherland that we are afraid to make them work or even to obey orders. In this connection we observe with satisfaction that notice has been taken of the report that the Germans are placing British prisoners within the firing line at the front. Something must be done at once to stop, if it is possible, this outrage by means of suitable reprisals. We fancy that the French are much better hands than ourselves at paying the enemy back in his own coin.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,— It appears that one or more members of the patriotic committee are taking a fatherly interest in some of the soldiers' wives in a way that is anything but pleasant. Especially are they fond of watching what they purchase and bringing them to task as to how they spend their money, like so many school children. Frankly speaking it is none of their business. Their husbands are earning what they get, and earn it dearly, and their wives and dependents are entitled to it. They cannot afford many luxuries on what they get, for it takes most of them all their time to keep body and soul together where there is a family, and if seen looking at anything out of the ordinary, whether you buy or not, it is all the same and take for granted they have money to burn. Do they realize that if it were not for the help of an older child's wages they would very often come short. How would any of those men like it if their wives were placed in a similar position and watched every little article they buy and criticized? It would do a few of them good to change places with the men, whose wives they are fond of talking about, instead of running to pink teas and spending dollars, where a soldier's wife couldn't spend as many cents. Her income wouldn't allow it, with the price of everything so high. Wouldn't it be more to the purpose if those men who are so fond of talking would put on a suit of tan and help to end this terrible struggle that will bring the men back to their homes and little ones, and not begrudge the paltry sum that would buy a flower for a little child's grave.

Respectfully,
A READER.

SOONER PAY ALIMONY.

Max Unterford, a machinist, is partial to brunettes. He married one, but when Mrs. Ida Unterford appeared in the New York Domestic Relations Court to testify against him, a great change had come over her.

"I came home one night and found my wife had become a blonde," explained Max. "I will not live with a woman who is always bleaching her hair and powdering her face. If I likes blondes, I would have married one. We quarrelled over it and I left. I'm willing to pay her $3 a week."

"Do you use peroxide?" she was asked.

"Not peroxide," replied Mrs. Unterford, volunteering no further information other than that she was willing for Max to return. The court ordered him to raise his offer to $4.50 a week.

THE OLD GARDENER SAYS

Of all the small fruits grapes are the most adaptable. They can be grown in almost any backyard as well as on large estates. They can be trained over arbors or sheds, or against the house, as well as on trellises or pergolas. Moreover they will thrive in almost any soil, if the long straggling canes are kept cut back to a few eyes each season. Among the most dependable sorts are Worden, Brighton, Moore's Early and Niagara.

A glue factory stands near a certain railway. Its charms are not for the nose, and therefore a lady often carried with her a bottle of lavender salts. One morning an old farmer took the seat beside her. As the train neared the factory, the lady opened her bottle of salts.

Soon the whole car was filled with the horrible odour. The farmer put up with it as long as he could, then shouted, "Madam, would you mind puttin' the cork in that 'ere bottle?"—New York Tribune.

You Can Always Sell A "Used" Ford

In the first place, a Ford touring car costs only $495—F.O.B. Ford, Ont. In the second place, there is always a demand for used Ford Cars at good Prices.

The average resale price of a Ford Car, after one season's use, is only $125 less than the price of a new car. Try to sell another make of a used car that cost $1,000 or less, and you will be lucky to find a buyer for it at $250 to $400 less.

A Ford certainly gives an owner $125 worth of service per year. No one will question that. So if you sell your Ford at the end of a year, you get your money out of it.

The Ford car is the one safe motor car investment on the market. It gives you the greatest value for your money.

They will be married at Vladivostok and then go to Petrograd by the trans Siberian railway.

How To Destroy Burdocks

To the Editor:

Dear Sir,—In some sections of our city there are places where burdocks have flourished luxuriantly in past seasons—in summer it is a difficult matter to destroy them. It is impossible to pull them up, and to cut them down, is only a temporary expedient, as the roots still remain. At the present time these burdocks can be pulled up with ease, even if they have roots a foot or more in length.

Yours truly,

LAPPA MAJOR.

"Lappa Major, by the way, the botanical name of the burdock—is informed that there is an easy way, a sure way, a radical way to destroy burdocks. Have a blacksmith flatten and sharpen one point of an ordinary pick, then bend back towards the operator the stalk of the burdock, holding it down with the foot. This makes the root tense and easily cut. Then strike a sharp blow, cutting the real root an inch below the "crown"—the point where the leaves put out and the burdock is as dead as Julius Caesar. The thing can't grow; for the part of the root that produces leaves is separated from the rest of the root. A spud used in the similar way would have the same result.

TWENTY FIVE YEARS ON THE JOB

THIS is the first of a series of biographical sketches of Canadian Pacific Railway men who have been a quarter of a century and over in harness. These men, principally graduated from headquarters, and by their own perseverance, hard work and faithfulness to duty, gained for themselves high honors in railroad service.

W. B. LANIGAN, assistant freight traffic Manager of Western Lines, was born at Three Rivers, Que., Oct. 13, 1861. He was educated at St. Joseph's College, Three Rivers, and Stanstead College, Quebec. He joined the Canadian Pacific Railway service Sept. 18, 1884, as telegraph operator at Sharbot Lake, when the Ontario and Quebec railway was opened between Montreal and Toronto via Smith's Falls and Ottawa. From 1885 to 1886 he was relieving agent on the Ontario Division; 1886 to 1888 agent at Clarewood, Myrtle and Dundalk; 1888 to 1891 agent at Galt; 1891 to 1900 travelling freight agent, Toronto; 1901 assistant general freight agent, Toronto; on July 1, 1901, he was appointed general freight agent, Winnipeg. In March, 1908, he was promoted to assistant freight traffic manager of western lines, which position he now holds. He is using the first desk occupied by a freight traffic manager on the C. P. R. lines, and says he would not exchange it for the best mahogany desk made.

FRED. E. GAUTIER, purchasing agent, western lines, was born at Gibraltar, in 1854. He was educated in Paris, France. He is a university B.L. His first service was in the French foreign office. He served in the marine department, Canada, also fishery protection service afloat. He was sent to Winnipeg in 1882 by George Stephen, then president of the Canadian Pacific Railway. In March of that year he was clerk in the local freight office. In May he was put in charge of the supplies in General Manager Van Horne's office. In June he was appointed private secretary to Mr. Van Horne. In August he was in charge of purchases, with no title. During three months, in 1884, he was acting local treasurer, while also in charge of purchasing department. In January, 1900, he was appointed assistant purchasing agent, and in February, 1912, he was appointed purchasing agent, which position he now holds. Mr. Gautier has seen the beginning and completion of the line. In 1885 he was sent by General Superintendent Egan to meet the first troop trains, during the Reil Rebellion. He was a captain in the Governor-General's Foot Guards, Ottawa.

HENRY WILLIAM SWEENY, local treasurer, Winnipeg, is a son of the late Col. J. F. Sweeny. He was born at Montreal, Jan. 22, 1868, and educated at Montreal High School. He entered the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway as junior clerk in the treasury department, June 9, 1886, and was appointed cashier in 1892. In April, 1894, he was appointed paymaster on lines east of Montreal. In September, 1897, he was appointed paymaster on all lines east of Fort William and promoted to local treasurer at Winnipeg in 1903. His work embraces territory covered by the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and part of British Columbia, and includes jurisdiction over the paymasters' offices at Winnipeg and Calgary. Mr. Sweeny has been with the company 31 years and more than eight years in his present position as local treasurer at Winnipeg.

WILLIAM C. BOWLES, general freight agent, Western lines, was educated in Commissioner's Schools, Montreal. He entered the service of the company as clerk, in the office of district freight agent, Montreal, Dec. 1, 1891. He was clerk in district and general freight agent office, Montreal, until Feb., 1896, and was acting chief clerk in office general agent freight department, Chicago, from March, 1896, to August, 1896. He was rate clerk in the office of the general freight agent in Montreal from August, 1896, to August, 1897, and rate clerk in office of traffic manager, Winnipeg, from September, 1897, to June, 1899. He was chief clerk in office of general freight agent and assistant freight traffic manager, Winnipeg, July, 1899, to February, 1903, and was assistant general freight agent Calgary and Vancouver, 1903 to 1906. During 1906 and 1907 he was general freight agent, Kootenay and boundary districts, Nelson, and appointed general freight agent, Manitoba district, 1907-1909; general freight agent B. C. district, Vancouver, 1909-1911. In latter years he came to Winnipeg.

Laurette Taylor's Success In The New War Play "Out There"

Laurette Taylor, who scored an international success in "Peg O' My Heart," is appearing in New York in the latest and best of the war plays "Out There," writes Alexander Woollcott, in the New York Times. It was written by her husband, J. Hartley Manners.

It is a play of the moment and for the moment. It has been brought forward in New York at a time so psychologically right as to be the envy of every counting house on the Rialto. Its every line has a hundred heart-warming association for every one of us. It strikes a hundred chords strung tight by the great events to which we march. It is difficult to imagine what our reaction of its appeal would have, been had it been brought to us instead of "Peg o' My Heart" four years ago. Perhaps it cannot long survive after the soldiers have been mustered out. But in its day and hour it is the seventh wonder of the season.

You must first meet little Cockney Annie in her dismal, hopeless home in Camden Town—'Aunted Annie, who has talked her bloke into going off to the wars and who burns to get "out there" herself and do her bit for England. Her strange, wide-eyed fervor gives her slacker brother and sister the fair pip and stealthily, for fear of their gibes and jeers, she sews away on a home-made nurse's uniform, a white robe on which a raffish red cross sits askew. It is such a costume as she wears in her brave dreams at night, when, for a few hours, she is a real nurse tending the sick and wounded at the front. She is sick with envy of the fine ladies whom she suspects of going "out there" just for the excitement and t' get their faces in the illustrated papers. All she asks, as a starter, is a chance to run errands, make beds, scrub floors—anything to get "out there," and she is all-of-a-tremble with eagerness when her moment comes to plead her cause before a big doctor who has been assigned to a British hospital in France. Could she go with him? She must go with him. You see her shining eyes and tremulous lips as she tries valiantly to choke back her emotion long enough to tell that startled gentleman a few choice stories just to show him how well she could entertain the boys at the front. Of course he takes her. And really it seems no extravagance. When you hear her plead her cause you don't see how he could very well help taking her.

Then comes the hospital itself—the row of beds with the wounded men from every corner of the unparalleled empire. You see her bustling about among them—'appy Annie now. You see her scrubbing diligently when the nurse is watching, but devoting herself to their amusement when the chance is offered. She is the apple of their eyes, and even the gloomy Irishman lights up the sight of her, though he groans aloud when she sings and though, when she confides to him that she fair wished herself "out there," he loudly and rudely hopes to God that she will wish herself back again. Her services are innumerable. She may be merely getting a fair copy of the magic word "holocaust" so that the New Zealander can spell it right on writing home. She may be merely applauding the Scotchman when he essays a Lauder song or rescuing his "precious bonnet" when the others hide it from him. You watch her forage for cigarettes and cigars for her charges and hear her fascinate them with some fearful ballad of the music halls. Now she is chatting with the lonesome Cockney about prize-fighting and particularly about the fearful 'ook and the wicked left which had made her brother famous in Camden Town.

She is the joy of the ward and when she is told again and again that she must not bother the men, must not smuggle contraband luxuries to them, and, above all, must not lift and comfort them when they are in pain, she simply does not understand. The impulse to take care of them is stronger far than her faint notion of discipline, but little Annie has the makings of a good soldier in her, and in her great hour her new sense of duty resists all the impulses of her heart.

That great hour comes when two wounded men are brought in fresh from the field—two grievously wounded men, quiet, for the moment, under the first opiates. Only Annie is left in the ward with them, and as she crawls along the floor with her brush and pail there comes suddenly the sound of one of them calling out in delirium, a high-pitched, anguished voice that says again and again in more and more ominous tones: "One, two, three, four—charge; one, two, three, four—charge." She is in a torture of anxiety to do something, and knowing she may not even put a soothing hand on the troubled head, she stands in suffering indecision for a while and then, with an inspiration creeps toward the cot, bends over it in an agony of solicitude and softly croons the strains of "Rockaby-by-by." Gradually it takes effect. Gradually the delirium subsides and only the music of the lullaby can be heard in the silent ward. Then comes the searing moment when, out of that silence, the other man lurches forward with a dreadful shriek and Annie, as she throws obedience to the winds and forces him back on his pillow, sees that it is her own man, her own feller she had been walking out with and whom she herself had beguiled into the army. The doctor, hurrying forward then, knows that the time has come either to throw Annie out of the hospital or recognize her as a nurse. So, at the last, she is sitting there with her funny, treasured red-cross cap on her head, holding her own boy's hand close to her beating heart. It is the post of posts in all the world for her, but when the delirium calls her once more, it is after only a moment's inner struggle that she leaves that post and goes to tend the stranger. Then is she Nurse Annie indeed, a little wide-eyed, happy - go - lucky Cockney drudge who has learned the lesson of service.

This is the climax of the second act, an extraordinarily long act which, for the most part, is so cheerfully devoid of all that the wise acres of the theatre call "action" that it probably gave Mr. Manners qualms of uneasiness and doubtless led him to call his piece not a play but "a dramatic composition," a curious kind of evasion which usually is the preamble to something pretty painful in the way of entertainment. This act, this celebrated act, is disrespectfully unlike a portion of a "well-made play" as you could well imagine and is a most fascinating thing to see and hear. It is too bad that 'Out There' could not end there. It is too bad there has to be a third act at all.

But proably it is necessary. It is no doubt a sound tradition which says a play must last till 11 o'clock, or nearly that. And those who have watched Annie from her first, almost hopeless, aspirations for war service are doubtless entitled to see her at last in her red cross uniform. But the act devised for this laudable purpose is disappointing. It is disappointing even now that it has improved immeasurably over the chaos of the first night, when the desperate speed of the preparations brought it to New York in no condition to be seen at all.

In this third act you see the Hudd family renovated by the war. Chunky 'Erb is in khaki and straining at the leash to get "out there." 'Aughty Lizzie is making munitions and will entertain no proposals of marriage until she has pulled the Government through. Even Ma. 'Udd is door-tender at a hospital, and has given up gin for the duration of the war, with no more than a sigh and a bit of a prayer that the war won't last long. And Annie—Annie is a speaker at recruiting meetings, and so successful, they say, that her hypnotized listeners enlist without knowing a war is on, going to sleep civilians and waking up in khaki. Thus loudly does this act roar and thunder in the index, and it is small wonder that the speech we then hear her make in Trafalgar Square seems a bit short-weight after such an introduction. When 'Trilby" was staked it was not only not feasible to engage, but it was impossible to find anywhere in the world, a singer who could bear out satisfactorily the reputation of her magic voice, and when George M. Cohan wrote a play about Billy Sunday he was far, far too clever to try to write one of his speeches. Mr. Manners has written a speech for Annie to deliver, but it is a lame speech, absurdly confined to generalities, strangely centred on the question of preparedness and monstrously worded to apply to America. It is helped out by cheers from the listening crowd and by the fine stimulation of "Rule Britannia" and "The Marseillaise," but it is a disappointment to all who have felt the thrill of what has gone before.

This play—this little gospel of service—is intrusted to an uncommonly competent cast. In the carefully chosen company at the Globe no one is inadequate, and among those who help Laurette Taylor, Lynn Fontanne and Leonard Mudie play with really brilliant skill and finesse But the play belongs to Miss Taylor and it strengthens the hold she has upon the affection and admiration of New York. You could ask nothing better than the girlishness the jaunty humour, and the fine fervor—the uplifting fervour of this performance. You can imagine nothing more inspiring in the theatre just now than the sight of her standing with her hands clasped, her cheeks flushed, and her eyes as big as saucers, while she whispers again and again, "We're goin' t' win, ain't we, doctor? We gotta win! Bli' me!"

HOW TO REGAIN STRENGTH

The great factor that retards recovery after sickness is that weakened devitalized condition, and it will interest our readers to know that our local druggists have a reliable, non-secret strength creator called Vinol, which contains iron and manganese peptones for the blood, beef and cod liver peptones and glycerophosphates, all combined in a delicious native wine. For weak, run-down conditions and to regain strength after sickness, there is nothing better. McDermid & Jury, Druggists; E. L. The Churches and Social Needs

By J. S. WOODSWORTH, Director, Bureau of Social Research of the Three Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta

CHANGED social conditions in Canada demand changes in church organization and methods. A quarter of a century ago the population of Canada was largely homogeneous, agricultural and rural. To-day the population of Canada is heterogeneous, increasingly industrial and urban.

Under modern conditions even the country demands co-operative effort. The farmers are realizing this and have organized extensive financial and social co-operative enterprises. The educationalists are beginning to realize it and to establish consolidated schools. The churches lag behind. They are still attempting to cover the field with denominational agencies. The result is overlapping and inefficiency.

Especially is this true of Western Canada, where the population is composed of such diverse elements. Even interdenominational co-operation as now attempted does not meet the case. We think of a town in Northern Manitoba with a population of some five hundred, consisting mainly of Canadians, Old Country English, Half-Breeds, Icelanders, Ruthenians and Poles. What provision is there for the religious needs of this district? A Church of England student, fresh from the old land, comes from the next town every Sunday morning to conduct a service in the schoolhouse for a little group of a dozen people. A Roman Catholic priest visits the district about once a month to conduct mass and baptize the children. A Lutheran minister pays a visit to the Icelanders about once every six months. There is an arrangement—regarded by the people as temporary and unsatisfactory—by which the Presbyterians have withdrawn their student. The Methodist supply is an inexperienced and untrained young Englishman. There is little moral or religious leadership. Unless there is a change that community—so far as the church is concerned—will lapse into paganism. In this particular case, a more experienced man has recently been sent in, but what can he do in the face of such divisions?

If organized effort is needed in the country, how much more in the city? In every line of activity, it is the key to success. How business men continue to support such unbusiness-like methods of church and social work as prevail remains a mystery.

In the religious and charitable work of the down-town districts of our larger cities, we find chaos and inefficiency. Owing to the shifting of population the old church buildings are now in the heart of a semi-business district which, however, is more densely populated than ever before. The difficulty is that the present residents are "boarders," "labor people," "Old Country immigrants" and "foreigners."

Under such circumstances many of the churches sell their buildings to advantage and follow their members to the better residential districts. Others maintain a struggling existence—each with its faithful little band attempting to support a poorly-paid minister, who is breaking his heart trying to do the impossible.

In the meantime the problems are steadily growing and becoming more menacing. Moral and political corruption are eating their way into the very heart of our civic life. Yet the church stands helpless. Social injustice goes unchecked; yet the church offers no leadership. Is it any wonder that many follow false lights?

United organized effort would work wonders. It would prevent duplication and waste. It would increase efficiency and multiply results. But its moral effect would be of still greater importance. Not only would the church present a united front to the forces of evil but it would be dominated by a new ideal. The very union would be the domination of a new ideal! No longer would it be "the community for the church," but, rather, "the church for the community."

The various denominations may have been admirably fitted to meet the needs of the countries which gave them birth or the needs of an earlier day in this country. We submit that they do not adequately meet the needs of Canada to-day. The Church Union Movement is, at bottom, a reaching out toward an organization that will save Canada.

A VERDICT IN FAVOUR OF TRAPPER

Because he illegally removed eighteen traps which had been placed on the property of the General Electric Milling Company near Sydenham during high water this spring, and later visited the storage place of a trapper nearby and took a quantity of pelts which were stored there, a prominent official of the company was ordered by a magistrate to replace the traps and return the furs within twenty-four hours. He did so, and now the plaintiff has announced that he will proceed against the defendant to recover damages for the time which the traps were out of the water. The case aroused much interest in the Sydenham district, as many people trap along the lake, and the decision establishes their right to follow the water lines in pursuit of the fur bearers.

SAVE but HOW?

You are daily admonished by Bankers, Cabinet Ministers, Judges, and by all the Press of the Country to save and be thrifty. In fact the stamps on our letters are cancelled by the admonition to "Save, Save, Save, etc."

Outside of the Bankers' Association who have recommended the Banks, very few other suggestions have been made.

Why has no person suggested or recommended the greatest thrift producer and the greatest anti-poverty Institution known to the Public?

For instance let us suppose two thousand men at say age 20 propose to test this principle for say twenty years and one half of them invest a small sum annually in a bank and the other thousand deposit an equal amount annually with this anti-poverty institution. Now if I can show you that those who deposited with the anti-poverty institution not only received more than those who deposited in the bank, but that the anti-poverty institution paid to the beneficiaries of the unfortunate depositors who were unable to continue their payments the large additional sum of $159,000.00 which the banks kept for their stockholders, would that interest you?

The banks are all right, but if I can show you that this anti-poverty institution not only gave better security and actually gave better returns, but in addition they gave a Bond that if anything unforeseen such as death, happen you, they would protect you and your estate to any extent desired, would it interest you?

The above facts can be verified to you by calling at, 'phoning or writing the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, 403 Water Street, and such action on your part places you under no obligation whatever

NO TIME FOR CRITICISM WHEN WORLD NEEDS FOOD

Mr. H. B. Cowan Re-echoes the Warning Public Men Have Sounded That We Are on the Verge of a World-wide Famine—Production Efforts Must Be Made Now.

Mr. H. B. Cowan, Managing Director of Farm and Dairy and The Canadian Horticulturist, when asked for his views said that there are reasons to believe that the worlds' food situation is much worse than the majority of people in Canada realize. "For years before the war," said Mr. Cowan, "the rural population of this continent and in Europe, because of economic and social conditions, was decreasing while the population of the towns and cities was rapidly increasing. Before the war over half the population of the United States lived in cities, and in Ontario almost one-half lived in the urban centres. This meant that the production of food was becoming a more and more serious problem and would have been even more serious years ago but for the improved farm machinery and improved methods of cultivation used by the farmers which to a considerable extent off-set the decrease in the rural population.

RESERVE SUPPLIES GONE.

When the war broke out there were large reserve supplies of most food necessities, as well as of other necessaries such as clothing and household supplies. Thus it was not until the war had been in progress for a couple of years that these supplies became practically exhausted. To-day, in almost all lines reserve supplies are gone and as the number of combatants is greater to-day than at any other time, the demand on such supplies as are left is correspondingly increased. It has been said that to-day thirteen nations are on the verge of starvation and are only kept from it by the most stringent methods of food control, such as have been adopted by the Central Powers and recently to some extent by Great Britain. In Palestine and other parts of Asiatic Turkey it is reported that over 500,000 people have already died of starvation. It is further said that the whole food supply of the world is not sufficient to last beyond next August. This is why such men as Prof. Leacock, of McGill University, have issued the warning that we are on the verge of a world-wide famine.

Even were the war to cease within the next two months it would be too late to improve conditions to any great extent this year. Should it continue many months longer, the fact that large number of men in the United States, who hitherto have been producing food supplies, and other necessities of life will be called from the ranks of the producers and added to the ranks of the consumers, is certain to make the condition all the more acute.

NO TIME FOR IDLE CRITICISM.

While there is much that might be criticized in the efforts that are being put forth to increase food production this is not the time for carping criticism. It is a time when everyone should take advantage of every opportunity to do what they can to supply the needs of the people. Those, who have backyards and can use them should use them. Those, whether high school boys or older people, who can assist with farm work should do so. While the results in this work may not be as great as the public may possibly expect, still it will all help. Personally I would like to see firms or stores in the city employing any considerable number of people secure land on a larger scale than is generally proposed and arrange to work it systematically. Competent men could be engaged to direct this work, and if necessary the employees could be given occasional half-holidays or let off earlier in the afternoon to work it together under proper supervision. Much of the work that is going to be attempted this year is sure to fail because those doing it are lacking in experience. There are also many people who would like to do something, but who are conscious of their inexperience and therefore do not like to try.

If the government should purchase a farm tractor for use in every county as has been suggested, much good would result provided the season is not already too late now to make this practical. While these tractors could be used on only a very small percentage of the farms in each county, in fact on only very few of them, still by working early and late, they could prepare for seeding many thousands of acres of land.

From reports that reach me, and from farmers I have talked with, I am satisfied that the farmers are doing everything in their power to keep up production, in spite of much of the criticism that has been levelled against them. Early in the war, the farmers warned the cities what would happen if more men were taken from the land. The result was that many of them were called unpatriotic and other uncomplimentary names. To-day our highest statesmen realize that the farmers were right and that unless food production can be kept up the consequences will be most serious. If city people were to work anything like as hard this summer as the vast majority of farmers will, they would have a better appreciation of what farmers are doing to maintain production.

Clarence Mark Seriously Injured

Cousin of Local Man Victim of Automobile Accident

TORONTO, April 18. — Clarence Mark, twenty-five years of age, 437 Brock avenue, is in the Parkdale Hospital with a fracture of the skull, which he sustained in an accident at the corner of Dufferin and College streets. This intersection has been the scene of many similar accidents, some of which have been attended with fatal results.

His companion, Fred Milne, 381 College street, who was driving an automobile which was struck by a hose reel from Ossington avenue station on the way to a fire, received slight injuries and was removed to his home by the police ambulance.

Milne and Mark were proceeding west along College street at a moderate rate of speed, the police report of the occurrence declares, when the hose reel came south on Dufferin street, responding to a fire at the Horton Miling Company, 444 Dufferin street.

The automobile was badly damaged. Mark was thrown out. He was taken to the surgery of Dr. Russell, and from there removed to the hospital, where an operation was resorted to immediately as the only means of saving his life.

Norwood High School Boys To Help On Farms

Ten of the Norwood High School boys have already engaged with farmers, fifteen others are available, all want to go, and the girls are anxious to help if they can be of any service. Such is Mr. G. L. Galley's report from his visit yesterday when he addressed the students on the work in which the Government is urging boys between the ages of 14 and 18 to participate. The principal, Mr. R. G. Lawlor, stated that farmers who were dubious last year of the effectiveness of boys' help, are applying now for the boys whom they hesitated to accept last spring. This is Norwood's experience, and the readiness of the boys to return to the farms this summer should encourage Peterborough boys to be equally eager to help wherever they find an opportunity.

WAR CONDITIONS AND THE SCRIPTURES

Do They Show That the World is Getting Better?—What Two Schools of Thought Contend

Is the present world situation in accord with the teachings of Scripture or is it not? In other words, do the prophecies in the Scripture clearly foretell that such a world situation as now exists was bound to come? This subject will be discussed Friday evening at a public meeting in St. Paul's Presbyterian church by Rev. F. W. Hollinrake B.D., of of Barton street Methodist church, Hamilton.

The answer to the foregoing question depends upon how you interpret the Scriptures. Broadly speaking, all the leading Protestant denominations are sharply divided into two different schools of interpretation. One school, which is considerably the larger of the two, claims that Christ's spirit is operating in the world and is assuring the triumph of right over wrong, and that the world is making greater progress morally, spiritually, materially and in every other way than ever before. This school contends that the heathen will ultimately be converted, people will see the wrong of wars, and political corruption, and that right will triumph until the universal reign of the Saviour becomes recognized. Many of those who hold this view believed before the war that there would be no more great wars, that the world had already progressed to a point where such would be impossible. After the war broke out they contended that this would be the last great war. Those who belong to this school of interpretation are called post-millennialists because they postpone the literal return of the Lord until the world has been converted and brought under His sway.

The other school of thought are known as pre-millennialists. They are fewer in numbers, but include practically all the great evangelists, such as the late Charles Spurgeon of London, England, Dwight L. Moody, of Chicago, and Dr. Gordon of Boston, and such present day evangelists as Dr. R. A. Torey, Wilbur Chapman, Billy Sunday, Dean Gray of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, and noted scholars, such as Prof. Griffith Thomas of Toronto, Sir Wm. Ramsay, Prof. Kyle and many others of equal standing. This school of interpretation contends that we are now living in what is known as the age or dispensation of grace, or what is sometimes called "the times of the Gentiles." During this age our Saviour is absent from the earth, but has sent His Holy Spirit to operate in the hearts of Christians during His absence. During this age the Gentile nations of the earth as well as the Jews, are being tested as to their love for Christ. Throughout the age the good and the bad will exist side by side. Christians will be the salt of the earth and by their presence in the earth will prevent evil conditions from full development. Because of the fact that millions of people will not follow the leadership of Christ, evil will continue throughout the age. Even although the world may make great progress in intellectual and material affairs, these developments, such as great inventions, will be put to evil uses as well as to good purposes, because evil people will make use of them as well as good people. Near the close of the age, and shortly before the unexpected return of the Lord, there will be greater wars, followed by famines and pestilences, than at any other time during the age. They were foretold by the Lord shortly before His ascension, and were given as signs to those who would be watching and waiting for His return. When He comes the world will not be expecting Him and there will be a great time of judgement. In support of this view those who hold it call attention to such passages as Luke, 17:20-37, 1st Thessalonians, 5:1-10 and others of the same character. Not until after His unexpected return will wars cease and justice reign throughout the earth. Those who follow this school of interpretation have been expecting the development of such world conditions as prevail to-day, and in them they see proof of the inspiration of the Scriptures. They therefore, believe that there is good reason to believe that they foretell the early return of the Lord.

The whole spirit will be interestingly dealt with at the third of the monthly lectures of Prophecy in St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Friday evening of this week. Rev. Mr. Hollinrake, the speaker, was for years a post-millennialist, but has had to change his views and will speak on the subject of "Why I Became a Pre-Millennialist." The lectures are inter-denominational and the public is cordially invited to attend. Rev. R. B. Grobb, of All Saints church, will preside.

Two fair munition workers were discussing their personal affairs.

"Got a chap yet, Liz?" inquired one.

"Yes, and he's a regular toff. He's manager at ——"

"You don't say so! Why, they tell me he's real refined."

"Rather! Why, he took me to a restaurant last week, and when we had coffee he poured it into a saucer to cool it, but he didn't blow it like common people would—he fanned it with his hat."—Tit-Bits.

Although "A Little Bit of Fluff" is a regular $1.50 attraction, the management of "The Grand" have arranged for the best seats for the local engagement at $1.00 each for the evening performances. So popular have the popular priced matinees been that it has also been arranged that the entire lower floor and the first section of the balcony will be sealed at 50 cents and the second section of the balcony 25 cents, children any seat 35 cents. All seats are reserved, and the plan will open at the Box Office Thursday morning. Albert Brown is too well known here to require any introduction, having appeared at the local playhouse in "The White Feather" and "The Black Feather." The company go direct from here to Toronto where they play a week's engagement, opening on Monday next.

AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION TO HOLD A DINNER

The Peterborough Automobile Association will hold a dinner for all the members on Monday evening, April 23rd, at 7 p.m., at the Oriental Hotel at 50c a plate. There are 125 members in the local Association and every one is expected to attend. A general meeting of short duration will follow the dinner, the object of which is to get the members as a whole interested in the advancement of the Association this coming season and particularly in connection with the motor show on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week. The Automobile Association has been requested by the Red Cross motor show committee to inaugurate the opening of the show with a motor parade to start at 7.30 o'clock Thursday evening. It is hoped that every motor-owner in the city will take part in this parade and particularly urged that the members of the Association act as a committee of 125 enthusiasts to induce the other 475 motor-owners who are not members to help make this parade the greatest automobile event ever held in Peterborough. Let every member come to the dinner on Monday night.

Exaggerated Claims Made In United States

Special to the Examiner:

Brigadier-General the Hon. James Mason, Chief Organizer of the Reserve Militia of Canada, writes as follows to the Toronto Globe:

A few days ago there appeared in a Toronto newspaper under the heading of "Canadian Press Despatch," and of date New York, April 18th, a statement from which I quote:

"A special cable to The Herald from London, dated yesterday, says:

"'The prospect of the early participation of American troops fighting under the American flag on the Western front has caused tremendous enthusiasm here.

"'Already the nucleus for a force is at grips with the Prussians in France, it being estimated that 82,000 American citizens are fighting in the Canadian units. It is surmised here that a request will be made to obtain the release of the 82,000 trained fighters from the Canadian units to enable them to fight hereafter under their own flag.

"'The force could be strengthened by the addition of about 10,000 regulars to be sent from the United States army at once, thus forming a powerful army corps, which, in the forthcoming operations, would bear a part as glorious as that borne by Field Marshal French's first gallant little expeditionary force.'"

While not for a moment thinking of detracting in any way from the credit due to those American citizens who are gallantly assisting us, I think, in justice to our own men, the following facts should be made known:

I had occasion to make speeches in the Senate towards the end of the last session of Parliament on recruiting, and also on registration, and the figures I obtained in connection with the preparing of these statistics were official in every instance.

Up to March 31st, 1916, out of a total of some 300,000 enlistments, the foreign born numbered 10,000; from this total of 10,000 there must be deducted Russians. French, Greeks, Italians and other foreign reservists or patriots, who naturally preferred the facilities given in the Canadian army to those in their own distant forces, so probably not more than 5,000 of this total were Americans, and as the proportion of native Canadians enlisting increased after March, 1916, the outside total of Americans in our 400,000 men training in Canada and England or fighting at the front would be barely 7,500, with less than half that number catually in France.

In view of this it is difficult to understand why such statements should be made, and I trust the press of Canada will do its best to correct this erroneous American impression, more especially as I am told New York papers the other day were sold on the streets to the cry of "Great American Victory at Vimy."

The Moon and The Weather

In the Examiner, a correspondent desires to know whether the moon has any influence on the weather.

This is a point that has been in dispute for ages. Even at the present time, farmers generally, and many others, have the greatest faith in the moon as a weather forecaster. Men of science, however, say that the moon has absolutely no effect on the weather, and that careful investigations over wide sections of country and long periods of time, bear out their views.

Recently the United States Weather Bureau made a thorough investigation into the subject and the conclusion arrived at was that the moon had no effect on the weather conditions, or if it had any effect it was so small as to be negligible.—W. P.

After getting the short end of it a wise man says nothing but proceeds to even things up.

Hon. W. D. McPherson Explains Women's Franchise Movement

Made a Plea to the Women of Ontario to Intelligently Inform Themselves on National Questions—New Bill Provides Better System of Registration.

MISS BOULTON'S ADDRESS

The mysteries of a Conservative political meeting were revealed for the first time to a number of newly enfranchised women who last evening attended the mass meeting that was held in the Opera House under the auspices of the West Peterborough Conservative Association. While the meeting may not have been as political in expression as it would during the heat of a campaign it was decidedly political in sentiment. Miss Constance Boulton, of Toronto, who was the only lady speaker on the list, left no doubt in the minds of those present as to which of the two parties she would ally her influence. She professed to be a Conservative by conviction as well as by tradition.

The C. D. P.

Lieut.-Col. D. Walker, Officer Commanding the 57th Regiment, Canadian Defence Force, addressed the meeting on the need of the Canadian Force. "You came here," said Col. Walker, "to discuss the questions of the day. There is only one important question of to-day, and that is how to win the war. The Government is calling for fifty thousand volunteers to fill up the ranks of the Canadian Defence Force to take the place of the men who have gone overseas. During a war an emergency may arise and it is always the unexpected that happens. We must be prepared to defend this country should the necessity arise."

Welcomed the Ladies.

Mr. C. E. Moore, President of the West Peterborough Conservative Association, welcomed the ladies to the ranks of the voters. Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., said that the idea of holding the meeting was to follow up the action of the Ontario Legislature in granting equal suffrage to women. "We formally and cordially welcome the women," said Mr. Burnham, "and it is our wish that they will co-operate with us and take a part in our meetings. If the women form an association of their own as some propose, they won't be popular. They cannot expect to sit on the fence and have us do all the work. Schools of thought there have been since the creation of the world, but schools of independence there never was and never will be. People who are neither hot nor cold never amount to anything."

Future Election.

The future election will be an extraordinary thing. Women will be expected to introduce order and lots of meetings may be expected to end up in mutual admiration. These things are no joke. We have got women's suffrage amongst us and we must put up with it. The mere humble men of the Conservative Association beg to extend the kindest compliments to the women voters and urge them to co-operate in our efforts."

Miss Constance Boulton.

"I feel appalled at the responsibilities which the Premier has forced upon the women," said Miss Constance Boulton. For the past two years my whole time has been devoted to the needs created by war, and while I have always been a suffragette I have always declined to discuss that subject since the outbreak of war. I am glad that it fell to the lot of the Conservative party to give us the vote and not the Liberals. Suffragette or no suffragette I could never vote for a party that declined to aid Great Britain when an emergency arose in 1913. If it hadn't been for the Opposition we would have had a navy and would have been in a position to assist the splendid British Navy which is standing between us and the enemy.

Down to Business.

Continuing, Miss Boulton said: "It has been said that the place of the women is in the home. I quite agree with that. I pity a woman who does not feel that her place is in the home."

Miss Boulton spoke of the efforts that had been put forth in order to get the vote. "Thank heaven it is all over and we can get down to business," said Miss Boulton. Instead of wondering whether we can exercise the vote we will proceed to fit ourselves to vote. We must organize and be ready for the great responsibilities that confront us. Our country is the most sacred thing we possess. We have the men to thank for many reforms we now enjoy, but there are a great many reforms to come."

The speaker dwelt at length upon the greater production movement and urged all present to assist in the work of increasing the food supply of the country. She also urged all men to associate themselves with the Canadian Defence Force and also made an appeal for conscription. As to whether or not the women voters of the Province would form an independent organization, Miss Boulton said:

"It is perfectly useless and hopeless to think of an independent party. Women can do best by joining the party we have the most sympathy with and use our influence to make that paty live up to the best ideals."

Amid an outburst of cheering, little Janie McDuffie, who was lifted on the platform, presented Miss Boulton with a beautiful bouquet of flowers.

HON. W. D. McPHERSON.

The extension of the franchise to men and women had been a process of evolution, said the Hon. W. D. McPherson, provincial secretary in a plain and practical address that dealt chiefly with the operation of the new franchise bill. "If we carry our minds back about ninety years we find that the franchise was very narrow and very restricted. As time proceeded, larger numbers of the people were given the right to vote, and we can safely say that with every extension of the franchise the liberties of the people were widened and broadened and made more substantial and secure."

There were many men in Canada today, Mr. McPherson said, who would vote adversely, if the question were presented to them, against the extension of the franchise to every man who had reached the full age of twenty-one years irrespective of whatever property rights he might have. But our predecessor had thought it wise that every male who had reached the age of twenty-one, irrespective of property qualifications should be entitled to a vote. All in all, we have as wide an extension of the franchise as any civilized country in the world. If we search for an example for a comparison with what Canada has done in the material world, in the promotion of moral legislation, in manufacturing, in business, in the intelligent desire to defend its rights I ask where can we find a more advanced people, judged by their achievements, than the eight million who reside in Canada.

EQUAL FRANCHISE.

Referring to the new franchise bill which placed every woman in this province who is twenty-one years old or over and a British subject by birth or naturalization, on equal footing with men, Mr. McPherson stated that some critics had made the objection that this question should have been submitted to the people. But to what part of the people do the advocates of that proposal think the question should have been submitted? By only the men voters or by the men and women who are over twenty-one years? If it were limited to the men. Mr. McPherson pointed out that in the past three or four years the question of woman's franchise had been submitted at various municipal elections and without a single exception the men had voted in favour of it. Hence if it had been submitted to the men of the province the probabilities were that it would have carried with a large majority. Had it been presented to the women those who were in favour of it would have voted yea and those who were not interested, or only slightly interested would have refrained from voting. Hence it would have likewise carried. The government concluded that the time was opportune for granting the franchise to women on precisely the same terms that men possess it.

"Consequently the act was passed," Mr. McPherson summarized, "and last Thursday it received the assent of the King through the Lieutenant Governor, and to-day is the law where by men and women of this province who are British subjects and twenty one years and over are entitled to the franchise on equal terms."

HOW WILL THEY USE IT?

Hon. Mr. McPherson proceeded to discuss the topic of how women would use the ballot and arrived at the conclusion that there is no essential difference between the interests of the men and women of this country. We are all here to make the best of life each having the same high ideals leading us to try to better conditions that the world may be made better and richer on account of us having lived in it. That is human destiny.

"The thought that the men of the community are going to range on one side and the women on the other passes my comprehension," observed the Minister. Governments are divided in to two sections, those who maintain it and those who oppose it. They take party names, but the men and women growing up to-day are possessed of an independent and thinking mind and are attracted to a party by the particular men who are representatives of it or by the measures they advocate. Sons of to-day are not slavishly following their fathers in politics Households were often divided in the party allegiance of their members. and Mr. McPherson believed that this condition would also apply to women voters. They would be attracted by the measures before them and to the parties that advocated the measures that appealed to them. Since only 67 per cent. of the men vote on election day, if the introduction of women is not more productive than that we couldn't pride ourselves on granting them the franchise. "I hope the educated women of this province," said Mr. McPherson, "will educate themselves to the great questions that enter into our national life and be prepared to come out and give an intelligent vote for the party of progress as they see that party in its representatives at election time."

PREPARING VOTERS' LISTS

Mr. McPherson then explained the new plan by which the voters' lists will be prepared. Prior to a provincial election the County Judge and his associates in the administration of justice in each riding shall appoint an enumeration for that constituency who will, in turn, select enumerators for each polling subdivision who shall tabulate a list of the qualified electors. These lists will be printed and posted. On a day fixed for that purpose those electors who were absent when the enumerator called at their homes, or were otherwise overlooked, shall meet at a certain time and place in order that their names may be added to the list. That done the lists will be completed. This will have an advantage over the present system which has been based on the lists for municipal elections. By the new method the lists will be almost absolutely up to date. Since they will be prepared shortly before a provincial election a comparatively small number of men and women will not succeed in getting their names on the list.

Musical numbers were contributed by Mr. E. Hanrahan, Miss Worth, Mrs. J. H. Renwick and the Opera House orchestra.

A vote of thanks was extended to the speakers and contributors to the programme, on a motion by Col. Miller, seconded by Mr. C. H. McClelland.

ALBERT BROWN AND HIS POLICY

Popular Comedian Who Visits the Grand on Saturday is Making Canada His Producing Field

(By Hector Charlesworth.)

Albert Brown, the most popular light comedian, who has visited Canada of recent years, is following up his policy of making this country his producing field. That Canadians appreciate genuine worth is shown by the fact that for two full years (allowing of course for the summer vacation), he has been acting exclusively in this country with pronounced success. Playgoers of the smaller cities and towns owe him a debt of gratitude as one of the very first actor-managers to grasp the fact that such centres had outgrown the slip-shod productions and third-rate companies it had long been the custom to inflict on them.

Mr. Brown announces that it will be his policy in future to present the best comic and romantic successes of the day in the same manner in which they are done in London and other large cities. The success he has already won in every province of Canada has encouraged him to make ambitious plans for the future. His latest production which will be seen here on Saturday next, is Walter Ellis' phenomenally successful farce "A Little Bit of Fluff," which has been running continuously at the Criterion Theatre, London, Eng., since the early autumn of 1915. The Criterion, which was long associated with the name and fame of Sir Charles Wyndham has been the historic home of modern English comedy since 1876, and "A Little Bit of Fluff" has enjoyed the longest run in the history of that house. Mr. Brown presents it precisely as it is being played in London, with gowns, furnishings and scenery which were sent to Canada direct from the British capital. In the Canadian West the production has been so highly appreciated that Mr. Brown has been playing to a steady average of $1,000 per night. In this respect the farce is duplicating the success it has won in all parts of the British Empire, where in all eight companies are presenting it. It is very doubtful, however, whether any of the other companies contains a comedian so brilliant and artistic as Mr. Brown. The piece affords him an opportunity of displaying his talents in a type of role quite different from any which he has played in the past; and it is hoped that "A Little Bit of Fluff" will be but the first of many noted successes that he will adequately present to the Canadian public as a whole.

Red Cross Tea

Mrs. Foote, 800 George street, was the hostess yesterday of a largely attended and extremely successful Red Cross tea. The house was beautifully decorated with flags of the allies and red crosses and the dining room carried out the colour scheme of red and white, with its daintily set table decorated with red candles and red and white carnations. Mrs. Foote was assisted in receiving by Mrs Nugent and Mrs J. Fife. Mrs. J. Long who poured tea, was assisted by Mrs. C. E. Smith, Mrs. S. Armstrong, Mrs. Knapman, Mrs. Wm. Hill, Mrs. G. Stevens, Mrs. A. W. Belleghem and the Misses Lillian Fife, Mary Elliott, Sarah Robinson, Alma Knapman and Maise Armstrong. Several musical selections during the afternoon and evening were much enjoyed. These included solos by Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton, Mrs. Renwick, Miss Malsie Armstrong., and piano selections by Miss Isabel Baird, Miss McLeland and Miss Sanderson. This was the last of the chain of 36 teas at which about $100 has been realized.

West Approves Of Free Wheat

"First Trench Has Been Taken," Says Hon. J. A. Calder—Land Values Will at Once Go Up $5 to $10 Per Acre Says Saskatoon Phoenix

LIBERALS MUST FIGHT ON

REGINA, Sask., April 18.—Hon. W. M. Martin, Premier of Saskatchewan, gave an interview on the announcement by the Federal authorities that wheat has been placed on the free list. Mr. Martin said: "The placing of wheat and flour on the free list will be of great benefit to the people of the West. The reciprocity proposals of 1911, on which Sir Wilfrid Laurier staked the fate of the Government, included all natural products. The agreement was bitterly opposed by the Tory party on various grounds, but perhaps the cry which had most to do with defeating the pact was that of "No truck nor trade with the Yankees." This peculiar thing that the Dominion Government concluded was so bad in 1911 and subsequent years is worth while in 1917. We welcome, however, its change of heart, and hope that it means more reforms of a similar kind in the near future.

Gratified at Reform.

"The Liberal party has continually demanded this reform. We have never departed from the stand taken during the reciprocity campaign. Today we are gratified at seeing what we have constantly advocated put into effect by a Government which has always assumed a hostile attitude toward the question. At last after six years' continuous agitation our demands have been in part complied with. We must continue the work and demand lower tariffs on all things which enter into the cost of the production of grain.

"The incident is a victory for the Liberal party, and should be celebrated by every Liberal Association in the West."

Will Bring Back Population.

"With an assurance of good prices in competitive markets, we can be certain that our labours will be repaid justly. Free wheat will help to bring back to the land that population which has gone elsewhere.

"Our wheat lands will soon be dotted with comfortable homes, men will turn to agriculture, and Saskatchewan will maintain her position as the bread basket of the Empire, giving full expression to the idea contained in the presentation of the gold and silver basket, made by the Saskatchewan Grain Growers, through our late Secretary, P. W. Green, to his Majesty King George at his coronation.

Next Logical Step.

"The next logical step is to give the farmers the same opportunity to purchase the necessary supplies required in the production of farm produce —this done and the Saskatchewan farmers will be able to compete against the world, despite cheap labour in other wheat-producing countries."

It Had to Come.

Edmonton, Sask.— Speaking of the placing of wheat on the free list, The Bulletin says: "Free wheat, like the Canadian navy, was a thing which had to come. The concession of free wheat to the western farmers will be construed generally to mean that we are to have a Dominion election this summer. All the more so as the western farmer is less in need of free wheat now than he ever was before."

Greatest Liberal Victory in Years.

Regina, Sask.—The Morning Leader says: "It is the greatest victory achieved by Liberalism—and we mean Liberalism in the largest possible interpretation of the word — in many years in Canada. The Borden Government and its big interest allies have at last been compelled to give way before the aggressive advocates of freedom in Western Canada."

Way Open for Sample Market.

Port Arthur, Ont.—Free wheat regulations are expected here to remove the objections to the establishment of a sample market, for which provision has already been made at the head of the lakes.

SMUTS' OWN STORY OF HIS CAMPAIGN

Began Operations in East Africa, Months Before War Office Considered it Possible—Situation Then Critical—South Africa Determined to Control Disposal of German Territories Conquered by the Union

Here is General Jan Christiaan Smuts' own story of his remarkable campaign of conquest, now in its final stage, from the northern to the southern borders of the vast wild animal paradise of German East Africa. It was told for the first time by him (outside of the fragmentary bulletins from the front and his confidential reports to the British War Office) at a great meeting of the people of Cape Town who, on Feb. 12, assembled with members of the Government and Parliament and city officials to honour the Commander-in-Chief on the eve of his departure for London to represent the Union of South Africa in the Imperial Conference about to meet there.

The situation was critical in the extreme when this lawyer-soldier, one of the old Boer leaders, was induced by the Imperial Government and pressure of his colleagues in South Africa to give up his position as Minis of Defense and undertake the task which General Smith-Dorrien, fresh from the battlefields of Flanders, had been compelled by illness to relinquish even as he began it. British East Africa had been invaded, and General Smuts found that he had to contend with an army of 40,000 to 50,000 thoroughly trained native troops stiffened by 3,000 Germans, and possessing powerful artillery, a large number of machine guns, several observation balloons, and a typically efficient commander in the person of General von Lettow-Vorbech, aided by Captain Muller of the destroyed cruiser Konigsberg.

His story contains many details not previously made public. It shows that he liberated British East Africa and carried his operations far into enemy territory months before the time figured by the War Office as the earliest advisable moment in which to start the campaign, and in concluding his narrative the General was very emphatic in making known that the Union of South Africa, having conquered this former great domain of the Kaiser and German Southwest Africa as well, would have a determining voice in the matter of the final disposition of these territories on her borders.

Undertook Task With Misgiving.

In his narrative General Smuts said:

"The enemy had found lodgment in British territory, and, in fact, when I arrived there the main German army was entrenched in British territory, and they were threatening from that point of vantage, near Taveta, the communications of the whole of British East Afri ; and, in fact, this report went so ar as to say there was no solid reason why the German forces, being as strong as they were, should not achieve a very considerable success, and perhaps cut British East Africa entirely off from the sea.

Resolved to Start Right In.

"We then felt that the situation was very grave indeed, and that every effort should be made by the Union Government to retrieve it. I went there, and when I arrived I found the situation as I have described it. So full of difficulties was it that the War Office at that time had decided not to start offensive operations until much later, after the rainy season in the June following. I went into the situation. The South Africans had all arrived, and I found that if I had to restore our morale and not waste long months in preparations and perhaps lose many men through sickness the proper course was to start in at once, and I asked the War Office for permission not to delay any longer, according to their instructions to General Smith-Dorrien, but to start at once and try to clear the enemy from British territory.

"Well, we started on March 8, and we had fourteen days of very hard fighting and very difficult work, but at the end of that fourteen days — which will ever remain a glorious page in the history of the South African troops—the German army had not only been driven off British territory, but they had lost a very large part of their own country. They had lost the whole of the Kilimanjaro district, and we were in a position to strike a heavy blow before the rainy season was over. How hard the fortnight was appeared from the one simple fact that we had far, more heavy casualties than during the whole of the Southwest campaign. But the work was done.

"The South Africans on that dark night stormed the heights of Taveta. When, at nightfall, the enemy was still in possession of the heights and had practically driven off the rest of our forces, we sent the South Africans in. They fought there that night and they had heavy casualties, but next morning the South Africans were on the crest of the hills and the enemy was in retreat. And so all through that wonderful fortnight they did their best in soaking rains, through dense forests, and over difficult mountains, with the result we have every reason to be proud of, and for which the British Government was profoundly thankful. We had no tents, in a fortnight the rainy season was coming on, but I thought even yet the time had not come to call a halt.

Terrors of the Rainy Season.

"An expedition was launched from Moschi into the interior under General Van Deventer. The enemy army had been driven in one direction toward the coast, and I thought the road to the interior being opened, this was the time to launch a strong flying blow, and for 200 miles that little army under General Van Deventer pierced into the country, suffering terrible hardships and privations. When General Van Deventer was well into the heart of that country a rainy season overtook us such as in its violence could never have been expected. I had made the utmost diligent inquiries as to what was likely to happen during the rainy season, but no information that we could gather prepared us for what actually did take place when the heavens came down in floods, when the rivers filled up, bridges were washed away, large parts of the country became swamps and lakes, and for many weeks the army in the interior was cut off from our base. No doubt during that time there were grave sufferings. Many men went without food, they had very little kit, and it was surprising that they could stand that season, but they did, and we can be proud of the work they have done.

"I feel sure that during the month of April work was done by General Van Deventer's division which, if we had waited until the rainy season was over, might have taken three, four, or even six months to do. When the deluge was over I went down with the main division toward the sea, along the Pangani River, and we crossed country which had seldom seen white faces in it. I do not think that upon the routes we followed many white people had ever been seen since that country was discovered. For hundreds of miles we went through country which had no road or track at all. We cut our way through the bush, we bridged the rivers, and we made passes through the mountains. The men suffered and exerted themselves almost beyond human endurance to make a feat like that possible, trekking not on a picnic, not in a great safari, but in the face of a resolute enemy who contested every inch of the ground.

Training of Native Troops.

"So it came about in due course and earlier than we had expected that the whole northern part of the country, with the Central Railway, fell into our hands. I had foreseen that a completely different campaign would begin after that. Shortly after my arrival in East Africa I warned the British government that it was not a country for white troops to stay in long. You yourselves in your midst have seen the Loyal North Lancashires who had been in that country from the beginning, and who were a living testimony to the ravages of fever and disease of that awful country, and I warned the British Government that it would be a dangerous policy and impolitic to leave white troops too long in that country, and, with their sanction, I started immediately on my arrival there to train an African army. I foresaw that, once we had the Central Railway in our possession, once we were pressing on to the further swamps to the south, it would be necessary to take the white troops from the country, and to carry on the campaign, as the Germans were carrying it on, with native troops.

Army of 12,000 Natives.

"That work went on while fighting was taking place in the field, and there to-day we have an army which will be able to take the field of more than 12,000 African trained soldiers. They are taking the place of our white South Africans, who are now coming back, and in regard to whom the greatest number are already back. When I reached the Central Railway and saw the ravages of fever among our men, I told the British Government that the time had come to put in force this new policy of which they had been warned. They agreed to it, and the result has been that since the middle of October we have sent back to South Africa from 12,000 to 15,000 South Africans, and evacuated them from that dangerous country. Their places have been taken largely by these new African troops who have been trained.

"It was at this stage, when the work was almost finished, when most of the country had been conquered and occupied—all that was valuable had been occupied —that the call of the British Government came that I should go to London to this War Council. I feel profoundly sorry today, I felt very sorry, as I told General Botha at the time, when we were so near the end, that all this should have been snatched from my hands at the very end. And I decided to do one bit of work more before I actually left that country.

"The enemy had a line on the Rufidji River and its tributaries which, consisting of one vast network of swamps, was a most difficult, fever-stricken ,and most dangerous country and I was afraid, as long as I left the enemy in that country, it might be said that I had not completed my work, and the last week of mine in East Africa was occupied in clearing the enemy out of Rufidji River and the swamps there. I am happy to say that to-day the whole German force is in retreat from the Rufidji toward the Portuguese border and, unless the rainy season, which is an awful thing in that country, seriously interferes with operations, it will not be long before that army either capitulates on the border or is driven out of German East Africa.

The future will perhaps see more of the significance of the work which has been done by the young South Africans there than we of this day and generation. Not only have we in cooperation with other imperial forces there conquered German East Africa, but we have secured far more. Through our efforts and our sacrifices we have secured a voice in the ultimate disposal of this sub-continent. And that is not a small matter for South Africa. We are the only white community on this whole dark continent. We are the only white State which, in the course of ages, has been founded successfully on this black continent, and surely as a white community, as a great civilizing centre, we are far more interested in the future of Africa than most other countries. Now we have acquired a voice, a right to speak when the day of disposal over these things comes, and I am glad, ladies and gentlemen, that we have done it successfully, and that that right nobody in the future will be able to take from us.

"Whatever happens to German East Africa— and nobody can say what is going to happen to that enormous country—this at least we know, that our advice will be considered when the time comes to settle these matters. As I say, that is a great point to have achieved by this small community of ours, and when we look to the future of South Africa it is even more important that no arrangement should be made in our immediate neighbourhood which might prejudice our future development. What was South Africa like 100 years ago? See where we stand to-day after a century of progress, and who is there to-day, even the wisest and most far-seeing among us, who can say what this great southern continent and this great country is going to look like another 100 years hence? However, the future will not be able to blame us and say we have not done our duty and pegged out our claims, and established our right to the future development of this southern continent."

May Command Army in Europe.

It is believed in South Africa that General Smuts will command an army of Union troops on the French front. In this connection it may be significant that, in concluding his speculation as to the future of South Africa, he pointed out that, while the fighting in that part of the world was over, the great issue of the world war was still at stake and that the Union still had a great part to play in settling it.

"My boys, the thousands and tens of thousands who went with me to East Africa, you will not keep here, I am sure, when they are restored to health and are fit men," he said. "They will go, and they will do their duty, and I hope their action will be an inspiration to many others who have been kept here by claims on their time and activity, to the end that we, throughout this great South Africa, will continue to play a worthy part."

SPECIAL GOSPEL MEETING

"The Will of God," was the subject of an interesting address delivered in Gospel Hall last night by Mr. Harold M. Harper. Before the address was given an unusually bright song service was enjoyed, after which Evangelist John Gilchrist led in prayer.

The message of the evening showed the will of God in relation, first of all to Man's Salvation and from I Tim., II: 3-6, it was shown that God was interested and concerned in bringing men and women to Himself. This He does on the righteous basis of the atoning work of Christ on the cross. Then the audience was directed to read I Thess. IV: 3, where the will of God was seen in regard to the Sanctification of the believer. The speaker said, quoting II Cor. III: 18, that we become like the object of our gaze citing Nathaniel Hawthorne's story of "The great stone fence." Passing from that to II Cor. VIII: 4-5, where the believer's Consecration was mentioned; and a strong plea was made for Christians to yield to Christ. Gal. 1: 3-5, was then read and one object of the death of Christ was pointed out even the Separation of the believer from the world. The speaker graphically pictured the death of Christ on cross, bringing that scene vividly before the minds of all present. Finally the will of God as the believer's Obligation was shown from I Thess. V: 18, even to give thanks in everything. The speaker said we give thanks usually for good things, but how few gave thanks for unpleasant and difficult things.

The attendance and interest has been increasing each evening. The public are invited to hear Mr. Harper speak to-night at 8 p.m., the subject being, "On the Jericho Road." Meetings last but one hour.

Hum Hoy Fined $50 For Having Opium In His Possession

Jim Hum and Hum Hoy, charged with having in their possession, on Sunday, April 8th, at the Chinese Grocery Store, 385 Water street, opium prepared or being prepared for smoking, appeared this morning before Magistrate Dumble. Hum Hoy pleaded guilty and was fined $50 and $2.65 costs. Jim Hum pleaded not guilty and at the noon recess, at the conclusion of the evidence in the case of these two men, announced that he would reserve his decision disposing of Jim Hum.

The other fifteen Celestials await a charge of being frequenters of the resort. License Inspector Stewart has a charge against Hum and Hoy of having liquor in their possession, the two bottles of Chinese wine, which have been analyzed, and a gambling charge hangs uncertainly over the entire seventeen.

Mr. G. N. Gordon represented eleven of the Chinamen, and Mr. Joseph Wearing, six. Crown Attorney Hatton conducted the prosecution.

Story of Raid.

Sergt. Reid swore that at 10.30 p.m. Sunday, April 8th, he, with Constables Wigg, Lawrence and Pratt, was at the back door of 385 Water street, the Chinese grocery store. "We could hear some Chinamen talking loudly inside. It seemed to come from the cellar. We heard a noise that sounded like chips and dominoes. We stood there about ten minutes, when we pushed in the door and entered the place. We found seventeen Chinamen in the cellar. There was a round-table with oil cloth covering that was marked off for some game. The men were all around the table. They were all standing when we got there. We found some dominoes, chips and dice on the table. There were two little jars that seemed to have had opium in each. There was no money on the table. We found two pipes with rags in them that were saturated with opium. They were both apparently hidden in the bunks. We found two other tin boxes containing what was apparently opium. We found two jars of Chinese wine.

Jim Hum was there. They were not in the act of playing or smoking when we found them. I came to the conclusion they had been playing. A couple of seconds elapsed from our breaking the door and entering the room in the cellar.

Cross-examined by Mr. Gordon, Sergt. Reid stated that neither he nor any of the police had a search warrant when the raid was made.

Sergt. Reid admitted that there was no impropriety in the Chinamen's possession of money, but Jim Hum and another had considerable small change in their pockets.

Referring to the Yen Shee, or scrapings of used opium from a pipe, Sergt. Reid said he had been informed to that effect by a local man, who is supposed to be an expert. Neither of the pipes were hot. There was no opium on the table.

"They had put it away," said the Sergeant.

"You didn't see them," said Mr. Gordon.

"No, but it looked as if they had."

"Thank God you're not a judge, or we'd all be in jail," commented Mr. Gordon.

P. C. Wigg.

P. C. Wigg corroborated the Sergeant's evidence. When the police were descending to the room, witness heard no sound of dice and dominoes being swept on to the floor, or of the upsetting of a table.

Mr. Gordon pointed out that Sergt. Reid had found the dominoes and chips on the table. Witness said some of them were on the table and some on the floor. Witness could not swear that the material in the boxes was opium. There was no evidence that any of the Chinamen other than Hum Hoy owned opium pipes.

Expert Evidence.

A local who admitted experiences in "hitting the hop" identified some of the viscous substance in the tin containers as opium specially prepared for smoking, and his testimony was unquestioned by the defence.

Mr. Gordon stated the "lay out" belonged to Hum Hoy, who recently came from Montreal, and asked the Court, in view of the plea of guilty in Hum Hoy's case, to exercise leniency in imposing a fine.

Magistrate Dumble responded with the maximum of $50, to discourage the Chinamen, he explained, in their social customs.

TOBACCO FOR GERMANY.

Company in Netherlands Formed to Export—Capital, $20,000,000.

AMSTERDAM, April 17. — This year's export of tobacco to Germany is to be financed by the Netherlands Association of Tobacco Dealers, a company specially formed here for that object with a capital of $20,000,000. With a view to maintaining its exchange rate, Berlin stipulates that German treasury bills of two years' terms shall be taken in payment for such goods, the bills being guaranteed by the reichsbank and six other leading German banking institutions.

Should the present shipping stagnation continue, or the shortage of cargo space become such that the Netherlands East Indian tobacco crop cannot be transported to the Dutch market, endeavours will doubtless be made to ship the tobacco. This would obviate the customary pilgrimage of American buyers to the Amsterdam sales.

A recruit applied to a Veterinary surgeon one morning for a prescription for his mount, which was ailing.

Two hours afterward the recruit ran into the vet's little office with a face as white as chalk.

"Oh, doctor, I am bad; the powder's nearly killed me!"

"The powder?" asked the doctor. "Why, didn't I tell you to place it in a tube and put one end in the horse's mouth and then blow hard? I didn't tell you to take it."

"Well, doctor," replied the victim, "I did put the powder in the tube and then placed one end in his mouth and one in mine."

"Well?"

"The blooming horse blowed first, sir!"—Exchange.

BOWLING

Last night at the Water Street Alleys the C. G. E. team took two out of three from the King Pins, in a league fixture. The King Pins showed lots of "pep" and were going great guns in the last game, rolling 652. The Electrical bowlers had three good games, and tried hard to come from behind in the last game, but to no avail, their mascot had departed. They had the "juice" turned on good and strong, but the voltage of the King Pins was too heavy. Moffatt had high mark for the King Pins with 528, and Nicoll of the C. G. E. had double honours with high three games, 558 and high single of 209. Fielder was close to him with 538.

Hard spares were pulled off by Stewart, Phillips, Ross and Solomon of the King Pins, and Mr. Somerville of the C.G.E.

Next match Thursday night, Grocers vs. Printers, when three good games are looked for.

Queen Mary Military Hospital, Whalley, Lane. Sapper Laing has been 16 months on the battlefield, and has had some hard and trying experiences. His many friends will wish him a speedy recovery.

OTTAWA, April 17.—An increase of the subsistence allowance for disabled soldiers in training for new occupations—from 60 cents to $1 a day—has been decided on by the Government at the request of the Military Hospitals Commission. By the same order-in-Council which embodies that decision men of the naval and flying services are brought into the scheme of training on the same footing with land fighters; a single man is to get $8 a month pocket money besides his maintenance, like the married men; and the allowances for dependent kinsfolk are extended to relatives who have not been drawing separation allowances.

Norwood Nurse Now In Petrograd

LONDON, April 17.—Canadian Nursing Sisters Gertrude Squire, of Norwood, Ontario, and Keaton Jo St. John, have returned from the Anglo-Russian Hospital at Petrograd, where they witnessed the revolution. They suffered no molestation, and the greatest consideration was shown the hospital, where, during the height of the disturbances, three accidental shots crashed through the windows, injuring nobody. Many wounded were brought for treatment.

The Canadian nurses saw some service in a clearing hospital near the Russian lines. They greatly enjoyed their visit, though handicapped for lack of knowledge of the Russian language. They had a delightful journey to England through Norway and Sweden, where they were received with greatest kindness, and were looked after by the various Embassies. The Queen of Sweden sent for Nurse Squire, who named her mother, the Duchess of Connaught, when ill in Montreal.

Nursing Sisters Dorothy Cotton, Toronto, and Chidley will go to Petrograd to take their places.

Germans Nervous On Whole Front; Captured Letters Show Discontent

British Headquarters in France, April 17.—From one end of the British front to the other the Germans are palpably nervous and jumpy. Where they have been driven from their old positions they are feverishly digging at every opportunity, particularly at night. Each morning new aeroplane photographs show the results of the nocturnal activities behind the temporary line. Most of the new trenches are merely emergency denfences built at angles with a view to giving cover to machine guns with which the Germans hope to delay the British advance until further work can make the rear defences tenable.

It is now said that no part of the Hindenburg line was expected to be completed until the end of April, despite the claims that the recent Western retirement has been entirely according to German plans.

Where the Germans still hold their old positions to the north of Loos the slightest movement on the part of the British sends them into a panic. Flares and signal rockets of all colours spring from their trenches. Bombs are cast into No Man's Land, trench mortars set up a defensive barrage, and artillery help is frantically called for.

Some of the German flares and lights are most amusing, as well as spectacular. Their latest star shells have a parachute attachment and hang suspended in the air for a long time, lighting up the surrounding country for several hundred yards. They break into three balls, and the British soldiers call them 'pawnbrokers.'

The Germans in the front line have long been worried by the inferiority of their artillery to that of the British. A recently captured report makes complaint that the artillery often fails to answer the call for help, and continues:

"For our infantry, which since the Somme Battle has been on the defensive, it is from point of view of morale of importance to be able to count upon artillery support. Infantry that comes to regard itself merely as a target for the hostile artillery must in the long run give way. A prompt and effective reply to hostile shells has a recuperative effect on the morale of the troops, even in the most difficult situations."

Germans Greatly Depressed.

Conditions within the German lines just prior to the batle of Arras and the depressed state of many of the German soldiers are eloquently described in translated extracts from letters captured during the recent fighting. Two letters in particular, both written by Bavarians in regiments opposite Arras, are wonderfully impressive. One of them indicates clearly the disheartening effect the entry of the United States into the war has had. It is dated April 6, and reads:

"We now have a very bad position at Arras, where we have been under a continuous hurricane of fire for six days. The English at times fire gas shells which are not exactly pleasant. When everything imaginable is turned against one, one cannot stand it; then it is all over. The sights around one are simply cruel; it is enough to drive one mad.

It is no longer a righteous cause; of that I am convinced. But one always begins to hope again, and think that it must come to an end. But it is not possible. The world is still in too mad a state. We are the tools and allow ourselves to be belaboured.

"Now America comes in to make it last longer. Everybody wants to chip in. I believe it will never end; peace will never return to the land."

The second letter, dated Easter, which was the day before the British attack began, tells how unwelcome to the Germans have been the weapons of their own invention when turned against them. It says:

"For the last four days the English have been firing gas shells all over the country in order to harm the Germans as much as possible. This regiment—the Eighth Bavarian—has already had considerable losses in killed and gassed. The sad point is that the English gas is almost odorless and can only be seen by the practiced eye escaping from the shell. The gas steals slowly over the ground in a bluish haze, and kills any one who does not draw his mask as quick as ligtning over his face before taking a breath.

"The night before last I was in the front line. What a sight! The last time we were in the front line trenches we were easily accessible. Now all communications and all parapets have been shot to pieces. It is a gruesome sight there. The prospect looks terrible. Our people say things were not so bad at Verdun as here."

British Blow too Swift.

Another captured document shows that the Germans fully appreciated the meaning of the extensive British preparations about Arras, but had no idea the blow was coming so swiftly or with such force. The presence of the Canadians within the zone of probable attack had a particularly disquieting effect for the document in one part said

"The Canadians are known to be good troops and well suited to assaulting purposes. There are no deserters to be found among the Canadians."

It further declares that to succeed in their plans the British would have to take Vimy Ridge, leaving the inference that the Germans thought this task an impossible one. German officers taken during the battle were incredulous when told that the British not only had Vimy Ridge, but have pressed far beyond. They say that the plans and the orders to all reserves were to counter-attack at once if the British threw the Germans off the crest.

However, when the Canadians, ably assisted by an English division, went after Vimy Ridge this time it was with the determination to place that long-disputed vantage ground once for all within the allied lines.

CAPTURED HUNS BITTERLY DENOUNCE JUNKER MASTERS

By Stewart Lyon.

Canadian Headquarters in France, via London. — There has been a remarkable change in the demeanor of the prisoners recently taken by the Canadian corps, as compared with those taken in the Somme offensive last season, say the Canadians who were engaged in "bagging" German prisoners then, and again in the past few days. The most notable difference is an increase of anti-dynastic sentiment. Our prisoners are chiefly Bavarinans, with Prussian officers. The latter still retain pride of cast, with an admixture of insolence. One of these told his captors condescendingly, that if the assault on Vimy Ridge had not been made with such a rush, the whole top of the hill would have been blown off by an explosion of mines provided for that purpose. His hint was useful in a sense other than he intended.

The captives are glad to be out of it. Among them, the Bavarians and Prussians alike, the braggart spirit is no longer evident. One non-commissioned officer surprised his captors by breaking out in bitter epithets against the Hohenzollerns and the Junkers, the cause of his country's misfortunes. In response to questioning, he said this feeling was becoming more general in the enemy ranks than even a few months ago, the considerate treatment of the German wounded by the British doing much to prove to Frits that Great Britain is not seeking the destruction of the German people.

After the recent battles I saw motor lorries deliver at the ambulance stations mixed loads of British and German wounded. They were packed in side by side, all stained with blood and mud—men who an hour before had been doing their best to kill one another. Our men waited their turn patiently. If badly hurt Frits was permitted to be ahead in the line, and our men seemed to bear no animosity. Their attitude was that of kindly toleration, even while they turned the full resources of the English language loose in vivid description of their captives. This consideration has led to curious results. A wet and weary chaplain with no place to lay his head, was called upon by a wounded officer prisoner to provide him with a second blanket because the hospital was cold. "And," said the chaplain, "I would have been soft enough to give it to him if I'd had a blanket to my name."

When the people in Canada read what appear to be authentic stories about the cruel treatment even by the German women, of the British wounded, it is worth while knowing that the Canadians at the front, no less than the tolerant British Tommies, refuse to descend, in the treatment of wounded prisoners, to the enemy's level. But Fritz must work and earn his keep, when unwounded, on the roads.

KING EDWARD GAVE KAISER A KNOCKOUT

An astounding story of King Edward knocking down the Kaiser at Windsor Castle is related by Edward Legge in a new book, "King Edward, the Kaiser and the War." Mr. Legge has little doubt the story of King Edward and the Kaiser will be contradicted in the Berlin semi-official Norddeutsche Tllgemeine Zeitung, in the same way as his account of the Kaiser's warning to a friend in New York not to allow his son to travel in the Lusitania. Here is Dr. Legge's account of the incident as described to him:

"During one of his visits to Windsor Castle the Kaiser and King Edward had an altercation resulting from something said by the former. So exasperated was the King by his nephew's grossly insulting words that, losing control over himself, he sprang to his feet and knocked the Kaiser down!"

Mr. Legge thinks there is nothing inherently improbable in the story.

"It is unlikely," he says, "that any one would have taken the trouble to invent it or could have imagined it at a time when the Kaiser was so frequently visiting England (often uninvited), when, moreover, he was being subsequently flattered by the public and, with a few exceptions, the press. It was openly talked about in London, and the marvel is that, to the best of my knowledge, it never got into print.

If the incident is true, the provocation must have been great, for King Edward, Mrs. Legge declares was unusually the most gentle and tolerant of men.

"He never lost control of himself—never, unless something quite exceptional occurred, as, for example, the mysterious and never adequately explained theft from Dublin Castle of the Crown jewels in 1907. The particulars of the crime were first given to His Majesty at the Viceregal Lodge, Dublin, during his brief visit to Ireland in that year."

KAISER'S HATRED OF BRITAIN

"The Kaiser's envy and hatred of his uncle led him to long for the time when an opportunity should arise for humbling the 'Peacemaker' and haughty Albion. In King Edward's successor the Kaiser imagined he saw a Sovereign 'infirm of purpose' by comparison with his father—one who would be willing to knuckle down' to Germany at the time of crisis in European destinies. Throw his influence into the Teutonic scale, and, so to say, range himself alongside his impecunious cousin.

"To the amusement of William II. King George, when the fateful moment arrived—Sunday afternoon August 2, 1914—gave proof that the British Empire was ruled by a veritable counterpart of Edward VII.

"The cabinet met twice on that Sabbath Day; informal ministerial conferences succeeded each other; at 4.30 the King held a council, and as soon as possible afterwards the country learnt that the government had taken control of all wireless telegraphy, while the admiralty had called out the Naval Reserves, including pensioners under the age of fifty-five and the Royal Volunteer Reserve."

Two days later Great Britain was at war with Germany.

"Thenceforth the Kaiser's insensate envy of Edward VII., was transferred to George V., worthy son of a worthy sire," says Mr. Legge. 'Never had the head of the House of Hohenzollern been so humiliated. His hatred of England now knew no bounds. He had expected to find in George V., little more than a roi faineant—a wooden lath painted to look like iron; the merest shadow of Great Edward. He saw opposed to him a Man."

HAIG'S ARMY WELL FED AND HEALTHY ASSERTS DR. GEOGH

ARMY MEDICAL MEN OF BOTH COUNTRIES ARE WORKING TOGETHER.

LONDON. — A statement made by Sir Alfred Keogh, Surgeon-General of the British army, to an Associated Press representative, revealed for the first time the close co-operation between the medical branches of the British and American armies maintained since the early days of the war. Sir Alfred, the man responsible for the health of the five million British soldiers scattered all over the various theatres of the war, has placed, and is still doing so, all the information gained in the war at the disposal of the American army medical men.

TOURING HOSPITALS.

Right now, Sir Alfred said, there are in this country four of the leading United States army medical men who have been studying the British medical and sanitary arrangements in France, and who have toured the hospitals in England and studied the royal army medical corps at home. They are Surgeon Pleadwell, Colonel Bradley, Major Ford and Major Lister.

"We have and still are giving the United States army the benefits of our three years' experience in keeping healthy our enormous army." Sir Alfred continued: "In fact a close cooperation between the medical branches of our army and yours has been maintained since the very beginning of the war. American army medical men have from the start been keeping in touch with our medical and sanitary arrangements, and if the results of their observations have been applied to their own organization, as I have every reason to believe they have, the United States army ought to take the field under better medical supervision than any in the world. In other words, the American soldier ought to be the healthiest, backed as he is, by a medical organisation that has been fitted by all the experiences of our great armies.

ARMIES MUST BE WELL.

"The layman usually thinks only of the killing efficiency of the army, not realizing that to be able to kill the enemy an army's health must be right up to the scratch all the time.

"The first essential for an efficient army is that it be well fed. A well-fed army is an army in which disease prevention has its greatest chance of success. We can't protect health which is undermined by inadequate feeding. The next essential to an efficient army is the immediate investigation of epidemics. Both of these problems have been solved by us.

"The British army is well fed and is free from epidemics. Since the outbreak of the war we have had but three epidemics in the British forces, and in each case these have been stamped out almost instantly. We did this by concentrating our best medical efforts at the source.

"We learned our lessons in sanitation from the South African Boer war. We first tried enteric inoculation in the Boer war and have perfected it since with the result that this disease has been practically stamped out. In our whole army we now ave but four or five cases of enteric fever in one month."

In La Salle County, Ill., is a Percheron mare, 21 years old, which has raised 12 out of the 15 foals dropped. Produce of the mare and her daughters have sold for $13,087, and the value of her descendants still held by her owner is placed at $6,500.

Prosecution Of Gambling Cases Opened Shakily

The first of the gambling charges against the seventeen Chinamen was called this afternoon with Hum Moon as the victim. Hum gave 169 Simcoe street as his place of residence. The prosecution appeared to have run into difficulties at the outset. The charge was laid under an old Upper Canada Statute still in force and not under the criminal code. Hum Moon was charged with having gambled with dominoes and dice on the Lord's Day.

Mr. Gordon Pleaded Not Guilty.

Stroking his chin, Mr. Hatton remarked that the complexion of the case was changed. He had thought that the charge was laid under the Gaming Act and not under the old Lord's Day Act.

Mr. Gordon stated under this Act there must be the evidence of at least one credible witness, and the complainant was not regarded as a credible witness.

Chief Thompson—"I was advised by one of the parties that three or four of the Chinamen were going to plead guilty. But they have now changed their plea, and I have no other evidence but that of the policemen. They admit that they saw no money when they made the arrests.

Mr. Gordon followed up his lead in the discussion by remarking that the Lord's Day Act made no presumptions, whereas under the code men are regarded as frequenters who are found in a place which is furnished as a gambling place.

Magistrate Dumble stated that he proposed to proceed with the hearing of the evidence and would reserve judgment. The case was too important, he said, to be otherwise disposed of.

Sergt. Reed was then called to the box and his evidence, practically the same as given this morning, was put in.

Hum Moon's case was concluded at 3:30 p.m. and judgment reserved. Mr Gordon and Mr. Wearing contended that there was no evidence of gambling offered by the police and the case should be dismissed.

The liquor charges against Hum Hov and Jim Hum then opened up.

At Mr. Wearing's suggestion an adjournment was made until April 27.

GIRL SAYS LONELINESS DROVE HER TO SUICIDE

GALT, April 18.—Margaret Cassidy, the 19-year-old Irish home girl, who was found lying in the river at the rear of the gas works on April 5, was arrested at the hospital by Chief Garman and in police court was charged with attempted suicide, to which she pleaded guilty, giving loneliness as her reason. A prominent woman of the city, who became interested in the unfortunate girl, secured suspended sentence for her on promising to provide her with a good home.

"The Rainbow Princess"
By SHANNON FIFE

The court room scenes in "The Rainbow Princess," in which Ann Pennington is being starred by the Famous Players is not the usual motion picture affair. It is an exact replica of the court room at Tarrytown, N.Y., having been reproduced from photographs taken in the local court house. Because of confusion in the issuance of permits to run a circus in the township, several of the members of the Famous Players Company were hailed to court by the sheriff. Realizing that such a place would be ideal for the scenes which he would have to stage later, Director Searle Dawley obtained permission to have his photographer take some pictures of the room. When the members of the company who had been taken to court arrived in the Famous Players studio a few days later and found themselves in the same surroundings from which they thought they had escaped, they were dumbfounded.

$850,000,000 War Orders In Canada

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 18.—The total value of orders received by the Imperial Munitions Board in Canada is $850,000,000, according to a statement furnished the Minister of Finance by J. W. Flavelle, head of the Commission, to-day. The products covered by these orders include shells and their component parts; also ships, locomotives and cars. An idea of the financial magnitude of the business is obtained from the fact that the cash disbursements for March were $41,000,000, and will be for April $43,000,000. Towards the financing of this business the Dominion has contributed two hundred millions as a loan to the Imperial Treasury, and arranged with the Canadian banks for advances aggregating one hundred millions.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

AMSTERDAM, April 18.—Count Von Reventlow, writing in the Berlin Tages Zeitung, says: The existence of the German monarchy is dependent on complete German victory.

LONDON, April 18.—Vienna despatches say that Count Tisza, Austrian Premier, has also resigned.

AMSTERDAM, April 18. — The Vorwaerts, alone, of the big Berlin papers, ventured to comment editorially on the recent strike riots. It said that the demonstration was based, not only on the food situation and the demand that it be no longer delayed, but also on the deep longing of the people for peace.

250,000 German Workmen On Strike

Special to the Examiner:

BERLIN, via London, April 18.—Promises by the Government to improve the food situation and to include workmen in the membership of a commission on distribution of supply, were expected to improve Germany's general strike situation to-day. A census taken last night showed about two hundred and fifty thousand workmen participating in the strike.

LONDON, April 18.—Total British vessels sunk last week numbered twenty-tight, including nineteen of over 1,600 tons. Twelve fishing vessels were also sunk.

WEDDING BELLS

TAYLOR—EMERY.

A very quiet wedding took in Toronto on March 13, 1917 by the Rev. Beverly Smith, rector of St. John's church, when Miss Jennie Emery was united in marriage to Mr. Benjamin Taylor both of this city. The young couple were unattended and will reside in Peterborough.

REYNOLDS — WEESE.

At Wilkie, April 11, a quiet wedding to place off Mr. Gilbert Weese of Kirriermuir, Alberta, and Miss Annie Reynolds, only daughter of Mr. Charles Reynolds, Peterborough, Ont. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Smith of Windsor. The young couple will reside at Kirriermuir, Alberta.

DEAN-KELSO.

At the George Street Methodist Parsonage this afternoon the marriage of Miss Annie Kelso, of Bobcaygeon, to Marcus Smith Dean, of Smith Township, was solemnized by Rev. R. G. Peever. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Melville R. Dobson. Mr. and Mrs. Dean will reside in Peterborough.

ORME—COLLINSON.

A quiet wedding took place in St. John's Church Tuesday afternoon, when Estella, Bessie, Adelina, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Collinson, of this city, was united in marriage to Martin Orme, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Orme of Ottawa. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Cornish. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a tailored suit of navy blue and blouse of pink Georgette crepe, with touches of pale blue. The young couple left on the 3.43 train for New York. They will reside in Ottawa..

ELLIOTT—SANDERSON.

NORWOOD, April 11.—A very pretty wedding was celebrated at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Sanderson, Spring Valley Farm, on Wednesday, when their eldest daughter, Margaret Malcolm, was united in marriage to Percy William Elliott.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a gown of cream Duchess silk with seed pearl trimmings and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses. The groom's little sister, Verna, daintly dressed in white voile, with blue trimmings and carrying a basket of pink and white carnations, was flower girl. Lohengrin's wedding march was played by the brides only sister, Miss Pearl, who was becomingly dressed in buttercup Duchess silk.

The presents were numerous, useful and pretty. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl pendant, and to the pianist and flower girl, each a pearl ring.

After the sumptuous wedding dinner, a very pleasant evening was enjoyed by the guests.

Rule, Britannia! An American Tribute

(From the Philadelphia Ledger.)

A message received by the London Times from a firm of shipowners who have lost seven large vessels by torpedoing comments enthusiastically upon the attitude of their officers and crews toward such marine disasters:

"The men seem to regard the terrible risks they are running as a matter of course, and their anxiety is to get afloat again as soon as possible. The last thing they dream of is recognition for the bravery which they are unconsciously showing."

In one instance, the crew took to the boats in the midst of shell fire, which continued in spite of their signalled acquiescence to the submarine's intentions. It was at 5.45 that the first shot was fired. At ten the next morning a passing tug picked up the boatloads of survivors, "the wounded having suffered severely during the night," continues the report with customary brevity. What a night that must have been for those wounded sailors. What unending dark hours of tossing on the open ocean, now up with the waves, now down in the trough—and every motion of the light boats a fresh agony to their injuries. Many a man has lived out his allotted threescore and ten without experiencing anything in the least approaching such unthinkable misery. The submarine had approached the small boats forty minutes after firing her first shots. She made a prisoner of their captain, but offered neither assistance nor solicitations as to the condition of the helpless crew, leaving them to face with straining eyes their uncertain fate in the oncoming night. The boatswain died of his wounds some hours after nightfall; and the men huddled together for warmth as their maintained with heroic stoicism that fearful watch with the dead.

They must have seen the first promise of dawn spread warmly over the wintry sea, and found hope and lost it again, times unnumbered. Joy and desperation hung in the balance, long wavering, before the men could make sure that the tug had seen them. How many times, as their uncertain boat slid down the waves, did they despair of ever seeing again their one chance of life and rescue! Yet these are the men who willingly and cheerfully sign up for another and equally hazardous voyage, merely as a matter of commonplace duty and patriotism. Their country needs them; and with calm fearlessness they answer the call, submarines or no submarines — and fare forth with their lives in their hands.

If Britannia is to continue to "rule the waves," her supremacy will be founded on —not alone her brave naval commanders, not only her tall ships—but on the thousands of simple-hearted seamen who count heroism a matter of course and death for country a privilege supreme.

IMPROVEMENTS ARE NEARING COMPLETION

Citizens Heed the Warning of Sanitary Inspector Stapleton

The renovation of the Sanitary Inspector's office is nearing completion. The painters and decorators are through and all that remained to-day was a little dusting up of the stationery, which found a repository in a combination library desk. Inspector Stapleton put in a little time on this work and this afternoon the office reflects the improvements that have been made.

Sanitary Inspector Stapleton reports that property owners throughout the city are giving practical effect to the notice that was issued a few days ago, warning citizens to clean up before the first of May. His assistant, Mr. F. W. Miller, was absent to-day owing to illness.

Kaiser Grasping At The Austrian Peace Offer To Save Prussianism

Suggestion to Russia of Separate Negotiations Is Considered in London as Part of a Scheme to Stop the Hostilities in the East in Order to Concentrate Prussia's Whole Efforts on the Crumbling Western Front.

CONFIDENCE IS EXPRESSED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, April 19. — Official circles of the Allies are studying the purpose and possibilities of Austria's offer of peace to Russia. On its face, this latest movement is doomed to failure, but I find an appreciation of the fact that far-reaching results may follow the action.

It shows primarily that Austria and perhaps, Germany, too, realizes the hopelessness of war against almost the entire world and that she is eager to take advantage of what she believes is the unsettled state of affairs in Russia to obtain relief in that quarter. It is evident that Vienna sees the end is near and is anxious to avoid possible results now.

Some profess to see the hand of Prussianism in the offer. They declare it is a trick of the Kaiser to separate Russia from the Allies and so concentrate his efforts on the crumbling western front. Then Prussia would have a better chance to offset the entry of the United States.

On the other hand, some assert that it is an indication of a break between Austria and Germany, which has been rumoured persistently for a long time, foreshadowing similar offers of peace to the other allies.

But this argument is refuted by the fact that Austria, following the leadership of Germany, recently made the significant break with the United States.

Everywhere confidence is expressed that Russia will remain true to the "pact of London" and will not make a separate peace because the sentiment of the people is against autocracy. In fact, the provisional government announced that in fulfilment of the agreements it would pursue the war to a victorious peace.

The British have interpreted the recent Russian manifesto, stating that the country was fighting in defence of liberty, as intended for home consumption and not conflicting with the purposes of the Allies.

It is understood, of course, in such unsettled times that it is necessary to unify all factions. Leaders in Russia on all sides realize that she cannot afford to desert the Allies and must have some friends at the end of the war. It is unbelievable that she would quit now when victory is near. It all looks as though the Central Powers were grasping at a straw, the Kaiser dominating and utilizing the Austrian Emperor as his tool for protection from the house he has pulled down upon himself.

The War Veterans fought for you. What are you going to do for them on Saturday?

United States Is Preparing For Conscription

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, April 19.—In anticipation of speedy action by the Congress on the draft bill, the War Department yesterday afternoon had nearly completed plans to have the first levy of five hundred thousand men in training camps by August first. The first levy would be selected by lot.

Figures compiled by the department show that there are about seven million males between the ages of 19 and 25 in the country, of whom about sixty per cent. would be available for service. From these, by lot, the first levy would be picked.

It is planned to set the same registration day throughout the nation. Voting precincts will be made the places of registration.

Politics Will Not Interfere With Conscription

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The Administration is determined that politics shall not defeat the Conscription Army Bill, which army men say is absolutely vital to the safety of the nation. The President will stand for no compromise. He favours the Chamberlain bill which provides selective draft without modification and will fight for the passage of that measure. It is his purpose to get the bill through the Senate, then put the issue squarely before the House.

A TRIBUTE TO AMERICA

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, April 19.— For the first time in history, a foreign flag will fly with the Union Jack of England over Westminster on Friday.

The British Commissioner of Works ordered that the Stars and Stripes on that day shall fly with the British ensign on all public buildings, as an extraordinary tribute to America.

French Make Further Gains

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, April 19.—(French Official).—The capture of Monchaux and several heights, including Hill 227 in the further progress of the great Champagne offensive, was announced in today's French official statement.

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, April 19.—It is stated in the Commons to-day that the United States is to build many airplanes for England.

Enemy Rebellion Sweeps Brazil

Great German Population in at Least Three States Has Revolted---Mobs Run Riot

Special to the Examiner:

BUENOS AIRES, April 19.—Brazil's great German population in at least three States has revolted. Dispatches from Montevideo, Uruguay, to-day asserted that the Teutons were well armed, even with artillery, and plentifully supplied. Brazil's censorship was down tight on any details. The rebellion apparently centred in the Brazilian States of Rio Grande, Parana and Santa Catharina. The German population, male and female, in this section, has been estimated at five hundred thousand.

RIO JANEIRO, April 19.—Mobs attacked two hundred and seventy German houses in Porto Alegre, burning many of them.

Pretty Wedding In Asphodel

Wedding Bells Ring in Hastings —Items of Interest

HASTINGS, April 16.—A pretty house wedding took place on Wednesday last, at the home of Mrs. Hugh Collins, of Asphodel, the occasion being the marriage of her eldest daughter, Miss Ethel, to Mr. John Mitchell of Oak Hills. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Isaac Snell, Pastor of Hastings Methodist Church, and was witnessed by a number of friends of the contracting parties. At the close of the ceremony congratulations were extended, and a delicious wedding luncheon served. The happy couple will reside at Oak Hills, where the groom has a splendid farm, and are followed by the best wishes of a host of friends

The news is to hand of the marriage in Kearney, Ont., of Mrs. Julia Scriver, widow of the late J. H. Scriver, and Mr. Wm. Griffith of that place. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Scriver were for many years residents of Hastings. Friends here extend congratulations to the bride.

Demand For Cash Wheat

The market reacted sharply yesterday, regaining the losses of Tuesday and closing strong. Cash wheat demand is still very persistent, and entirely dominated the market, quite obscuring the bearish crop reports and more favourable growing weather. Spot prices advanced, and Ontario flour goes up another 20c.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern, $2.57; No. 2, $2.52 3-4; No. 3, $2.47 3-4; No. 4, $2.37 3-4, track, bay ports.

Manitoba oats—No. 2 C.W., 82c; No. 3, 81c; extra No. 1 feed 81c; No. 1 feed 79 1-2c; all rail delivered.

American corn—$1.51, nominal, subject to embargo.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, 74c to 76c. No. 3 white, 73c to 75c.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter per car lot, $2.35 to $2.37; No 3, $2.33 to $2.35, according to freights outside.

Peas—No. 2, nominal; car lots, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $1.85 to $1.87.

Manitoba flour—First patents, in jute bags, $11.70; second patents, $11.20; strong bakers $10.90

Ontario flour—Winter, according to sample, $10.10 to $10.20, track, Toronto, prompt shipments.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts, $41 to $43; bran $39, feed flour, per bag, $2.80 to $2.90, middlings, $44 to $46.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto car lots, No. 2 $11.50 to $12.50; mixed, $9 to $11; straw $7 to $7.50.

CATTLE MARKET.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 107 cars, with 923 cattle, 570 calves, 4,288 hogs, and 80 sheep and lambs.

Tempted by the higher prices which prevailed last week, shippers have rushed to market a lot of common, half-finished cattle. The result is a slow and draggy trade this week, with half indifferent, and prices sagging from 25 cents to 35 cents lower than last week, except for the very choicest finished cattle. These latter are holding about steady.

Sheep and lambs are still very scarce and high.

Hogs are easier and lower at $16.50 fed and watered, paid to-day, and $16.35 bidding at the noon hour.

Expert Testimony.

To speak distinctly and directly into the mouthpiece—

AN eminent telephone man of 30 years' experience says that this is the great need in telephoning. Over half the service difficulties would disappear if distinct and direct speaking were practised.

¶ To speak towards your telephone from a yard or so away, or to speak across it means bad transmission—often wrong numbers, misunderstanding and annoyance.

¶ You can help the service, avoid wrong numbers, misunderstanding and annoyance, by speaking distinctly, and directly into the mouthpiece, with the lips about half an inch from its rim.

AN EASY WAY TO GET FAT AND BE STRONG

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on drugging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless flesh creams, or following some foolish physical culture stunt while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat unless your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

There is a preparation known to reliable druggists almost everywhere which seemingly embodies the missing elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich fat-laden blood. This modern treatment is called Extract of Native-Roots and has been termed one of the greatest medicines of its kind.

Native-Roots aims through regenerative, re-constructive power to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of the food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to the starved, broken down cells and tissues of the body. You can readily picture what result this amazing transformation should produce as with increased weight the cheeks fill out, hollows about the neck, shoulders and arms disappear, and pounds of solid, healthy flesh are added to the body. Native-Roots is inexpensive and Warne Drug Co. and other leading druggists have it and recommend it. Start the treatment to-day.

THE OLD GARDENER SAYS.

The expensive French endive of the restaurants comes from the common Witloof chicory of the catalogues. In times of peace it is mostly imported from Belgium, but it can be grown in any garden. Simply sow the seed this spring, keep the plants well cultivated, and when winter comes force the roots in boxes of earth in a warm cellar. The tops will be the delicious white salad mostly associated with plutocratic eating places.

Moon flowers deserve to be better known by amateur gardeners. A few cents spent for seeds will yield a wonderful display of mammoth, glistening white flowers borne on vines that climb like morning glories. It is best to start the seeds indoors now, first filing through the outer covering, as they are very slow to germinate. Soaking the seeds is often tried, but filing them is a better plan.

New, Positive Treatment To Remove Hair or Fuzz

(Beauty Notes.)

Women are fast learning the value of the use of delatone for removing hair of fuzz from face, neck and arms. A paste is made with some powdered delatone and water and spread on the hairy surface. In 2 or 3 minutes it is rubbed off, the skin washed and every bit of hair has disappeared. No failure will result if you are careful to buy genuine delatone.

Obstinate Coughs and Colds

YIELD TO

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

All obstinate coughs and colds yield quickly to "Dr. Wood's" containing as it does all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree combined with the soothing, healing and expectorant properties of other excellent herbs and barks.

Mrs. H. F. McCormick, Rodney, N. S., writes: "I had a severe cold one winter, and had been coughing for a month. I could not sleep at night, nor could I speak above a whisper.

After I had taken a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I felt better, so I took two or three more and was entirely cured. I have three children and I always give it to them when they have a cough or cold."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup has been on the market for twenty-five years and we claim that it is the best cure for a cough or cold you can possibly procure.

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c. and 50c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SOME ANCIENT FORESTS SURVIVE THE AGES.

One readily understands why the Australian loves his trees. The groves of giant eucalyptus form pictures never forgotten and the scent of the wattle brings a homesick feeling like the smell of sage to the westerner.

The flora is not only beautiful, it is unique, and has no counterpart in other lands. Of the 10,000 species of plants, most of them are purely Australian; and are unknown even in New Zealand. The general impression one gets of Australian forests is their total unlikeness to anything seen elsewhere. The great forests of timber trees are not damp and shaded and all of one species, but are well lighted and filled with other forests of shorter trees; in places the woods consist of large, widely-spaced trees surrounded only by bunch grass and even in areas where water is not to be found on the surface for hundreds of miles true forests of low trees are to be seen.

Forms which may be recognized as tulip, lily, honeysuckle and fern take on a surprising aspect. They are not garden flowers but trees and the landscape of which they form a part reminds one of the hypothetical representations in books of science of a landscape of Mesozoic time, a period antedating our own by millions of years.

The trees are indeed those of a by-gone age. In America and Europe shadowy forms of fossil leaves of strange plant species are gathered from the rock and studied with interest; in Australia many of these ancient trees are living. The impression that one is looking at a landscape which has forever disappeared from other parts of the world is so vivid that the elms and the maples and the oaks in some of the city streets strike a jarring note. The transition from Jurassic to modern times is painfully abrupt.—National Geographic Magazine.

Epworth League.

At a meeting of the Epworth League on Monday evening last, the following officers were appointed for the year beginning May 1, 1917:

President—Miss E. Jory.
1st Vice-President—Mrs. A. E. Higgins.
2nd Vice-President — Miss. M. Payne.
3nd Vice-President—Mr. R. Little.
4th Vice-President—Mr. K. S. Madill.
Secretary—Mr. Roy Green.
Corresponding Secretary—Miss E. Hull.
Treasurer—Mr. W. Frankish.

Miss Katie Simpson has returned to Toronto to resume her duties as teacher in Kew Beach School.

Combing Won't Rid Hair Of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

Live hogs at $16.00 per hundred lbs. is the market feature this week. It is the price quoted by Matthews-Blackwell Co., and a new high record. At this rate the retail prices are due for advances, unless a decline sets in, and there are no signs of a reaction.

GRAIN PRICES.

Wheat, per bush $2.10
Oats, per bush. .. .. .75
Rye, per bush. $1.25
Barley, per bush. $1.15
Small peas, per bush. $2.50
Blue peas, per bush $2.00
Buckwheat, per bush $1.25

The grain buyers quote the following prices:

Red clover .. .. $10 to $10.50
Alsike .. ..$8 to $9

The finest seed is retailing locally at:

Clover seed $13
Timothy .. .. $4 to $5
Alsike .. ..$12 to $15

Very little timothy and blue peas are offering and some of the dealers have run out of alsike.

The future of wheat is extremely uncertain. Spot prices are high enough and futures decidedly uncertain.

HIDES.

The prices of hides are as follows:

Veal skins .. .. .25c to 28c
"Deacons" each .. ..$1 to $1.50
Yearlings "runner kip" .. 15c to 17c
Sheep skins .. .. $1 to $3
Tallow, per lb. .. .. .7c to 8 1-2c
Washed wool, per lb .. .. .. 42c to 46c
Unwashed wool, per lb .. .. .32c to 34c

MILK STEADY.

Local milk prices have not responded to the influences of spring, probably for the reason that the usual influences are absent this spring. Winter prices still prevail.

Butter is steady, eggs have declined but slightly; potatoes are firmer, and sugar has shot up in recent leaps.

CHEESE AT MONTREAL.

New cheese at Montreal was still quoted at the merely nominal range of from 24c to 24 1-2c per lb. on Saturday in spite of the fact that Belleville's board was 1-8c above this. An increased marketing is expected this week. As soon as the make increases to any extent the buyers look for lower prices. But on the other hand a good deal will depend upon the quantity of cheese that will be required for the government.

LOCAL CHEESE BOARD.

Last week several cheese boards opened for another year's business. A slow spring has kept the output of many factories back, the roads not being favorable for the delivery of the milk.

Iroquois, April 13.—118 white and 349 colored; 28 1-2 bid; no sales.

Belleville, April 13.—150 boxes sold at 24 5-8c.

ANGERS JUNKER PAPER

Because the commander of a prisoners' camp in Germany recently made arrangements to facilitate the making of complaints by the men under his care, the Deutsche Tageszeitung, the leading mouthpiece of Junkerism, became highly indignant, and, as translated by the London Mail, printed the following paragraph:

"It has been confirmed that the commander of the prisoners' camp in Wahn has addressed a request to all working to allow the prisoners to form committees from their own ranks to represent them. The committees shall at weekly intervals make known these views, wishes and complaints of the prisoners. For this reason representative bodies have raised objections to the proposed measure, and it is to be hoped that their representations will make an end of the commander's remarkable plan in the shortest possible time."

On the other hand, the Liberal and Socialist press in Germany records with great satisfaction an incident in which a prison guard was recently fined 100 marks for having struck a Russian prisoner whom he had accused of shamming illness in order to escape work.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Ingenious Escape

By OSCAR COX

Jules Chaparal when the pan-European war broke out was working in a machine shop. From there he was taken into the army and participated in the fighting that led up to the battle of the Marne. In that fight he was taken prisoner and sent to a concentration camp in Germany.

Jules Chaparal was turned into an improved machine shop for manufacturing field artillery. Very soon his experience in such work manifested itself, and, being found to be very useful, he was put in charge of one of the rooms of the factory. Then the engineer was taken ill, and, there being no German engineer to fill his place, Jules was temporarily given charge of the engine room and everything in it.

Jules spent a year in this factory and naturally became acquainted with all parts of it, including the yard in which it stood, the positions of sentinels, the points of entrance and exit, for it is impossible to take the precautions with one who fills an important position that can be observed with an unproductive prisoner. Probably there was never a prisoner who did not take note of his surroundings with a view to escape.

The factory, not being a prison, was not surrounded by a high wall. The absence of a wall was supplied by a guard. But since every available man was needed to fight the factory guard was made up of disabled soldiers. Jules had had opportunities to notice them and had seen one legged men among them. He had once run against one of the guard, who was off duty, walking in the factory yard, and it was evident that the man was half blind.

If Jules could get out of the factory after dark he might possibly work his way through this barrier of armed men. At any rate, he would be quite willing to take his chances of being shot. But for months at a time the factory was run day and night, and there were as many persons about at one time as another. When it was not run at night, as soon as it was shut down the operators were placed in huts built near by, the prisoners by themselves, under guard, and all was quiet.

Chaparal had his eye on a means of making an exit from the factory. A broad leather belt connected the flywheel of the engine with gearing attached to the joists overhead. The drum around which the belt turned was near a window, which was used both for light and ventilation. It occurred to Chaparal that one might ride up on the belt and jump off at the window. To do this when the engine was running at full speed would be well nigh impossible without the rider being dashed against the wall and killed. To do it when the engine was starting or slowing up would be comparatively easy.

The prisoner had noticed this window when in the yard and knew that ten feet below it was the roof of an addition to the building, the addition being about fifteen feet from the ground. Two hundred feet from the factory was the chain of sentinels. Of course the chances of escape by such an exit were infinitesimally small, and even if the fugitive should reach the window in safety and pass the guard there would remain the difficulty of making his way through Germany and across the border.

For a prisoner even to occupy his mind with such matters is beneficial. It prevents his brooding, and he is fostered by hope. Jules found relief in laying out every detail of an attempt to escape. These details were many and must fit together perfectly, and when they were all arranged he must keep a sharp lookout for an opportunity of which it might be well to take advantage without deliberation.

He had thought out his scheme and had waited a month for his opportunity when it came upon him suddenly. An accident occurred in a room next the engine room just as the shutting down hour arrived. Every man ran to the scene of the trouble. Jules turned off the steam from the engine, waited (he feared that some one would enter) till the flywheel had slowed down sufficiently, leaped on the belt, grasped an edge in each hand and was carried on his knees up to the window. On reaching it he threw himself at it, landing on his chest, and scrambled on to its sill.

Without glancing back he turned his feet outward and, lowering himself till he hung by his hands, let himself down on to the roof of the addition below and in another moment was on the ground.

Thus far he had not been observed or heard. He now needed to pass the guard. A faint twilight lingered in the west, and against it he saw the silhouettes of two sentries some fifty feet apart. He resolved to make an effort to crawl between them. Advancing on foot as far as he dared, he got down on his stomach and wriggled like a snake toward a point midway between the sentries. He was in this dangerous position when he rubbed up against a man lying on a blanket on the ground. The man muttered something in German in a tone indicating that he was half asleep. Jules withdrew a few feet and after waiting awhile wriggled around the figure on the ground and on till he dared get on hands and knees, and in a few minutes more he was beyond the guard line.

A week later the fugitive turned up in Switzerland after having passed through innumerable adventures.

That which is sin in the field is death in the harvest.

B. C. Timber Output.

According to the timber returns for the month of September issued by the British Columbia Minister of Lands, the total output of sawlogs for the Province, as shown by the scaling figures, amounted to 92,080,493 feet board measure, while 361,911 lineal feet of poles, piles, and props, together with 29,312 cords of railway ties, fence posts, shingle bolts, etc., were also scaled for royalty during the month under review. The figures for the Vancouver district were 53,001,924 feet board measure sawlogs, 14,294 lineal feet piles, etc., and 16,264 cords ties, bolts, etc., the Island district contributing 5,807,218 feet sawlogs, in addition to 2,520 lineal feet piles. In the Prince Rupert district there were scaled 954,135 feet sawlogs, while the totals under the same heading for the Cranbrook, Nelson, and Vernon districts were respectively 21,595,575 feet, 7,135,290 feet, and 3,249,603 feet. Poles, piles, and props to the total of 228,304 lineal feet were scaled in the Nelson district, and in the Cranbrook division to the total of 15,013 lineal feet.

Timber sales recorded during September cover an estimated total of 7,228,000 feet sawlogs, and 3,030 cards of shingle bolts, estimated to produce a total revenue of $13,876.

Exports to Britain Jump.

An increase in imports from Canada of $34,697,000 and a decrease in exports to Canada of $20,498,000 during the first nine months of the present fiscal year is shown by figures for that period received by the Trade and Commerce Department from Commissioner Ray, of Birmingham. The total imports from Canada were $138,917,000, and exports to the Dominion $49,407,000.

Details are also furnished of the recent steps taken by the British authorities in respect to the requisitioning of all ships of British register, which regulations closely affect Canada. These show that rumors that the Government contemplates the requisitioning of the entire British mercantile marine are without foundation, but that power has been taken to deal, by the requisitioning of a sufficient number of vessels, with cases where an emergency of national importance exists at any particular market owing to the absence of tonnage, and, further, to regulate the employment of British shipping in the carriage of cargoes between foreign ports by means of licenses.

Toronto's Debentures.

GREAT SEAL OF CHARLES II.

Impression of One First Used by Monarch Found on State Papers.

There has just been discovered in a volume of the Clarendon State Papers at the Bodleian Library an almost perfect impression of the first Great Seal of Charles II.

The discovery, says the Bodleian Quarterly Record, supplies a gap in the series of Great Seals of England—otherwise complete except for the fourth seal of Henry VI. for French affairs—and has a special historical interest of its own. The Royal Seal of Charles I., captured at Oxford in 1646, had been defaced in Parliament that year, and its Parliamentary rival continued in sole use until the King's execution. In January, 1649, Parliament appointed a committee to take order for the framing of a new Great Seal, and in February this new Seal of the Commonwealth was brought into the House, and the old one broken up. Meanwhile the Prince of Wales, then an exile at The Hague, assumed the title of King of England and took steps to provide himself with a Great Seal of his own.

Clarendon informs us that this first Great Seal of Charles II. was lost in the defeat at Worcester, September, 1651. The British Museum charter, which was hitherto the sole evidence for its use, is dated September 18, 1649; the Bodleian example is attached to letters patent of Charles II. (on vellum) granted to Sir Edward Hyde and Francis Lord Cottington on May 10 of the same year, constituting them the King's plenipotentiaries in Spain. That it was made at The Hague is in every way probable, and it is natural to suppose that Charles II. issued orders for making a new Great Seal of England upon receiving news of his father's death.

The seal is in dark yellow wax and its diameter is exactly six inches. A portion of the obverse is missing. The impression is sharp and clear over the greater part of the surface, but there is a double imprint (due to a kind of side slip) over one side on both obverse and reverse. The obverse shows the King enthroned, wearing the mantle and collar of the Garter; the head is missing. Outside the throne are, on the dexter side a lion supporting between his forepaws a banner of St. George; on the sinister side a unicorn gorged and chained, holding a banner of St. Andrew. The reverse shows the King in Roman armor, on a prancing horse. In the field are the royal arms, encircled with an inscribed Garter; on the other side is a double rose ensigned with a crown. Between the horse's legions is a lion standing.

Regimental Peculiarities.

The red and white feather worn by the Northumberland Fusiliers keeps ever green in regimental historic records the memory of the desperate fight at St. Lucia in 1778, when the men of the regiment plucked the buckles from the hats of the slain French soldiers and decorated their own with them.

The Gloucestershire Regiment enjoys the distinction of wearing the "Sphinx" on the back as well as the front of their headdress. This honor was granted to them to commemorate the gallantry of the 1st Battalion (the old 28th Foot), when Colonel Paget ordered the third or rear rank to face about, and in this way they beat off the enveloping attack of the French column at Alexandria.

The Coldstream Guards took their name from the little village of Coldstream, near the borders of Scotland. They were originally known as the Coldstreamers, which is the correct way to speak of them, and not as the Coldstreams. The regiment was first raised by Monk, the "King Maker," from among the hardy borderers, who followed him anywhere and everywhere, caring very little whether they fought for Cromwell or King Charles. When the former died Monk marched the Coldstreamers to London and restored King Charles.

HAD AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE

For 5 or 6 Years

Diseases and disorders of the heart and nervous system have become frightfully prevalent of late years.

One can scarcely pick up a paper but he will find recorded instances of sudden deaths through heart failure, or of prominent men and women unable to prosecute their ordinary business or profession on account of a breaking down of the nervous system.

We do not desire to unnecessarily alarm anyone, but to sound a word of warning.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly, palpitates and throbs, has shooting pains through it, it is time to stop and think.

To all sufferers from heart and nerve troubles Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Frank Arseneau, Newcastle, N. B., writes: "I had awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

"At the present time my sister is using them for nervousness and finds great comfort by their use."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c or three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NAPOLEON OF SHIPPING.

How Sir Owen Phillips Won Success as Marine Magnate.

About thirty-five years ago a young man, notable physically for his uncommon height—he stood 6ft. 7in. in his stockings—worked quietly, thoroughly, and conscientiously in a shipping office at Newcastle-on-Tyne. He rarely spoke of his hopes for the future; but he had one ambition which might, had he then mentioned it to other people, have aroused some laughter.

This was nothing less than to become the biggest shipping man in the world. It was not egotism which gave rise to this ambition, but the keen desire to "get on," and the knowledge that if he had a chance he would "get on." That clerk, new Sir Owen Phillips, lives to-day in the realisation of his ambition. He is the Napoleon of the mercantile shipping world, and master of over 300 ships, with a total tonnage of nearly a million and a half.

The manner in which of late years Sir Owen—who, it is announced, will be Unionist candidate for Chester at the next election—has engineered shipping deals, acquiring not single vessels, but whole fleets, furnishes a remarkable story of enterprise and energy on the part of this son of the Principality—for Sir Owen comes of a very ancient Welsh family of Pembrokeshire worthies.

Undoubtedly the real secret of Sir Owen's success lies in the fact that he is a very far-seeing man. He was one of the first to realize the tremendous revolution that the opening of the Panama Canal would bring about in the mercantile shipping of the world. Not only is trade with the Far East to be counted on by the cutting in two of the American continent, offering immense profits to the steamship lines first in the field, but the great coast-line on the Pacific side of South America becomes more easily available. Sir Owen, fully realising this, secured control of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company, thus holding the shipping trade of South America in the hollow of his hand, and ultimately acquired the Dempster Line boats on the West Indian trade, which made certain that there would be no serious opposition from that quarter.

But the control of the trade of one continent by no means satisfied the ambitious of this shipping king, for soon after he took the Royal Mail Company under his care. He obtained what amounted to a controlling interest in the share line running to China and Japan. Then came the purchase of another line of ships, which dealt with the Mediterranean and North African trade.

Perhaps the most sensational purchase Sir Owen has ever made was the acquisition, on behalf of the great shipping combine, of the goodwill, fleet, and business of the Union Castle Mail Steamship Company, which meant the payment of a cheque for no less a sum than £5,173,572 to Messrs. Donald Currie and Co.

Sir Owen's comparatively brief career—for he is only just over fifty—is a romance of the time, for he owes nothing to inherited wealth or great influence. Herr Ballin, the shipping Colossus of Germany, was at one time disposed to be contemptuous of the opposition of the Welshman. He even went so far as to forbid him to poach on his preserves in the West Indies. According to one intimately acquainted with Sir Owen, he has never forgiven or forgotten this piece of insolence, and he was not satisfied until he had beaten Ballin and controlled 200,000 tons more shipping than his German rival.

Wireless on Wheels.

To their latest motor delivery van a well-known London tobacco company have, after much experimenting, added a complete wireless installation, by means of which the traveler on his daily round is enabled to establish immediate contact at any time of the day with the head offices in Finsbury. In this way the urgent requirements of the company's customers are dealt with even more speedily than is possible by the use of the telephone, and the facilities so afforded have already been taken extensive advantage of.

The car is fitted with a complete transmitting set, capable of getting into communication with the head office within a radius of twenty miles. The company have experimented for a considerable time in this direction, and many difficulties have had to be overcome before satisfactory communication could be obtained. An ingenious feature of the installation is the method adopted for completing the circuit, and making "an earth" by dropping a metal chain on to metallic manholes on drains or by trailing the same in water.

Peanuts for Cattle.

Peanuts, known in Great Britain as monkey nuts, are recommended as cattle food by the Imperial Institute, after a series of experiments, with a view to finding a substitute for the higher-priced foods. Before the war these nuts were imported in great quantities, both by Germany and France. They were crushed and pressed for their oil and the residue pressed into cakes for cattle. But England used only a small quantity, as the people, when they eat them at all, eat them raw, being ignorant of the fact they are improved by roasting. India, China, and Africa are great producers of peanuts, and they are being introduced into British tropical dependencies.

Light on History.

A stone inscription has recently been discovered, near Partabgarh in Rajputana, which sheds a new light on an obscure period in early history of this part of India. The credit of this discovery belongs to Rai Bahadur Pandit Gaurishanker Hojha, Superintendent of Rajputana Museum, Ajmer, who is at present engaged in deciphering the inscription. From a cursory examination of the inscription it appears to be the reproduction of four separate grants to the shrine of Indradity Deva and the temple of Vatayahabini Devi attached to the monastery of Haripeshwar.

While low prices are to be expected for apples, small fruits should sell well. And present promise is for good crops in cherries and plums.

Blood Thin and Watery And Circulation Bad

Nerves Become Starved and Depleted—But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Enriched the Blood and Restored the Strength

PETERBOROUGH, March 14.—The nervous system requires an abundance of rich, red blood in order to replace the daily waste and generate the energy consumed in the activities of life. When you fail to obtain the necessary nourishment from the food you eat you must seek such assistance as is afforded by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

By going directly to the formation of rich, red blood this great food cure brings strength and vigor to persons who are weak and run down. Here is the evidence:

Mrs. W. Grieves, 610½ Bethune street, Peterboro', Ont., writes: "Last fall my system was in a run-down condition, and I suffered from nervous debility and sleeplessness. At times I was troubled with dizzy headaches. My blood was weak and watery, and consequently I suffered from cold hands and feet. Many times at night I would waken up from sleep with a start, and then it would be a long time before I could quiet down and go to sleep again. Finally I became so bad that I could not do my own housework. I tried different remedies and preparations, as well as taking doctors' medicine, without any good results. Knowing Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to be good and very reliable, I secured some and took them. As they began to help me, I continued the treatment until I was helped a great deal. Now I can eat and sleep well at night, and am able to go about and do my own work. I also found good results from using the Kidney-Liver Pills in connection with the Nerve Food. I might also mention that I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for a rash on my baby, and found it very beneficial. We always find Dr. Chase's medicines good, and are pleased to be able to recommend them."

Fall Wheat Acreage Will Be 20 Per Cent. Less This Season

April Crop Bulletin of Ontario Department of Agriculture —Came Through Winter as Did the Clover Crop Although in Both Cases "Heaving" May Do Some Damage

The following information regarding agricultural conditions in this Province is contained in a bulletin prepared by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, based upon information furnished by a large staff of correspondents under date of April 12th.

Wintering crops.

Fall Wheat.— The acreage of fall wheat will be less than that of a year ago by twenty per cent. The dry hot summer and early fall rendered the ground too hard for a good seed-bed, and as a consequence much of the sowing was done late, while some land intended for the crop was reserved for barley or other spring grains. Most of the fields were able to show only a small top for their fall growth, but the steady covering of snow extending from December until well into March gave almost perfect protection to the young wheat, and the crop met the first of April in practically the same condition as it entered the winter. When correspondent reported— from April 9th to the 12th—cold nights and sunny days were causing alternating freezing and thawing upon practically bare fields, and the crop was suffering somewhat from "heaving." The extent of injury from this so far is not serious, but the actual prospects of the crop cannot be fairly estimated until the young plants get their spring start. Some of the fields were said to be looking rather brown when correspondents wrote, yet life and vigour appeared to be left, which growing weather would carry along. The later sown fields as a rule looked the more patchy, especially where there was little or no drainage.

Clover.—This crop, like fall wheat, went through the winter well protected by snow, and came out in the spring in most promising condition. Since the snow disappeared, however, there has been some heaving experienced, but it is too early to judge of its effects. With a favourable spring start the crop ought to be well up to the standard in most localities.

Orchards and Small Fruits.

There has been some injury to buds and new wood of peaches, but the effects of the freezing back may not be serious. Otherwise orchard trees are said to be in good condition generally, although some young fruit trees (more especially in the Lake Ontario and St. Lawrence and Ottawa counties) were more or less girdled by mice and rabbits, as is usually the case when the snow lies long and deep. Strawberry fields came through the winter in good shape—or as well as they entered it—but where not mulched have suffered more or less from being heaved by the alternating frosts and thaws of the first week or so of April. Grape vines are said to be cut back by the severe weather in some districts, but they generally can stand a little of nature's pruning.

Live Stock.

It required good judgment to carry live stock through the winter economically and in good condition; for while there was an abundance of hay, the other fodders, such as grain, corn, straw and roots, were very light, and mill-feeds and other concentrates were never higher in price.

Horses.—There is a surplus of farm horses, which would have been greater but for shipments to the North-west, chiefly from Western Ontario. Horses generally look rather thin, but less disease than usual has been reported among them.

Cattle.—Fat cattle are scarce, high prices having tempted farmers to part with them sooner than usual. Store cattle are relatively more numerous, but there are not so many as in recent years. All classes of cattle are somewhat leaner than usual, and owners were never more anxious to get them on the grass, as the more succulent feeds, such as roots and silage, are scarce. Cattle practically present a clean bill of health. One serious feature, however, is the fact that too many calves are being slaughtered. One correspondent urges that the Government should prohibit the sale of young animals to the butchers during the war.

Swine.—This is a time when the pig is prized. Bacon values never have been so high, and the demand for swine of all ages has never been so strong. Young animals a few weeks old have brought from $12 to $15 a pair. The number of swine now on hand is less than in former years, although farmers are trying to get and fit as many as possible. However, the soaring prices of grains, etc., have cut considerably into the profits.

Sheep.—There appears to be a revival of sheep raising in some quarters, although in many localities this industry is still more or less slighted. The flocks have wintered well, and lambing is reported to be coming on most encouragingly. The dog nuisance is again referred to by several correspondents as a threat to sheep husbandry.

Fodder Supplies.— With the exception of hay, which has been more or less plentiful in every district, all fodders are scarce. The grains were light in yield last summer, and high prices tempted too many farmers to part with more than was advisable; consequently stores of these are now small. Owing to the poor corn crop, silos are carrying less than usual at this time of the year, while roots are few, turnips in many cases commanding city food prices. Straw has been comparatively scarce, in most localities selling at nearly the price of hay; consequently horses and cattle as a rule have had to get along with less bedding than was needed. Notwithstanding the close scraping indicated, farmers are most hopeful, and expect to pull through with careful feeding until the new supplies come in.

Increased Production.

Reports of correspondents show that many farmers have indicated their determination to bring a larger production this season if labour conditions will permit. The lack of trained help owing to enlistments and other military and economic reasons, confronts the farmer at the very start. The scarcity and high cost of seed is also an important factor — potatoes for instance. While an increased area is being given to permanent pasture by many farmers, others are going in for a greater acreage of spring grains this year, and roots wil laleo receive their share of attention. "Anything to beat the Germans and end the war" is the motto urged by several correspondents, and both patriotism and a natural desire to have fuller barns are likely to result in a larger production should the growing season prove favourable.

Farm Labour.

Wages for farm help were never so high as at present, as owing to the call of war, and the attraction of big pay in munition and other factories, suitable men are now very scarce. For efficient farm hands rates range from $40 to $50 a month with board, and occasionally more. The proposal to have men and boys from the towns and cities assist in agricultural work this summer is welcomed by the majority of correspondents, but others scoff at the idea of having to train helpers in a time of rush. The use of larger machinery and increased horse-power is regarded as one way out of the difficulty, and farm help will be exchanged more than ever. It is also stated that in the fields more female labour than ever before from local families will be utilized to meet the emergency. It is claimed that a census taken in a township in Brant county shows that there is only one man available to work every 85 acres of farm land. Reports from other quarters say that frequently there is only one male worker to every 100, and sometimes 150 acres.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

In this design the collar is particularly inviting—cut in points in front and square at the back, where it descends almost to the waist line. It is inlaid with bands of insertion and outlined with edging, gathered in frill effect.

Interest also attaches to the fold of material which simulates a box plait down the centre front; this is likewise trimmed with narrow edging to correspond with the collar finish, and the same treatment is carried out in the sleeves, which may be three-quarter or full length. At the shoulder seams the fronts are gathered, creating soft folds that continue to the waist line.

If made of satin or like material it will be quite the latest to carry out a Japanese or Chinese design in silk embroidery, or you may use Indian beads, on the collar and cuffs; with other fabric you may trim as illustrated. Japanese silk, pongee or crêpe de Chine in flesh color may be made extra dainty with cream shadow lace. There is a big advantage in developing from the pattern, in your choice of material.

The waist pattern, No. 7,972, is cut in sizes 34 to 42 bust. To make in size 36 will require 2¼ yards of 36 inch material, 2½ yards of insertion, 4½ yards of edging.

To obtain the pattern send [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

B. C. AND THE WAR.

Hard Times Have Driven the People Back to the Land.

The war and the collapse of real estate speculation are proving blessings in disguise to the people of the West, says a writer in Toronto Saturday Night. One has induced saner views in the direction of both personal and municipal economy, and the latter has removed most of the get-rich-quick spirit which was a mill stone around the neck of true progress. What the extreme western province has needed for a long time has been more natural production and less living on borrowed capital. The war has cut off the inflow of capital very decidedly, and the hard times are driving many people back to the land. It may be said at once that British Columbia will never be a great agricultural province in the sense that Ontario and Alberta are, because it abounds in mountain ranges, water courses and vast tracts which will never be anything else than mining areas, not to speak of the many unbroken stretches of standing timber. But there are many fertile valleys and districts which are suitable for mixed farming and fruit growing. The more they are cultivated the less the province will have to import. There is the fertile Fraser Valley stretching from Chilliwack to Boundary Bay, a distance of about ninety miles, most of which is extremely rich and capable of producing a vast amount of produce. There are some splendid farming areas on Vancouver Island, while vast areas in the Peace River district are suitable for raising wheat and other grains. The Okanagan is famous as a fruit-growing centre and its output is steadily increasing.

Okanagan growers are this year considerably extending their markets, according to information obtained from C. P. R. sources. For years past apples have been shipped from this province to the Old Country and prairie markets and also to Australia. This year the field has been widened and B. C. Jonathans and Wealthies have found their way to South Africa and the Argentine. Shipments to these latter countries are more or less of an experiment, but it is hoped to secure a market and gradually develop it with increased production in the Okanagan. The carload which was shipped to Table Bay last year was followed this season by three carloads. The initial shipment was made quite in the nature of an adventure, and it was gratifying for the shippers to learn that the fruit sent had been much appreciated and that more was demanded.

The first shipment to the Argentine, made this season, consisted of three carloads of Jonathans and Wealthies—apples which better stand climatic changes. It is hoped that this will be but the thin edge of the wedge in securing for British Columbia apples a place in South American markets.

Local freight officials of the C. P. R. state that arrangements have been made for the shipment of six carloads of apples to England from British Columbia, and there is a possibility of another six cars being sent. The last boat to Australia, it is interesting to note, carried 2,500 boxes of the King of Fruits. This Australian business is, of course, a trade of some years' standing, but it is reported to be developing steadily.

How a Reprieve is Arranged.

Nominally the power of reprieve and pardon belongs to the Royal prerogative. At one time it was actively exercised by the Sovereign; but now, although the act is carried out in the Sovereign's name, and with the Royal signature, the responsibility rests entirely with the Home Secretary in England, the Lord-Lieutenant in Ireland, and the Secretary of State in Scotland.

The decision is sent to the governor of the jail, who is responsible for the man after he leaves the court, and by him it is rapidly communicated to the felon in the cell. If it be an adverse decision the news is broken to him as gently as possible. When a reprieve comes the convict is summoned to the governor's room, and when he gets that order he knows at once that his prayer has been heard. The governor may say a kind word or congratulate him; but the real business is to read out the letter of the Home Secretary to the man as he stands between two warders at the other side of the table.

Weak Anaemic Girls

Bloodlessness is the trouble of many girls who ought to be full of life and good spirits. Instead they are pale, their lips have no color, they have no appetites, their digestion is poor, and if they walk fast, either in the street or going up stairs they are so tired and out of breath that their hearts beat as if to burst. Almost always such girls are thin, flat-chested, and sallow, with nothing attractive about them. If they do not get better they will have a cough in the winter and then not unlikely, consumption, that most hopeless of all diseases, will develop.

No girl should be like this. She should be plump, rosy-cheeked and full of life, able to walk fast and to stand exertion without being breathless and palpitating. To be in this healthy, happy condition she must have plenty of good, rich, red blood, as it is only through the blood that the body can be healthy. And the only medicine that can keep the blood supply rich and red and pure is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Their effect upon the pale, weak girl who gives them a fair trial is wonderful. They improve the appetite, backaches and headaches disappear, the glow of health tinges the cheeks, the eyes sparkle, and the step becomes light and elastic. Thousands of girls throughout Canada owe their health and attractive appearance to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and do not hesitate to say so.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cts. a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

U-BOATS' AFTER-WAR EFFECTS.

German shipping men expect to profit extensively after the war as a result of the unrestricted submarine warfare against merchant vessels, according to an editorial in a recent issue of Plutus, a German periodical, dealing with economic questions.

"The destruction of tonnage is of more significance for the future than for the present. Neutral shipping has formed a considerable percentage of the shipping sunk hitherto. If neutral shipping continues to refuse the risk of sailing on British account, that risk will have to be transferred to British ships. The percentage of British tonnage destroyed will rise, and this will again immensely weaken Great Britain in the future, especially as opposed to Germany.

"The German tonnage which is locked up in foreign harbors and might be confiscated if the worst cam to the worst is not so very great in proportion to that which is safe at home in German ports. After the war German tonnage will again be available for the service of Germany; but if the war ends as we hope it will end British tonnage will have been so much reduced that Britain will be compelled to yield pride of place. This would mean a restriction of her raw-material imports, or at best large disbursements in respect of freight and brokerage to neutrals. All these considerations are of more importance in estimating the effect of the submarine war than the starving out of England, which public opinion considers as its real object.

"The purely economic consequences of the submarine campaign are bound to be followed by psycological effects, which in turn will give rise to political and military phenomena, the importance of which it is impossible to estimate at present."

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it formed stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

HAVING A GREAT RUN.

Those movie patrons who crave stronger mental diet than that afforded by curl-bedizened ingenues or baggy-trousered farceurs are being drawn irresistibly to witness the writhings of the vampire-ladies. These fascinating females now occupy in the literature of the screen the eminent position once owned by the cowboy and later taken for a time by the artist and his model. So important have they become that the film producers are sifting the country for tall girls with eyebrows, who have done apprentice work as circus contortionists.

On one side the vampire-lady is descended straight from the stock-company adventuress of 20 years ago. When a repertoire company played the town it used to be possible to spot the adventures the moment she came on the stage, for she wore red, and said "La, la!" and puffed a cigarette if the manager thought that the town would stand for it. The adventuress had her day, but she was not a real vampire because she could not throw her hips out of joint or twist her arms into the semblance of a true lover's knot.

If one believes in evolution he can trace the ancestry of the vampire-lady away back past the adventuress to those strange recondite beasts of Lewis Carroll's the slithy toves. These animals called slithy because they were both lithe and slimy—were wont, the poet informs us, to gyre and gimble in the wabe. Now if a wabe be taken to mean the large white space in which the movies are shown, the vampire lady conforms exactly to the standard procedure of the sligthy tove. She is lithe and slimy, she gyres and she gimbles, and so potent is the esthetic appeal of a face six feet high registering a desire for revenge that the money rolls in unceasingly. From the unsurpassed richness of the vampire-lady's emotions the public culls a few thrills to brighten the drab routine of its existence—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

TEETHING TIME A TIME OF WORRY

When baby is teething is a time of worry to most mothers. Baby's little gums become swollen and tender; he becomes cross; does not sleep well; is greatly troubled with constipation; colic or diarrhoea, and sometimes even convulsions seize him. During this period nothing can equal the use of Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels and stomach and make the teething so easy that the mother scarcely realizes baby is getting his teeth. Concerning the Tablets, Mrs. Arthur Archibald, New Town, N. S., writes: "I used Baby's Own Tablets when baby was getting his teeth, and I found them an excellent medicine." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WARSAW, April 18.—Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Bell have returned to Chicago, after a short visit to Mr. Fleglar Bell and relatives in this vicinity.

Miss Ada Wilson was in Peterborough on Monday.

Mrs. Thomas Chatton has returned to Peterborough, having been in the village to attend the funeral of her brother, Mr. Luke Cooper.

Mrs. William Carveth of Lakefield, who has been visiting friends in this district, is now with her daughter, Mrs. Cephas Payne, for a few days.

Rev. Mr. Clare has purchased a new Chevrolet car.

Mrs. John Brown and Miss Hazel Brown have returned to Peterborough.

Mrs. Robert Tighe and Mrs. Christopher, who have been with Mr. and Mrs. William Jackson for a fortnight, are leaving for Bracebridge to-morrow. Mrs. Tighe will spend a week with Mrs. Christopher before returning to her home in Lindsay.

Rev. Mr. Robbins of Young's Point, was in the village on Friday.

Mrs. William McMann of Reaboro, who has been spending a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Charles Foster, has returned home.

Mrs. Thomas Rose and son, of Peterborough, have returned home after spending a few days with Mr. George Tucker.

Mrs. A. F. Choate is in Toronto for a few days.

Rev. Mr. Clare and family, motored to Omemee on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Foster were in Reaboro on Sunday.

Mrs. M. J. Hall who has spent the winter with Mrs. C. E. Ellis, is leaving on Wednesday to visit her son in Toronto.

Mr. Lloyd Hess of Hastings, was in the village on business this week.

Vestry Meeting.

The annual vesty meeting of St. Mark's Anglican church was held on April 11th. The meeting was opened by prayer by Rev. Mr. Robbins. After the business was attended to the following officers were elected for the coming year:

Rector's warden—Mr. Albert Cooper.

People's warden — Mr. H. G. E. Choate.

Auditor—Mr. Thos. Cuffe.

Sidesmen— Messrs. Charles Foster, Carl Cooper and H. W. Clements, Jr.

Sexton—Mr. George Clements.

Mr. Robbins moved a vote of thanks to all those who had assisted in any way during the past year. The meeting closed with the benediction.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Thursday, April 12th. After the business was transacted, two interesting papers were read. One, "The Sanitary Home" by Mrs. H. W. Clements, contained many valuable points. The other by Mrs. Garfield Crozier, "The Value of Pictures," was most interesting and instructive.

Canada's Railway Problem

And Its Solution

W. F. TYE.

In a paper presented to the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers, Mr. W. F. Tye, formerly Chief Engineer of the Canadian Pacific, gives a masterly analysis of the railway situation in this country. From his years of experience thinking and solving railway problems as one of the outstanding railway engineers in Canada, Mr. Tye has had not only the attitude of the engineer but that of the economist as well.

Amongst Mr. Tye's summarized conclusions are:

The National Transcontinental, the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern Railways are unable to earn their operating expenses and their fixed charges. Canada has built, and is operating, the first of these roads, and Canada and the various provinces have guaranteed the principal and interest of most of the bonds of the other two. As the roads are unable to earn their fixed charges, they must, of necessity, be paid by the country.

The failure of these roads is due to the duplication of lines by all the railways, encouraged and bonused by the Government; to the excessive cost of the Grand Trunk Pacific and National Transcontinental Railways; to the failure of the Grand Trunk Pacific to provide itself with an adequate system of feeders in the West, and to the construction, by the Canadian Northern, of the long and unproductive stretches of road across British Columbia and Northern Ontario, without feeders, terminals, etc.

If these railways are to be maintained in two separate systems, it will cost at least $400,000,000. It will be necessary to build five to six thousand miles of feeders in the West, and two to three thousand miles of feeders in the East, and terminals costing many millions.

A consolidation of the Grand Trunk, the Grand Trunk Pacific, Transcontinental and Canadian Northern Railways would give a well-balanced system. Such a combination would not require more than $100,000,000 to put it in proper physical condition.

Including operating expenses and fixed charges, it costs the Canadian Pacific about $70 to do $100 worth of business, and it costs the Intercolonial and the other Canadian Government roads from $200 to $220 to do $100 worth of business.

Canada should follow the wise example set by Sir John Macdonald when dealing with the Canadian Pacific in 1879-80, and form a new private corporation, with sufficient power and the necessary safeguards, to take over and consolidate the Grand Trunk, Grand Trunk Pacific, Transcontinental and Canadian Northern Railways, and develop another Canadian Pacific.

Such a combination would start with gross earnings of at least $100,000,000 per annum, with a probable average increase of 3% per annum, and probable net earnings of from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 per annum, and a net revenue from other sources of about $2,800,000. Its fixed charges at consolidation would be about $35,000,000 and it would be under the necessity of spending, in the first five to seven years, at least $100,000,000 to provide rolling stock, and to put its properties in good physical condition.

In order to control its policy, and to share in its certain prosperity, Canada should have an interest in the new company. The Dominion Government should furnish 40% of the money required, own 40% of the stock, and appoint 40% of the Directorate, but take no part in the actual management. This would give all the advantage of Government control without any of the manifest disadvantages of Government management.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kindeys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

French Everywhere Successful

THE GERMAN DEFENSIVE SYSTEM SWEPT AWAY

GENERAL NIVELLE'S FORCES SWEEP STEADILY FORWARD ON WIDE FRONT

German Defensive Positions Dominating Navroy and Moron Villers Captured in the Advance East of Rheims While Smashing Blows Were Delivered North of Villy---Germans Have Had to Mass 240,000 New Forces in an Effort to Stop the French.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, April 19.—"Everywhere success," was the epitome of to-day's official statement, detailing the continued sweep forward of General Nivelle's armies. The great German defensive positions dominating Navroy and Moron Villers were captured in this sweep east of Rheims. Smashing blows north of Villy and Ostel gained more ground. Northeast of Soissons desperate German attempts to create diversions elsewhere along the front failed. All German counter attacks on the ground newly wrested from their hands in the St. Quentin to Rheims front signally failed. To-day there is fighting along almost the entire French front. Around St. Quentin General Nivelle reported great activity of artillery. It may possibly be the precursor of another tremendous infantry assault there which will sweep the town—long menaced—into French hands. In the Coucy Forest, further south in the bend of the fighting front, the statement reported patrol fighting. Still farther along to the north of the Aisne the French Commander-in-Chief reported "further progress" north of Villy and Ostel.

In the Champagne, Niville reported his troops as pursuing their success in the Moron Villers Region. "Attacks everywhere were successful," he said, "our troops carrying Mont Haut Swell and several heights to the east, including Hill 227. During the course of the night two German batteries were captured. The identification of twelve new German divisions in the one sector between Soissons and Auberives means the Germans have been forced to mass 240,000 new forces there, not only to take the place of troops cut pieces, by the French advance, but in an effort to dam the flood tide of the French assaulting waves. Every battle front despatch received here emphasizes the bloody execution of the French artillery.

WASHINGTON, April 19. — The door of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee in the Capital building, was "jimmied" during the night. The police believe the "job" was the work of spies seeking information of naval plans. As far as could be ascertained nothing was missing from the room.

AMSTERDAM, April 19.—The German Generals Kaempt, Telle and Von Bondungin, have been retired and pentioned, following recent German reverses on the western front.

No Separate Peace Says Russian Minister

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, April 19. — A pledge that Russia stands unswerving against Germany was given to-day by Foreign Minister Milukoff in welcoming the British and French Labour delegates.

"The Provisional Government," he solemnly asserted, "will continue its part in annihilating German militarism, with the greatest intensity. Our ideal is to prevent the future possibility of war.

"I beg you to announce to your countries that free Russia is doubly strong."

The new Russian press regards Germany's peace "feelers" as "hypocritical" and "treacherous." Those two words were those most used in editorials to-day commenting on the movement and the activity of German and Austrian Socialists for a separate peace with the new Provisional Government.

"No one in Russia desires to strengthen liberty with the aid of German bayonets," said the newspaper Retech to-day.

OTTAWA, April 19.—Insurance losses amounting to almost seven million dollars have been incurred by Canadian insurance companies as a result of the war, according to an official statement given out to-day by the insurance branch of the Department of Finance.

LONDON, Eng., April 19. — According to the Manchester Guardian Premier Lloyd George will probably announce in the Commons shortly the Government scheme for allowing Home Rule in Ireland by county option, that is, counties will vote themselves in or out of the Home Rule arrangement, just as they please. Both Ulsterites and Nationalists are likely to oppose the scheme at first, says the Guardian, but may agree later.

Summary of Wednesday's reports:
French take villages of Ostel, Braye-en-Laonnois and Nanteuil-la-Fosse; repulse fierce German counter-attacks, inflicting heavy losses.
Haig occupies village of Villers Guislain, north of St. Quentin.
French so far capture 17,000 men and 75 guns.
British capture to date total over 14,000 men and 227 guns.
It is officially recorded that during yesterday's French advance an important German unit was surrounded in the Forest of Ville-au-Bois, and 1,300 prisoners with 180 machine guns surrendered.

LONDON, April 19.—British troops were evidently fairly inactive to-day, consolidating their position, bringing up more supplies and seeking out the enemy's weak spot for the next turn they will have against the Germans. Field Marshal Haig reported nothing of special interest in the fighting along all of his front. The first phase of the British drive has been entirely successful. Now comes the pause in the preparation for the second.

HOBOKEN, N.J., April 19.—Preparatory to making Hoboken a shipping base, using the piers for shipments of food to the Allies, six hundred regular infantrymen were to-day placed in charge of all German steamship piers in Hoboken. Railways have begun work on the extension of switching facilities to the piers. It was announced that no munitions will be shipped from these piers.

AMSTERDAM, April 19.—The German press is betraying increasing anxiety as to the ability of German troops to hold the much advertised "Hindenburg line." Despatches received here to-day summarizing editorial comment indicate an unusual frankness and much pessimism indicated in a few expressions, although the great majority of the newspapers are hopeful the line will hold. In the pessimistic class were these expressions in the Berlin Zolks Zeitung: "We frustrated the Allies' plans last year; we must be firm in our confidence to frustrate the mthis year—but what pains and effort it will cost us." The Wurtemburger Tagwacht (Socialist) "There is no further need of concealing the truth; we can never conquer. It is useless to deceive the people longer."

EVERY RETURNED SOLDIER WANTED

In connection with the Church parade on Sunday the Great War Veterans wish to invite every returned officer and man in Peterborough, whether a member or not, to turn out and attend divine service. The service is in memory of the gallant soldiers who fell at Langemarck, and it is expected that every soldier in the city who has been overseas will attend. The wearing of uniforms is authorized for Sunday, and the War Veterans hope to see every officer and man out. The parade will fall in at the Armouries at 10.30 o'clock on Sunday morning and, headed by the Band of the 57th proceed to Knox Church.

THREE MONTHS' PAY FOR C.E.F. SOLDIERS AFTER THEIR DISCHARGE

Important Order-in-Council Passed Yesterday Which Means That Canadian Soldiers Will Receive Grant of Extra Pay

IS MADE RETROACTIVE

OTTAWA, April 18.—All members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who have been overseas and who have served at least six months continuous services are to receive a grant of three months' pay and allowances on being honourably discharged. The following order in Council was passed to-day:

"The committee of the Privy Council, on the recommendation of the Minister of Militia and Defence, advise that every person who has served, is now serving, or may in the future serve as an officer, nursing sister, warrant officer, non-commissioned officer or man in the expeditionary force, and who has been or may hereafter be honourably retired or discharged from such service after six months' continuous service during the present war, be continued on the pay and allowances of the rank held at the date of retirement or discharge for a period of three months, if the said service or any portion thereof has been performed overseas."

The wording of the order in Council makes its provisions retroactive. It will thus apply to the fifteen thousand or more men who have already returned and been honourably discharged. These men will thus receive a grant of three months' pay

WOULD YOU TAKE 25c. AND GO THROUGH WHAT THESE VETERANS HAVE?

That is the question you should ask yourself Saturday when the War Veterans and their friends will appeal to you to assist them. If you think of it in that way when you are buying a tag you won't be satisfied with giving 25c. Remember what these men have done for you—remember what the boys who are still over there and will come back battle-scarred some day are doing, and then dig down deep and give something worth while. Don't let the outside world say that the boys of Peterborough were brave enough to put their home city the second highest in the whole Dominion in recruiting, and then their fellow citizens refused to take care of them when they came back.

ANOTHER PETERBORO' SOLDIER HAS MADE THE SUPREME SACRIFICE

Pte. Wm. J. Carruthers Dead of Wounds---Five Other Local Soldiers Are Reported Wounded, the List Including Three More Members of the 93rd Battalion---To-day's Military News.

DIED OF WOUNDS.

Pe. Wm. J. Carruthers, late of 80th Battalion.

WOUNDED.

Pte. Harold Mollon, late 93rd Battalion, 705 Water street.

Pte. Chas. Wiggins, late 93rd Battalion, 249 Simcoe street.

Pte. Robert Sproats, late 93rd Battalion, 384 Stewart street.

Gunner Arnold Drummond, C.F.A., Barnardo Avenue.

Pte. N. H. Rodgers, late 136th Battalion.

Lance Corp. J. S. Thompson, Mounted Rifles, Warsaw.

To-day's casualty lists are heavier from a local standpoint than yesterday, as one Peterborough soldier is reported dead from wounds and five more are wounded. Three of these were former members of the 93rd Battalion.

PTE. WM. J. CARRUTHERS.

The sad news was received this morning that Pte. Wm. J. Carruthers, of Peterborough, who enlisted in the 80th Battalion, and who was reported dangerously wounded a few days ago, died of wounds at No. 23 Casualty Clearing Station on April 11th. Pte. Carruthers was the son of Mr. George Carruthers of the Quaker Oats Company who, with Mrs. Carruthers, is at present in Sudbury. Pte. Carruthers was a graduate of the Peterborough Collegiate and a member of the George street Methodist church, where he was active in Epworth League work. He was employed in the Quaker Oats office before enlisting.

PTE. N. H. RODGERS.

Pte. N. H. Rodgers, who was yesterday reported wounded, went overseas with the 136th Battalion, Port Hope. Pte. Rodgers is a brother of Mr. A. E. Rodgers of the Examiner, and formerly resided in Peterborough, although he was living in Vancouver where his father, W. J. Rodgers, resided, when war broke out. He had made four other attempts to get overseas, once being turned down at Quebec as his battalion was embarking, before he finally got away with the Port Hope battalion. He was transferred to the 75th Canadian battalion at the front.

GUNNER ARNOLD DRUMMOND.

Mrs. Emma Drummond, Barnardo Ave., received official news from Ottawa this morning that her son Gunner Arnold Drummond Canadian Field Artillery was admitted to No. 8 Stationary Hospital, Wimereux, on April 10th, suffering from a severe gun shot wound in the leg. Gunner Drummond enlisted here with the 33rd Battery. Before donning the khaki he was famous as a steeple jack. Two other brothers went overseas, Sergt. J. J. Drummond, C.F.A. and Lance Corp. Charlton Drummond, 8th C.M.R. The latter is a prisoner in Germany. A fourth brother enlisted recently in the mechanical transport, but was after words discharged as medically unfit.

PTE. HAROLD MOLLON.

Mrs. Ida Oldfield, 705 George street, received word to-day that her nephew, Pte. Harold Mollon, of Peterborough, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion and was afterwards transferred to the Mounted Rifles, has been slightly wounded and admitted into No. 8 Stationary Hospital, Wimereux, on April 10th. Pte. Mollon was formerly employed by the Cresswan Co. He was one of the first to join the 93rd Battalion.

LANCE CORP. THOMPSON.

Mr. Thompson of Warsaw was notified from Ottawa this morning that his son, Lance-Corp. Jas. Stanley Thompson, Mounted Rifles, is officially reported admitted to No. 13 General Hospital, Boulogne, on April 15th, dangerously ill and suffering from gun shot wounds in the head and arm.

PTE. R. SPROATS.

A telegram received at the home of Pte. Robert Sproats, 384 Stewart street, states that he was admitted to Number 10 Stationary Hospital Stoner, suffering from a gun shot wound in the left arm. Pte. Sproats enlisted in the 93rd Battalion and was transferred to the 20th Battalion. His parents reside at the above address.

PTE. C. W. WIGGINS.

Private Charles William Wiggins, whose wife and one child reside at 249 Simcoe street, is among to-day's official list of wounded. Pte. Wiggins is suffering from a gun shot wound in the right leg. He was formerly a member of the 93rd Battalion, and subsequently transferred to the 1st Battalion. Pte. Wiggins was born in England but prior to enlisting resided in Emsmore.

Mrs. Lilian M. Corrigan, 657 Concession street, has received the following letters in connection with the

AT HOME

St. Peter's T.A.S. will hold an At Home, on Monday Evening, April 23rd, in St. Alphonsus Lyceum.

ST. PAULS' PAPER COLLECTION

Members of St. Paul's Church are asked to have their papers, magazines, and bags of scrap paper in a convenient place, ready for collection, on Friday of this week, April 20th.

Brilliant Victories Won By The French

PTE. N. H. RODGERS, who is officially reported wounded. He is a brother of Mr. Arthur Rodgers of the Examiner, and went overseas with the 136th Battalion.

Dr. Anderson Speaks on "Gibraltar" To-night

To-night at the Collegiate Assembly Hall, Dr. George Anderson will give the second of his series of lectures in the interests of the Canadian naval institute. The subject to-night is "Gibraltar": the most unique spot in the British Empire." The lecture will be well worth hearing, as the lecturer has been a wide traveller and has a happy faculty of fairly visualizing the places and incidents he deals with. There will be no admission charge, but a "silver collection at the door in the interests of the sailors of the Navy."

CHINESE WINE 85.27 PER CENT. PROOF SPIRITS COST HUM HOY $200

Magistrate Dumble Gave Judgment This Afternoon—Liquor Taken in Police Raid April 8

SENDS FOR MONEY

Two strange sealed bottles marked "Chinese Wine" from Tien Tsin or some other such place, that were gathered up in the police haul at 385 Water street, were sampled by Inspector Stewart and upon departmental analysis showed the unusually high spirituous percentage of 85.27. On the strength of that information the Inspector laid a charge against Hum Hoy of having liquor in a place other than his dwelling. It was heard yesterday and this afternoon Magistrate Dumble fined the Chinaman $200 and costs, to be paid forthwith, or three months in jail. Coming on top of the $50 fine for having opium in his possession, Hum Hoy immediately sent out a S. O. S. call, borne by Jim Hum. In other words Jim went forth to write to Montreal for funds and to collect if possible, from the local colony. In the meantime Hum Hoy, late of 385 Water street, goes to jail.

Alleged To Have Raised Cheque For Mere 90 Cents

D. J. Winn, a former employee of the Canadian General Electric Company, was committed for trial this morning by Magistrate Dumble, on a charge of having raised his pay cheque from $22.05 to $22.95. Evidence for the prosecution was presented by Jas. Cummings, the pay roll clerk for the transformer department, Mr. E. G. Patterson, Mr. Fred Shannon and Mr. Roland Rowley, who cashed the cheque.

General Nivelle's Success Yesterday the Most Significant Yet Won in the Great Offensive Launched on Monday.

FOE'S MORALE BROKEN

LONDON, April 18.—Determined pounding on the German "fortified zone" between Soissons and Rheims to-day brought the French armies under Gen. Nivelle the most significant victories they have yet won in the great offensive launched on Monday. The entire Hindenburg line was bulged back from Vailly, which the French hold, to Courtecon, where they are established on the outskirts of the village.

GERMAN MORALE IS BROKEN

The penetration of the German front in this sector in places reaches a depth of nearly four miles, and a significant breakdown of the German morale is noted in the Paris bulletin, which says:

"Under the energetic pressure of our infantry and the murderous action of our cannon, the enemy fell back in disorder, abandoning important material and leaving in our hands his supply depot. A single one of our regiments took 500 prisoners belonging to seven different regiments. We captured nineteen cannon, of which five were siege guns."

Thus far, since the beginning of the battle more than 17,000 unwounded German prisoners have been brought to the rear of the French lines, and seventy-five cannon have already been counted.

LAON SALIENT CUT DOWN

The brilliant French victory to-day considerably reduces the Laon salient and brings the French nearer to Douai. The fall of either of these towns in the near future would mean complete disaster to the Germans and their expulsion from French soil. Nivelle's men are well on to the high ground which guards Laon from the south, and the disorganization of the resistance they are encountering indicates that the German command will be forced to give them even more ground.

North of Chavonne French battalions swept over the rain-soaked soil, captured the village of Ocstei, and drove the enemy nearly a mile beyond it. Braye-en-Laonnois, which French troops reached this morning, was also overrun and the entire strip of territory between this town and Courtecon fell into French hands.

TAKE A BRIDGEHEAD.

The French attack also extends on the southern bank of the Aisne River. A dashing assault on a German bridgehead organized by the Germans between Conde and Vailly resulted in its capture, and this enabled the French to drive on and establish themselves firmly in Vailly.

Where the line of the offensive swings east and south from Craonne toward Rheims neither the French artillery nor infantry ceased its activity. The forest to the east of Villeau-Bois was captured this morning, and a later official report states that a big body of Germans, surrounded in the woods, threw down their arms and begged for mercy. Thirteen hundred prisoners were netted here, as

IS REPRISAL RIGHT?

"Evil communications corrupt good manners" has a wider and wickeder meaning now than it had when we wrote it as a "head-line in our copy books, at school.

Communication—contact with and experience of, the Germans, and their work, has corrupted, in a sense, the high ideals of the civilized allies, or rather, replaced them with an odious necessity.

We read with positive pain and comparative approval of the allied aeroplanes bombarding a defenceless city in Germany, at the risk of life of peaceful people. That this barbarism is just reprisal for outrages committed by Germany—such as baby-killing Zeppelin raids, sinking hospital ships, etc.—doesn't quite take the nasty taste out of the mouth. The only thing that justifies such a form of reprisal is that it is the only way to reach the German consciousness, if it will even do that. The Prussianized element in Germany is utterly ruthless and heartless, and the only way to reach that element is in their persons. They don't care how many common German people are killed, or how much they are made to suffer. And it is not probable that reprisals that do not have a personal touch and punch will have any effect. The only way to rid the world of Prussianism and its works is to grind militarism to powder; to crush and defeat, to dehorn the devil, to cut off his tail very close behind the ears. To that end all our powers, our energies must be bent. We must send every soldier that is fit; we must produce every ounce of food possible; we must knit an endless tale of socks; we must keep busy; we must keep up the fight at home, where we are as virtually threatened as if the Canadian frontier were running north and south through France. We must bend every energy, individual, national and international, to crush the cause of the colossal scourge that torments the life of humanity, as it never has been tormented before in the long history of the world.

THE CARD UP HIS SLEEVE.

A pessimistic citizen to-day shook his head in doubt as he read of the continued successes of the Allies on the western front. "I don't understand Germany's condition; I'm afraid they are playing a game that will recoil upon the Allies fatally in a few months"—that the Kaiser has a card up his sleeve. What grounds are there for such opinions?

Is it not a fact that in every main object since the war began Germany has been disappointed—has failed to live up to her self-imposed undertakings? (At the present time, to the thinking observer, Germany's case is at its most hopeless point, so far, her ruthlessness, her immense breach of faith, her utter lack of honour, her brutality, her very success in wrong doing have raised up enemies, till to-day she has virtually the whole world against her.

The German cause was hopeless enough before one of the greatest world powers—in resources that count in waging this war—became a new enemy. And the entry of the United States into the war has drawn in, in effect or sympathy, almost the whole western hemisphere. Cuba, Brasil and Bolivia have severed relations with Germany, and lesser countries, rich in resources, especially food resources, have voiced their sympathy with the action of the United States—a total population of 140 millions added to the enemies of Germany since the first of April. These numbers, outside the United States, may not count much in military strength, but the countries represented count heavily since this is a war of food endurance, and these 140 millions represent immense possibilities of supply of the fighting material that counts most—food. Germany may have a stroke in reserve on the western front, but it won't avail. While her resources in war materials, and fighting strength are declining. The effectiveness, as well as numbers, of her enemies, is constantly growing.

THE SIMPLE TRUTH

The meeting in the Opera House on Tuesday night, in the matter of its real object is a little difficult to understand. It was announced on the bills posted, to be for the purpose of welcoming the new women voter to membership in the local Conservative Association. It was announced supplementarily by Mr. Burnham, who, it is assumed, was the originator of the gathering to instruct women upon public questions.

This was a laudable object; but it was not reached if women were, not informed, but misinformed. The chief speaker of the evening, a lady, whose statements would naturally most appeal to political neophytes of the gentler sex, made one most important misstatement of fact, showing that on one point at least the women voter got a wrong "steer." Miss Boulton declared in effect that if it had not been for the Opposition, meaning Liberals, of course, Canada would have had a naval force she could claim as her own.

Though it may be always impolite and sometimes dangerous to contradict a lady, this statement or suggestion is quite erroneous.

In 1909, the Parliament of Canada on the initiative of Sir George Foster, unanimously voted for a resolution embodying the policy of the construction of a Canadian navy—"of," as Mr. Borden put it, "our own material, by the skill of our own workmen." So urgent did Mr. Borden at this time consider the matter that at his suggestion the word "speedy" was placed in the resolution before the word, "construction" of a Canadian navy.

The Laurier Government brought in legislation implementing the unanimously adopted resolution, authorizing and providing for the construction of a Canadian navy. In accordance with this, plans were procured and tenders invited for the building of armoured cruisers and destroyers, just the kind of craft, the experience of the war has shown that were needed for naval patrol and coast defence work. Before the Laurier Government could act upon the tenders received it was relieved of office—on a spurious loyalty cry amidst much waving of flags, which, however, as far as the spirit of the flag goes, have been "laid up in lavender ever since."

The Borden Government came into power, supported by the Nationalists, whose creed was opposition to all help to the Empire and particular in the form of a Canadian navy—they did not want the sons of Quebec to be "disemhowelled on British battle ships." The condition of the Nationalist support of the Borden government was the killing of the policy of a Canadian navy, and accordingly the Canadian naval policy was killed and three Nationalists given office in the Cabinet as a guarantee that it would stay killed.

The Nationalists wouldn't let Mr. Borden build a Canadian navy to be manned by Canadian sailors—they might get hurt. But they didn't object to spending Canadian money. So Mr. Borden to meet their whim and "save the government's face" proposed the humiliating policy of voting money—the trifling sum of 35 millions—to be spent in British shipyards—empty she... without guns or sailors. This gift or give-away policy passed parliament, but it was held up in the Senate, but not killed. The condition suggested by a Nationalist member of the Borden cabinet, was adopted—submission to the vote of the people. The government dared not, or at least, did not, submit their Dreadnought policy to the people and things drifted, nothing naval was done.

The government would neither carry out the policy of a Canadian navy built in Canada, "of Canadian material and by Canadian skill, "nor submit their Dreadnought policy to the people." So that the Borden government is to blame for the fact that we have neither a Canadian navy nor Dreadnought only a deep humiliation over our naval nothingness—compelled to accept naval protection from Uncle Sam's navy.

The answer to the question why we have no Canadian navy, is as clear as the answer to the question, "who killed cock robin?" This is the true story of the reasons that we have not a Canadian navy to-day, and no female orator who attempts to instruct women on political questions, or any body else, can truthfully dispute its substantial truthfulness.

THE UNDERCURRENTS OF IMPORTANT WAR EVENTS

The traditional lament of the popular magazine reader is that, whenever he comes to an exciting point in the story he is reading, he stumbles over "continued in our next." In much the same way, the close follower of the war news is constantly baffled and tantalized.

Many phases of this war might have been written by E. Phillips Oppenheim or some other deft exponent of secret diplomacy, statecraft and intrigue. The public has the first chapters, but the ruthless censor has torn the last pages out of the book.

For instance, how did the United States Government get that paper proving so conclusively as to be above denial, the German attempt to bring Japan and Mexico down on the United States? What daring feat of arms or secret service exploit lies back of that historic exposure? Rumor has fattened on the strange incident. The scenes of it have been staged sometimes in Mexico, or in Japan, at New York, even in Berlin and on the high seas. Was it the result of a diplomatic trap or, as we prefer to think, of the patient, unselfish and silent efficiency of the devoted secret service, British or American, composed of patriots working far aloof from the cheering plaudits of their grateful countrymen?

All about us lie these grateful mysteries, contributing materially to that tense state of mind produced by the course of these astonishing world events. Just the other day, an unknown British naval lieutenant received the Victoria Cross for an exploit which, according to the official announcement, "cannot be made public until the war is over." What tale of desperate bravery lurks in that colorless yet eloquent official announcement? Where had this man been, and what had he done, that the facts must be kept from enemy knowledge?

The censorship is necessary, just as necessary as spies and informers are dangerous. Nobody is able to appreciate the fact better than war correspondents at the front and newspaper men at home, whose business it is to judge the value of information. The public in general has been educated by years of experience now up to cheerful toleration of the restrictions imposed. But it is only natural that keen interest should be aroused over a thousand passing events which draw us on and then abruptly disappear beneath the surface, leaving us watching the ripples without knowing what has caused them or how deeply the waters have been stirred.—Ottawa Journal.

EARNED, NOT FORCED.

England is to give the vote to women. It is assured by the announcement of the party leaders and by an acquiescent vote of the Commons. Whether they have it soon or not until the war is over, they have the Government's pledge and the thing is as good as accomplished.

How was the victory won? It was not won by smashing windows, by slashing paintings, by pouring acid into mail boxes. These things roused John Bull's anger and diminished the number of those favourable to suffrage until they consisted chiefly of such politicians as were amenable to bullying—never a large number in England. Neither was it won by linking suffrage with half-baked theories ranging from pacifism to anarchism and from socialism to free love. Wherever it took this form of manifestation John Bull's backbone simply became more rigid.

It was won by abandoning all these tactics and displaying common sense and patriotism. "The war could not have been carried on without them," said Mr. Asquith, explaining his conversion. The same reason was given by Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Bonar Law. The war, by giving an opportunity for change of tactics, was a godsend to the suffragists. Mrs. Pankhurst's following had reached an impasse. Their riotous propaganda had alienated friends, made enemies, and antagonized all England; they could not keep it up and could see no way to let go. Another argument than violence was necessary, but it was not in sight. The war provided it. By dropping both their violence and their alliances with socialistic and subversive creeds, and by devoting themselves to proving that they were of use to the nation and as willing to serve it as they were useful, they supplied it. Now they have got what they wanted, but what they could not get otherwise.—New York Times.

THE GENEVA OPENED NAVIGATION TO-DAY

Capt. Harris Brought Her Up From Rice Lake To-day, the First Sailing of the New Year.

Captain Harris picked his way with the "Geneva" through an ice field in Rice Lake this morning and made the trip to Peterborough just one day later than in 1916. But contrary to the Toronto harbour master's annual presentation there was no hat or other recognition of the opening of navigation. The ice is gone except for large floating pieces from Rice Lake as far east as Tick Island, and with a change in the wind will soon pass out into the Trent River. Mr. J. J. Gillman was up from Harwood and is already talking prospects for the summer's trade at his resort.

Three Montrealers In Scrap On Early Train This Morning

Armand Denoure was fined $10 and costs for being intoxicated, and John Nedou took ten days on the bill for assaulting John Linnane, all three men having been the principals in a fight on the early train from Montreal this morning. They were with a party of fifty men on their way from Montreal to the Nobel ammunition plant near Parry Sound. Most of them were French-Canadians, but Linnane is a burly Irishman. The party had a car to themselves and during the night Linnane, occupying an upper berth, wanted to go to the lavatory. Denoure, who was in charge of the group, objected in some way and spoke in French to Nedou. As soon as Linnane touched the floor Nedou assaulted him, and in the ensuing fight Linnane was severely pummelled about the head. The conductor threatened to cut the car off, and finally wired ahead to Havelock to have the police waiting for the train. Constable Greenham took the three into custody and later brought them to Peterborough on the local.

Aside from this morning's case a Montreal paper recently made the claim that these "drafts" of workmen for the Nobel plant had to a large extent eventually enlisted with Northern and Central Ontario battalions, for which, if true, Montreal should be truly grateful, if its own measure of recruiting fails.

How Retchstag Tries To Put Down Anti-War Feeling

An overwhelming majority of the members of the Reichstag tries to howl down the anti-war sentiments occasionally voiced by the score of Deputies belonging to an anti-Government party known as the Social Democratic Labour Group, according to the reports printed in the Berlin press of the scenes in the German Parliament on Feb. 23, when the last war credit of 15,000,000,000 marks was voted. Following a statement by Count von Roedern, the Minister of Finance, explaining the new credit and new taxes, George Ledebour, one of the leaders of the anti-Kaiser Socialists, undertook to tell why he and his comrades were about to vote against the new credit. Brief excerpts of Deputy Ledebour's speech were cabled to this country, with the comment that at one point the speaker was interrupted by loud laughter. The following account of the incident is taken from the reports in leading Berlin newspapers.

"Deputy Ledebour, (social Democratic Working Group): 'He who votes the credits to the Government thus gives it full authority to use these means as it pleases. (Objections) Any party that, through voting these credits, gives the Government the strongest imaginable vote of confidence, in so doing accepts responsibility for the Government's war aims and for the measures that the Government is pleased to use in attaining its war aims. Again, this time we are not in a position to give the Government this vote of confidence.

'The Imperial Government's peace offer does not correspond to the demands that must be made of such an offer. (Laughter.) Its emptyness diminishes in value. Indeed, the Imperial Government does demand the acquisition of territory in the East and the West, and of course, that means the acquisition of districts foreign to the people. In full accord with these plans for annexation is the boasting about victory that is never missing in any speech by the Chancellor, nor in any Monarchist demonstration. (Cries of 'Thank God!') 'That is not left aside even at the time of the peace offer.' (Renewed cries of 'Thank God!) 'The fact that the Dega alliance, in its notes, has admitted cherishing far-reaching plans of conquest, cannot weaken our opinion regarding the attitude of our own Government' (Boisterous laughter.) 'I earnestly hope that our Socialist friends in the countries of the Dega alliance (Fresh storms of laughter) may follow the gratifying example already afforded everywhere by the champions of Socialism through their resolute struggle against the anti-peace machinations of their own rulers.' (Renewed laughter.) 'The reconstitution of a Polish State also is in contradiction with the principle of the right of peoples to self-government.' (Laughter.)

'Furthermore, we cannot accept joint responsibility for the German methods of carrying on the war.' (Laughter.) 'We demand the cessation of the unrestricted U-boat warware.' (Boisterous laughter.) 'It is as little in accord with the dictates of humanity as is the English starvation plan.' (Cries of: 'Well then! 'I) 'Unfortunately the unrestricted U-boat warfare has immediately furnished the war agitators and the war contractors in the United States with the wished-for pretext to drive their Government into a break with Germany. We exhort the afflicted peoples to cooperate with us in working for a permanent peace based upon a mutual understanding.' (Applause from the Social Democratic Working Group. Laughter in the House.)"

Deputy Ledebour's speech was sharply criticised by several of the leading reactionaries of the Reichstag, including Count von Westarp, one of the most bitter opponents of the former moderate policy of the Imperial Chancellor. Ledebour's attempt to reply to his critics, especially to Deputy von Payer, who had declared that the voting of the credit was to be taken as a matter of course that was the duty of every member of the Reichstag, is reported as follows:

"Deputy Ledebour: 'Anyone who takes the position occupied by Payer sanctions the unlimited toleration of the absolutism of the Government.' (Laughter.) 'It is indeed a source of satisfaction to us if no other voice than ours is raised against this monstrous denial of the people's rights. We shall continue the battle for the people's rights.'" (Cry from the right, 'You look it.' Merriment.)"

WHY NOT DISCARD THE KING?

If the people of the British Empire really believe as their spokesmen frequently say, that they are fighting Kaiserism and not the people of the Central kingdoms, they could do a great deal toward bringing the war to an end by conveying a hint to their own king that his resignation is in order.

The deposition of the Czar is reported to have had a telling effect in Germany by inducing the people there to wonder if they might not follow the example of their neighbours. Ideas are contagious, and it is very likely that there is truth in the reports about unrest among the Germans giving Emperor William concern for his own fate. How would the events in Russia be accelerated in their influence across the boundary if they were now to be followed by abolition of monarchy in another of the hostile states? No one can imagine the force of the move.

To be sure, George isn't an absolute monarch as Nicholas was, but that only makes the task of disposing of him all the easier. Probably, he would not be sorry to quit, anyhow. He wasn't brought up to the job of being a king, and he was undoubtedly very much much happier while he was captain of a cruiser than he has ever been since his brother's death thrust upon him the unwelcome duties of monarchy. It is not difficult to believe that he would infinitely rather go back to bossing a ship than stay where he is.

The disappearance of the Czar removed the main weakness in the way of accepting the Allies' professions of devotion to democracy at their face value, for they were pretty unsubstantial as long as the most autocratic of all earth's rulers was fighting with the powers that were making the protestations. If the elimination of Nicholas were to be followed quickly by the departure of his cousin of England there is no telling what the people of Germany might do about their own affairs. And if the Kaiser were to go, the avowed purpose of the war would be accomplished.—Detroit Free Press.

Three Months Pay For C.E.F. Soldiers

and allowances. Nurses will participate in the grant upon the same terms as soldiers. The grant includes separation allowances as well as pay.

The extra pay is granted in justice to the soldiers who may naturally be expected to require at least three months to find employment and be reabsorbed into some civil occupation in which they can again earn a livelihood. It will mean an additional war expenditure of probably at least fifty million dollars, since the practical effect is to continue the whole expeditiinary force on full pay for three months after demobilization.

The three months' extra pay, together with the deferred pay now held back by the Givernment and available to the returned men on discharge, will contribute every considerably towards the solution of financing the soldiers until they can again adjust themselves to the vocations of peace.

PALESTINE FACES FAMINE.

Only Hope, Jerusalem Reports, is in Its Capture by the British.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Advices received yesterday from Jerusalem are to the effect that fully 50 per cent. of the population of Palestine and Syria are facing death by starvation. The only chance of relief is the capture of Jerusalem and the seaport of Jaffa by the British forces. This will enable the Allies to bring supplies from Egypt.

The Jews, Mohammedans, and the Druses of Mount Lebanan are all suffering alike because the Turkish Governor at Damascus has, through his officials seized all horses, mules, goats, sheep, and cattle. In addition, the Government has not only commandeered all the grain in Palestine and Syria, but has taken away that which was to be used for seed, so that the unfortunate people have not been able to sow their fields for the coming season.

HAVELOCK CORRESPONDENCE

HAVELOCK, April 17. — Belmont and Methuen Council held their regular April meeting on the 31st ult., when all the members were present.

On motion of Anderson and Elliott, the Reeve and Clerk were authorised to sign the petition to the Dominion government asking for Dominion prohibition.

On motion of Anderson and Steenburgh, Messrs. William Davidson, of Havelock, Stuart Crossen of Cordova Mines, and Norris Whitney of Belmont, were appointed sheep valuators for the townships of Belmont and Methuen, at a salary of $2 per day and mileage.

The application of Mrs. James Seabrooke, secretary of the Women's Institute, to have the town hall cleaned, was left in the hands of the reeve with power to act.

The following accounts were paid:

James Freeman, part salary	$40 00
C. Youmans, rebate dog	1 00
A. Palmateer, gravel	5 10

Council then adjourned until April 28th, or at the call of the reeve.

Alex. Leeson, Clerk.

The regular monthly meeting of the Havelock council was held on Monday night, April 2nd inst., when all the members except Coun. Haig were present.

Robert Anderson applied for a license for two pool tables, and on motion of Jones and Matheson the application was granted.

Wm. King resigned the position of scavenger, and his resignation was accepted.

A resolution was received from the school board requesting the council to have notices posted up forbidding business men to employ boys under the school age (14 years) and to prevent the congregating of youngsters at the livery stables and other places when they should be at school.

The council referred the communication to the truant officer, Mr. Jas. Backus.

A communication from the Hydro-Electric was read acknowledging the receipt of the resolution of the council regarding the request for hydro power, and stating that whenever the commission was ready to build a trunk line near here that it would take the matter up with the village.

Tax Collector Hill presented his report on the tax roll of 1916 showing that about $800 was still uncollected.

The treasurer was authorized to accept the roll when Mr. Hill had attached his affidavit thereto.

On motion of Jones and Matheson a bylaw will be prepared regarding the running at large of horses, cows, pigs and poultry, and a corner of the park will be utilized as a pound.

The question of another "Clean up Day" came up for discussion and the council was unanimous in declaring most heartily for that splendid idea on Arbor Day, which falls on Friday, May 4th, and the campaign this year will be directed by the reeve and the members of the council, each taking a section of the village under their care.

A number of accounts were ordered to be paid.

Council then adjourned.

Miss Stella Storms, teacher at Round Lake School, spent last week in town as the guest of Miss Pearl Green.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Thompson have returned to town from Toronto.

Mr. Thompson's many friends were delighted to meet him again on his first visit to Havelock since his accident some time ago. Mr. Thompson has rented Mr. C. Fanning's dwelling on George street, and will take possession this month.

Mr. Isaac Barlow and Mr. George Hamblin were in Toronto last week, attending a meeting of the Ontario Educational Association.

Mrs. James H. Johnson has returned from Toronto where she was attending the convention of the Associated Bible Students.

The amateur play "Miss Fearless and Co.," under the auspices of the Girls' Guild of St. John's church will be given in the town hall on Wednesday evening, April 18th.

The annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Auxiliary of the Methodist church was held on Friday afternoon last at 3 o'clock, in the basement of the church.

On Sunday evening last, April 15th, the Auxiliary held their anniversary service. Rev. C. Adams, pastor, preached a special sermon, and the Easter Thank Offering was made.

Mr. S. Aboud has returned to town from a business trip to Montreal and is at the Armstrong House with a select line of silks.

The Orange Lodge in town held a very successful dance in their lodge rooms on Easter Monday night, which was largely attended.

The annual meeting of the Belmont Women's Institute will be held in the Town Hall, Belmont, on Tuesday, April 17th, at 2 o'clock.

The weekly meeting of the W. A. of St. John's church, was held last Wednesday, at the rectory, at 2.30 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. German Sills and family of Belleville, formerly of this place, had a narrow escape from death by ptomaine poisoning recently, caused by partaking of canned salmon for supper.

Mr. Sills and Master Carl did not suffer so severely from the effects and are able to be around again, but Mrs. Sills and her sister, Miss Nellie Martin, are still confined to their beds.

Lieut. and Mrs. T. W. Quinn of Peterboro are the guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bryans.

Mr. Francis Butters of Toronto, spent a few days in town last week with friends.

Miss Olive Rose has returned home from Toronto accompanied by her cousin, Miss Bessie Kennedy.

Mr. H. W. Roche was confined to his home last week suffering from rheumatism.

Mrs. Holdcroft spent a few days with friends in Toronto last week.

THE PIG-HEADED ENGLISH.

Many wounded men are coming back to our church from the dreadful western front. They have been fighting the English and they find that so ignorant are the English of warfare that the English soldiers on the Somme refuse to surrender, not knowing that they are really beaten, with the result that terrible losses are inflicted upon our brave troops.

Trades And Labour Men Are Considering Proposal To Use 18 Acres of Land For Potatoes

The 18-acre parcel of land owned by the late Frank Brown has been offered by the executors of his estate to workmen on condition that they pay the taxes this year. This was announced at the meeting of the Trades and Labour Council last night when among other production questions this was outlined by the electrical workers of the C.G.E. Company who are particularly interested in it. This property is immediately north of the old Sandstone Brick Company's plant. It has a sandy bottom with several feet of light loam in the surface layer. Heavy crops of rye have been grown on the property and it is believed that it will be suitable for potatoes. The first step will be to obtain an expert opinion of the quality of this soil and its adaptability to potato growing. In the meantime a call is being made for 100 men who will be willing to enter an agreement to assume these eighteen acres which can be planted, it is estimated, at a cost of $500. It is expected that 1,600 bushels of potatoes will be yielded from that acreage, and Alderman Dobbin who was present last night believed that expectation quite modest. If one hundred men take up the scheme it will cost each of them $5. They will engage the necessary labour to put in and care for the crop for a total cost of $500. With good weather the undertaking is regarded as a certain success, and the men will have time to work their own gardens. Men who are attracted by this scheme and desire more information are asked to leave their names at the Co-Operative Grocery store at 200 Rubidge street. If a sufficient number show their interest a meeting will be held shortly and the plans polished up and perfected.

Safety First.

Last night's meeting at which Mr. J. J. Hartley presided, afforded an illustration of the concern that moves the workmen of the city to provide themselves with vegetables for the coming winter. They regret the high, almost prohibitive price of potatoes, and there were expressions that did not minimize the Government's responsibility for the market conditions. But Mr. Hartley remarked and urged that potatoes should be planted in spite of a dollar or two extra cost. Most of the members present joined in the discussion which disclosed the fact that practically to a man are they preparing to help themselves against the threatened scarcity.

His Weight Over 200

Why Big Men Like Semi-ready Tailoring Clothes

When a man weighs about 200 pounds he does not order a suit of clothes from the single suit length in a tailor shop. There's not enough in a 3 1-3 yard length, without piecing and patching.

Semi-ready Special Orders are all made from 70-yard lengths; there is always enough yardage to make a suit for any man who measures 44 to 54 inches breast. Good suits can be made to measure in four days for a man measuring 48 inches chest, at $21 to $25. Frank L. Jeane has the sole exhibit of fashions for the new semi-ready suits.

Organization of Resources Making Promising Progress

At a meeting of the organization of Resources Association last night, encouraging reports were received from all the committees. Mr. B. F. Ackerman stated that he had seen the manufacturers who had promised to cooperate in every way possible, and would keep the places for those men who go out on the farms during the seeding season. The Peter Hamilton Company also offered plows, harrows and other implements for local work.

Col. Miller reported that the merchants were prepared to enable their employees assist in any practical scheme that was arranged.

Speaking for the banks, Mr. W. H. Dunsird stated that their employees who would participate in the production movement would be given three weeks' holidays this summer, instead of the customary two weeks. A list of the men who will co-operate is being drawn up.

Mr. F. D. Kerr stated that local committees were forming in Havelock, Norwood and Lakefield.

It is hoped that Saturday afternoon's meeting in the Council Chamber, at 2 o'clock, will draw a large attendance.

Albert Brown in "A Little Bit of Fluff"

"A Little Bit of Fluff" is a farce of the same type as "Pink Dominoes," "The Private Secretary," and "Charley's Aunt," and in London has exceeded those noted plays in popularity, though this seems incredible. Like them, it is just one long laugh from start to finish. The audience laughs all the time it is going on, laughs between the acts in discussing its situations, laughs on the way home, and at breakfast the next morning in thinking of it. It even makes those who have seen it laugh in their sleep.

Above all, it provides a new role for Albert Brown, of a type that he has never before presented in this country. Can the reader fancy this delightful comedian as an "uplifter". That is the kind of young man he has to play in this piece. His adventures when he is compelled to personate a friend of less rigid principles, and which even involve him in the necessity of donning women's clothes, constitute the richest series of situations that have emanated from the brain of a playright for many a year. It is from the pen of a clever young Englishman, Walter Ellis, and is produced by arrangement with Messrs. Herbert Jay and Anthony Ellis of the Criterion Theatre, London. The production is rich and tasteful and an exact replica of that which is nightly crowding that celebrated playhouse. The seat sale opened this morning.

LATIN AMERICA IS LINING UP WITH U.S.

WASHINGTON, April 19.— Prompt indorsements from South America of the action of the United States in taking up Germany's challenge to war are the source of great gratification to officials of the administration. There remained to-day but three countries—Ecuador, Venezuela and Colombia — which had not defined their positions, and it was believed that before the end of the week they, too, would respond.

With the exception of Costa Rica, none of the Central American group had declared its attitude, but no concern over where their sympathy will be placed has been felt at the State Department.

So far Cuba is the only war spot in Latin America, but the positions assumed by Panama and Costa Rica place them practically in the list of warring nations, and almost no doubt remains that Brazil will be at war within a few days. The only governments that have not been frank in their indorsement of the step taken by the United States are Chile and Peru, the former confining herself to a formal declaration of neutrality and the latter to "deploring" the fact that the United States had been unable to adjust her difficulty with Germany without recourse to war.

Following is the way the other Latin American nations whose positions are defined were lined up to-day.

Cuba—Declared war against Germany.

Panama—Decalred her readiness to assist in any way possible in the protection of the Panama Canal.

Costa Rica—Offered her ports and other territorial waters to the United States for war needs of the American Navy.

Brazil— Relations broken with Germany.

Bolivia—Relations broken with Germany.

Uruguay—Indorsed the action of the United States and characterized Germany's submarine warfare as an "insult to humanity."

Paraguay — Expressed sympathy with the Government of the United States, "forced into war to rehabilitate the rights of neutrals."

Argentina— Indorsed the action of the United States as just and right.

Mexico—Neutral.

State Department officials believe it possible that the Government of Ecuador may consider itself bound to adopt a somewhat equivocal attitude because of a suggestion made several weeks ago that a conference of neutrals be held at Montevideo to study means for bringing the war to an end.

Guatemala's proclamation of martial law was still regarded here as a precautionary step taken by President Estrada Cabrera, preliminary to a break with Germany. It was believed that Honduras, Salvador and Nicaragua, the remaining uncommitted nations of Central America, were awaiting action by Guatemala and that they would announce their positions immediately after Guatemala had spoken.

The United States has looked to Latin America for moral support more than for material assistance, but there has been no disposition to underate the very material assistance that might be rendered if it became necessary. The total peace strength of Latin America's armies is only 334,000 men, but the potential power is several times that and reports from the South American republics have indicated that no time will be lost in raising fighting forces to their full war

Final Arrangements For The Motor Show On April 26-28th

The Motor Show committee met last night in the Toronto Savings and Loan office and completed practically the final arrangements for the show, which will be held on April 26, 27 and 28 in the armouries, secured through Col. Walker of the 57th Regiment, C. D.F. All exhibits must be in place by one o'clock, Thursday afternoon. The doors will open to the public at two o'clock and in the evening there will be a formal opening at eight o'clock, preceded by the motor parade with bands, leaving the market square at 7.30 o'clock. The route of the parade will be announced later.

Tickets for the show are now on sale by the ladies of the Red Cross Society. The admission will be 25c. and a strip of five tickets is offered at one dollar. Children ten cents.

Every day of the show there will be drawings for valuable accessories that have been recently offered, including the following: Tires donated by the Dominion Tire Co., of Bowmanville and the Goodyear Tire Co. of Kitchener, a lap-rug by Mr. T. F. Matthews, cigar-lighter by Mrs. E. G. Patterson, tire chains by the Dominion Chain Co. of Niagara Falls, and the McKinnon Chain Co. of St. Catharines.

The list of exhibitors up to the present is as follows: Roy Studio, Alexander & Miller, J. S. Coon, Racine Bros., J. Millen & Son, Toronto, accessories, Gray & Thorpe, J. J. Turner & Sons Limited, C. R. Banks, Overlands and bicycles; A. Brown & Co., McLaughlin; Cranfield Bros, Gray, Dort and Chalmers; Dr. Pulkinghorn, Grant Six; Manning Garage, Chevrolet and Dodge; Robert Sturgeon, Briscoe; Duffus Garage, Fords; G. A. Gillespie, Maxwell and Studebakers; Warne Drug Co., accessories.

Methodist Church Ministers Transfer

The regular monthly meeting of the Transfer Committee of the Methodist Church met at the call of the General Superintendent, Rev. S. D. Chown, in the Board Room, Wesley Building, Toronto, Tuesday and Wednesday at 10 a.m., the General Superintendent presiding. Rev. M. E. Sexsmith, B.A., LL.D., of Picton was elected Secretary.

Among those transferred from one Conference to another was the Rev. C. E. Cragg, former pastor of Mark Street Church. Rev. Mr. Cragg was transferred from the Bay of Quinte Conference to Alberta.

Cakes and Pastries Barred In Britain

Food Controller's Order will Hit the Tea Shops Hard.

LONDON, April 19.—The Food Controller, Lord Devonport, has issued an order, effective Tuesday next, prohibiting thereafter the sale of light pastries, muffins, crumpets, or tea cakes. Cakes, buns, scones, and biscuits can only be sold if they conform to the drastic restrictions respecting the amount of wheaten flour and sugar used. Tea shops, which are so popular in London and elsewhere in England, will suffer severely by the new order.

The War Office has ordered a return made by May 1 of all horses, mules, cattle, sheep, pigs and agricultural implements in Great Britain.

PUBLIC OPINION

HOW ADVERTISEMENTS PAY.

"No advertiser expects every reader, or even a tenth of the readers, to answer directly the ad," says Farm and Fireside, the national farm paper published in Springfield, Ohio. "He is satisfied if the reader simply gives his advertising message consideration and remembers part of it so that in the future when the reader wants the particular article advertised he will know what brand to ask for, and where to get it. In other words, the chief thing the advertiser hopes to get is good-will, because business experience shows that people eventually patronize concerns for which they have a friendly feeling.

"If the advertisement is in a paper toward which he feels kindly, the advertisements in it are introduced to him, you might say, by a friend. That is about all there is to the whole matter. The editors try to deserve your friendship by helping you in your business and by entertaining you. The advertisers buy your necessities and luxuries from concerns you like or which are well recommended to you."

MR. LLOYD-GEORGE'S "LAZINESS."

(The New Europe, London.)

Mr. Lloyd-George's critics say of him that he is the 'laziest" Minister on record, and that he cannot be got to work. This merely implies that he refuses to wear away his strength by performing punctiliously all the routine duties of a departmental chief: that red tape has no attractions for him, and that despatch boxes do not strike awe into his soul. He has been known to "idle away" hours on important days in thinking out the fundamentals of a given problem, and in discussing them with unofficial acquaintances, instead of "working" in his department. Thanks to his "laziness," he is almost the only minister who has solved the problem of being at once a member of the Government and in independent mind. His long years of office have scarcely dulled the freshness of his outlook, and, despite the keen anxiety which he has felt about the progress of the war, he is probably less jaded than many unofficial members of Parliament. All this should tend towards vigour and comprehension, clearness of decision and rapidity of action.

A FRUITFUL DISCUSSION.

(Buffalo Commercial.)

Out in Kansas City a knotty question is to be decided by a Missouri judge. In the divorce case of Karr vs. Karr, Mrs Karr claims the canned and preserved fruit because she did the work of preserving, but Mr. Karr claims he bought and paid for the fruit and it belongs to him. Lawyers on each side say they have searched and are unable to find any decision in the 48 state supreme courts or the United States courts that bears directly on this question. That is why Missourians are especially interested in the case and are speculating about the outcome.

THE QUESTION.

(New York Sun.)

Each time he tightens his belt, each time he feels the gnawing at his vitals the German citizen must be asking himself: "For what am I suffering so? Is it for victory? Or what avail is a victory if we perish awaiting for it? Can we not make peace satisfactorily with all our conquests? If we make reasonable peace with all the lands we hold now, what will enable us to make it?" Anticipating the question the German government replies: "Starving England will solve everything!" But if the effort to starve England fails? What answer, then, O Hohenzollern?

PROFITS OF THE "MOVIES."

(Boston News Bureau.)

It is estimated that the "Birth of a Nation," which cost about $150,000, is now paying its producers $2,000 nightly and playing to a greater capacity than ever.

"The Million Dollar Mystery" cost about $93,000. In seven months the company producing this film paid a dividend of $56.50 on its preferred stock and the same amount on the common given as a bonus—a total of $113 on each $100 invested.

"The traffic in souls" cost about $6,500. It earned close to $1,000,000.

"The Perils of Pauline" and other serials of a like character have earned nearly $2,000,000 for their producers.

THE PAIGE COMPOSITOR.

(San Francisco Journal of Commerce)

Before the linotype, invented by Ottmar Mergenthaler, came into use, there was a marvellous mechanism known as the Paige compositor in vogue. It was a remarkable piece of machinery, but somehow or other it did not do the work. It was the invention of James W. Paige, who promoted a $2,000,000 business to turn out the machines. Mark Twain sunk some of his savings in the firm. The Paige compositor needed just "a little improvement here and there." But the little improvement never came. Instead came the linotype. To-day Paige is a pauper in the poorhouse. He is old and talks aloud to himself about this great invention which some day, when perfected, will revolutionise the art reprodnctive. The attendants look upon him indulgently, because he is harmless and once he was great and wealthy. And this little story is set on the linotype.

Sultan Sends The Kaiser A Sword

As a Sign of Royal Comradeship in Arms, Says the Sultan.

AMSTERDAM, April 19.—(Via London)—Prince Zia-En-Din, heir apparent to the Turkish throne, arrived on Sunday at German main headquarters and handed Emperor William a sword of honour from the Sultan "as a sign of the royal comradeship in arms of the allied armies and in recognition of the deeds of the German army," says a Berlin telegram of yesterday's date.

"Emperor William in accepting the sword," adds the message, "expressed confidence that the common fight would be crowned by final victory. The Prince later left for the western front."

M. Protopopoff, ex-minister of the interior, surrendered voluntarily to the executive committee.

M. Kurloff, formerly assistant home secretary, arrested.

General Sukhomlinoff, ex-minister of war, whose name is associated with Russia's military reverses, arrested. With his own hands he cut off his epaulets.

M. Sturmer, ex-premier, reported to have "died of fright" after his arrest.

THE WORK OF THE BRITISH NAVY SUBJECT OF SPLENDID ADDRESS

A fair sized audience heard Dr. Anderson speak last night on Great Britain and the Navy in the Collegiate Hall. Mayor Duffus who was in the chair explained that after the long period of inclement weather it was hard to get a large attendance at a lecture.

Dr. Anderson said that the object of his lecture was to interest the public in the homes, which are being constructed for the sailors. All the money raised is spent in Canada by the National Council for the spiritual and moral uplift of the Canadian navy.

NAVY IN THE WORLD'S WAR

The British navy is the obstacle, which stands between Hun domination and civilisation. The whole world looks to it for protection. To-day it is not a question of how can the British navy stand the war, but how can, and when, will the German navy stand the British navy. It is due to Churchill that the fleet was ready at the crucial moment. When in the Cabinet, Lloyd George voted that the navy should be spread about the seas, as its concentration seemed to be a menace to an apparently friendly nation, Churchill carried the day and the navy went to the North Sea. What would the British action have been to-day had it not done so? The German navy would have sunk it piecemeal. This was the third time to Dr. Anderson's mind that God has used the navy for the preservation of civilisation.

THE BLOCKADE.

Dr. Anderson pointed out the way the navy was assisting in the war by running a blockade to German merchandise, coming in and going out. It has been called a cruel policy to starve the nation, but far better is it to be starved than shot into submission. It won't hurt any one to eat a little less.

SMALL SHIPS AND THE WAR

Since the battle of Jutland the value of small ships has been proved so conclusively, Britain has devoted practically all her activities to the building of them. These are used as safeguards to the great dreadnoughts.

CANADA THE OBJECT.

Should Germany have been successful her object would not have been the little windward islands, but Canada, the land of plenty. Why? Because Canada has everything worth fighting for. Canada rests easily at night, but who is preserving the Dominion? The little men in the ships.

SAILORS LIFE.

Sweating by day and night in the coal bunkers, fearlessly and cheerfully dashing into battle with the most merciless of foes—foes who let hundreds sink without an effort to save them. These are our safeguards and these are the men who are being paid 40c a day; sleeping in hammocks year in and year out, guarding us, yet when a request of $5 is made for them it too often receives a refusal.

NAVY AND TRANSPORTS

In every one of the seven seas the navy is doing something. Not one life has been lost in the transports from Canada to England. Three million men have been taken from Dover to Calais without a single life being lost. Eight million troops have been taken to different parts of the world with the same safety. Six hundred thousand wounded have been conveyed to England with few losses—these few because England was confident that after two thousand years of civilisation Germany would never revert to such devilry as firing on a hospital ship. Our navy has been an important factor in assisting Russian operations in the East.

VIEWS OF NAVY.

Dr. Anderson concluded his address by showing some splendid pictures of the navy and the pathetic results of action in the great war and the many sides of our sailor life. He also presented a cross made from the copper taken from Nelson's flagship, the Victory.

NOTE OUR NEW ADDRESS:

THIS WILL MAKE MILLIONS HAPPY

Any Corn will dry up and lift out, says a Cincinnati Authority.

Let folks step on your feet hereafter; wear shoes a size smaller if you like, for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you, according to this authority.

He says that a few drops of a drug called freezone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out without pain.

This drug is sticky but dries at once and is said to simply shrivel up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue.

It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce obtained at any drug store will cost very little, but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Cut this out, especially if you are a woman reader who wears high heels.

Little Marie stood in the doorway, one hand on the doorknob. For a moment she gazed at her mother, who was preparing to go out.

"Mother," she said, "do you know what I am going to give you for your birthday when it comes?"

"No, dear," answered the mother. "Please tell me."

"A nice hairpin tray with gold flowers on it all around," said the little girl.

"But, my dear," exclaimed the mother. "I have a nice one like that already."

"No you haven't, mother," Marie answered. "I have just dropped it on the floor."—New York Times.

WHY IS THE CAT?

Not long ago a London naturalist made a serious plea for the elimination of the cat in the interests of bird life. While such a suggestion may arouse the anger of some people, and the humour of others, the fact remains that the innocent looking and purring pussy is under indictment. He is charged with being a murderer and a thief; in both general and specific terms, a grave menace to public welfare.

Tabby's activities have been tabulated, summarized, divided into assets and liabilities and carried into the profit and loss column. All the known and unknown rules of mathematics, high, higher and highest, have been applied to them, and the result has always been a minus quantity. Every time the truth-seekers asked themselves, "Why is a cat?" the result of the deliberations was the question, "Why?"

The aldermen of one Canadian city suggested that cats be taxed, which is in line with the proposal of the American Game Protective Association. It is in the United States that the science of catextinction has received the closest attention. It is estimated that there are at least 25,000,000 cats in that country and that they cost nearly a billion and a quarter dollars a year. In the same proportion to population Canada would have 1,750,000 cats. The enormous expense figured against them is not in milk, soft cushions and baby-blue ribbon, but because of damage done to the crops by insects which would not exist if cats did not kill the insect-eating birds.

There we have the murder indictment against Tom and Tabby. It is figured that in Massachusetts they destroy 2,600,000 birds annually; in New York, 3,500,000, and in Illinois 2,500,000; and they are quite as murderous in other states. Now it is said that one potato bug will increase to fifty or sixty millions in a season. So if the elimination of the cat saves one hundred million birds in a year, and each bird eats one potato bug at the beginning of the season, there will be five thousand million million fewer potato bugs in the country. So far as the house fly, the Hessian fly, and the vegetable louse are concerned, the effect on them would be measured by the cubic mile, or thereabouts.

And the question remains, "Why is a cat?"

FARM LABOUR CORPS URGED.

Travelling Organization Proposed by Mr. Lane.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Creation of a travelling corps of farm labour to work on irrigated lands of the country is the novel proposal of Secretary of the Interior Lane to further the nation-wide campaign to increase food production during the war. The plan was outlined to-day in a communication to Chairman Taylor, of the House Irrigation Committee, in which the Secretary urges prompt action of the pending bill designed to stimulate food production on private and public lands within irrigation projects. This legislation he says, is a necessary perquisite to his plan.

Baron Stackelberg, accused of firing from his window at the soldiers, summarily executed on the quay-side at Petrograd.

Pte. Delong's Death Mourned At Bethany

Bethany Items of Interest—Dam Broke Away—Personals

BETHANY, April 19.—A gloom was cast over our village last week, when the word was received that Pte. C. Delong was badly wounded and later that he had died. This is the first of our boys who have paid the price, giving his life for his King and country. Pte. Delong joined here with the 136th, going over to England last fall. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife and one son, one brother and three sisters. There will be a memorial service held next Sunday evening in the Methodist church at 7 o'clock. The Orangemen of 1022, (which lodge the deceased was a member) met at the hall at six o'clock and marched to the church. The Rev. H. Stainton conducted the services.

Dam Broke.

The dam of the mill pond belonging to Mr. M. Staples broke away early on Sunday morning, making a rush of water. Mr. Staples spent considerable money in repairing the flume. The cause of the breaking of the dam is not known.

The school opened again on Monday after the Easter holidays.

Miss May McGrath, of Toronto, spent a few days with her mother a week ago.

The Rev. Mr. Balfour, of Janetville, conducted service on the Bethany circuit on Sunday last. His discourse was much appreciated by those who heard him.

Mrs. L. Hartley, and son Murray of Peterborough, spent a few days in the village last week looking up old friends.

BRITISH STILL GAIN.

The British War Office reports that the forces of Field Marshal Haig have gained additional ground along the River Scarpe to the east of Fampoux, and also captured the village of Villers Gaislain, north of St. Quentin. To the north, in the region of Loos, a system of German front line trenches also was taken.

BRITISH HAVE CAPTURED THIRD OF FOE'S GUNS.

LONDON, April 19.—The London Times' correspondent at the British front writes:

"The official communique informed you that the number of guns we captured now amounts to 230. I understand that at the beginning of the battle the enemy had out 600 guns on the front attacked. We have taken, therefore, considerably over one-third of his artillery. Of course, a much larger part of it was farther back than the positions to which we penetrated. In the country overrun the number of guns he got away was very small.

OMEMEE RESIDENT ASSAULTED WITH CLUB

LINDSAY, April 19.—Tuesday evening about 9.30 o'clock Chief Short received a message from Omemee, asking him to arrest one Wallace McQuade, of Toronto, but formerly of that village, who, it was thought, had taken the G.T.R. for Lindsay. The man is charged with seriously assaulting Bert McQuade, of Omemee, on Tuesday. It appears that the accused visited the latter's home during his absence, and on his return attacked him with a club, inflicting serious injuries.

Yesterday Chief Short and High County Constable Conquergood met the 9:15 G.T.R. train and questioned the conductor regarding the accused, who has evidently given Lindsay a wide berth.

Later in the day Constable Conquergood left for Omemee armed with a warrant for the arrest of the accused.

Evangelist Harper Spoke on the Need of Mankind and God's Remedy

Last evening, in Gospel Hall, corner of George and Brock street, an interested audience listened to Evangelist Harold M. Harper give a graphic word picture of the need of mankind and God's remedy to meet that need. Before the sermon the usual bright song service was enjoyed, after which Rev. Mr. Connor led in prayer.

Taking his text from Luke X., 30-35, and for his subject "On the Jericho Road," the speaker showed that this exquisite word picture from the lips of Jesus Christ accurately portrayed His ways of dealing with men and women. The "sinner's state" was first of all described from verse 30. There we read of a man who went down from Jerusalem to Jericho and, falling among thieves, they wounded and stripped him of what he had, leaving him half dead. The speaker showed how mankind had left the place of blessing and was continually going farther away from God. That at the present time they were sinners both by nature and practice and, spiritually speaking, were dead. The "sinner's Saviour" was then described from verses 31 to 35, where both priest and Levite passed by on the other side. These, said the speaker, might be likened to the Church and her ordinances which, while good in their place, were unable in themselves to bring the soul to God. But the Samaritan came to where the man was in his deep need. This was shown to be a picture of Christ coming to this earth, and dying on the cross for man's salvation. Verse 34 showed the "sinner's salvation"—the poor fellow's wounds were bound up and the suffering alleviated by the application of the oil and wine—oil typifying the Holy Spirit, and wine the joy that floods the soul of every believing sinner. Here the speaker said that the Christian of all men had a right to be happy. Then the Samaritan put the man on his own beast and from this the Christian's position in heavenly places was portrayed. Finally "the saved sinner's satisfaction" was shown from verse 34-35, which was the care of the Deliverer for the one delivered and a promise of His soon coming. The exhortation was given for all unsaved ones to trust Christ as Saviour.

People from various parts of Peterborough are enjoying the ministry of this young evangelist. He will speak to-night at 8 p.m., the subject being "The Message of the Evangel." You are invited to attend these meetings.

SAVING THE WASTAGE

Heaton Park Hospital, at Manchester, England, is now devoted to treating disabled and convalescent soldiers. One of the novel methods of treating cases of rheumatism, debility following dysentery or typhoid heart disease, shell shock, painful and contracted scars and similar ailments is a whirlpool bath. It consists of a tank that contains four feet of water and that is large enough to hold twelve men. Halfway down are seats that allow the bathers to be immersed up to their necks. The temperature of the water is kept about ninety-three degrees—just below that of the body. The men stay in the bath for hour at a time. The room is dimly lighted, and there is a general atmosphere of quiet. From the bath the men pass to rest rooms, where they remain in bed for an hour or more. They are excused from physical training for a time, and their lives are made as cheerful as possible. Disordered action of the heart, caused usually by shell shock, is the fundamental trouble in nearly all the cases. The results of the treatment have been most favorable Ninety per cent of the men become fit for physical training, and a large number return to their units, fit for active service.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

LONDON, Eng., April 19.—More Allied hospital ships have been sunk by German submarines, Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law announced to-day in the House of Commons. Details will be given later.

BERLIN, April 19.—The official statement declares there are not, and never have been, any German war submarines in the neighbourhood of the North American coasts.

LONDON, April 19.—As a result of recent Allied Victories and heavy German losses, the newspapers predict a speedy and victorious end of the war. The general sentiment is very optimistic to-day.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 19.—It is considered probable here that the Canadians Cabinet Ministers may take part from time to time in the conference which the Allied War Committee will hold with the United States authorities.

It is further anticipated that Rt. Hon. A. J. Balfour, the chief British representative, and Marshal Joffre, chief French representative, will visit Ottawa while on this continent.

Want To Be On New Highway

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, April 19.—A deputation of four hundred repreesntatives of fifty or more cities, towns, and villages, townships and counties having aspirations to be on the new grand provincial highway, from Montreal to Detroit, waited on Premier Hearst, Hon. Finlay McDiarmid and other members of the Government this afternoon, at 2.30, to place before the Ministers their claims for recognition. Some of the speakers from the more northern cities advised two highways, one north and south.

After hearing the speakers Sir William Hearst admitted that many Ontario cities had undoubted claims for a position on the highway, but it must be remembered that the plans for the proposition as yet are purely tentative. When constructed the highway must take the route best fitted for the general advantage of the Province as a whole. It is expected, however, that the Province will make provision for excellent connecting roads from highways to such large cities whose location cannot give them places on the highway itself.

First Sitting Will Be Brief

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 19.—The first sitting of the resumed parliamentary session this afternoon, promises to be brief unless it is agreed to go into Committee of Supply. It is probable that a resolution of sympathy with the Duke of Connaught in the loss of the Duchess of Connaught, will be passed, as well as one welcoming the entry of the United States as an ally in the great war.

THE CABBAGE PATCH

To grow or not to grow cabbage is a question that the average gardener does not stop to consider. He follows the custom of his neighbours and devotes a portion of his space to early Wakefield with possibly a few Red Dutch for the housewife to pickle. Strictly speaking, however, cabbage are more of a field than a garden crop. They require a good deal of space, and are rank feeders, so that it may in many cases be as economical to buy them on the market at five cents a head. Personal inclination must decide on this matter.

Any soil that is fairly rich will produce cabbages, and a cold wet season suits them admirably. Away up in the Yukon district some of the finest specimens are grown. In the warmer parts of Canada the best results are obtained by having an early crop and a late crop, thus avoiding as far as possible the heat of the midsummer.

Like lettuce and radishes, we want cabbage to be succulent and tender. To ensure this quality they must be grown rapidly with an abundant supply of moisture for the roots. For early cabbage it is advisable to have a soil that will warm up soon after the snow goes away. A sandy loam that is retentive of moisture, yet well drained meets the requirements nicely.

It is almost impossible to manure too heavily for cabbage provided it is well rotted and well worked into the soil. These are market gardeners who apply as much as seventy-five tons to the acre. A desirable crop to have on the ground the previous year is clover. This ploughed under in the fall with a little manure will make an excellent preparation.

If one has heavy muck soil, not so much manure is required, and the conditions will be found ideal for growing the later varieties. It is even possible to repeat cabbage year after year unless club root or other disease appears.

Though there are many varieties, few need to be mentioned here. The most popular for early maturity is the early Jersey Wakefield, introduced many years ago, and grown under a number of names. It is necessary to get a good strain, as poorly selected stock will give few heads. The true Wakefield has a pointed head, and is solid for an early variety. A variety that has done well at the Experimental Farm, Ottawa and has the advantage of earliness, is the Paris Market Very Early. The Copenhagen Market is a new sort, round-headed, and about the same season as the Early Wakefield.

Among late sorts the Danish Ballhead, a solid-headed variety, has taken the lead over the others in recent years. Before it became so popular the numerous strains of Late Flat Dutch were most generally grown, but these are now considered best for sauerkraut or for stock food. The Houser is a reliable header and has been resistant to black rot.

For the earliest transplanting it is necessary to have the plants started in hotbeds or greenhouse early in March, then hardened off. They will grow in comparatively cool weather and even a dip to the freezing point will not injure properly hardened plants.

Whether started in hotbeds or in boxes in the kitchens window the transition to the open ground must be gradual and it is important to have a good proportion of clay in the soil so that when the plants are moved a certain amount will stick to the roots.

In growing late cabbage quite a different plan is followed. The seed is usually sown thinly in rows about one foot apart during the latter part of May and after the plants are well up they are thinned to about quarter of an inch apart. They are transplanted from the seed rows direct to the field. Another plan is to mark off the field in squares and drop a few seeds at the intersecting points. Later these are thinned to one plant.

NO FARMERS AS JURORS.

Courts Will Not Interfere With Production.

TORONTO, April 18.—The courts of Ontario will not interfere with production by taking farmers away from their work to act as jurors. Assurance to this effect is contained in a letter written by Chief Justice Sir William Meredith to Dr. Abbott, secretary of organization for the resources committee. The chief justice states that with the exception of the Assizes now being held in Toronto and another at L'Original, in Prescott County, there will be no further sittings of the Supreme Court until September 15. All the farmers summoned for the Toronto jury have been relieved from attending by Mr. Justice Middleton, and it is probable that none will be required at L'Original.

As to the autumn courts no schedule has as yet been arranged, but Mr. Justice Middleton, who has the matter in hand, will endeavour, the chief justice says, to arrange the sittings so that no jury will be required before November.

Eight ounces of cold cooked veal, three ounces of bacon fried, two tablespoonfuls of cream, three ounces of grated roll, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, pepper and salt. Pass the meat and bacon twice through the mincing machine. Stir grated roll into cream, add egg, salt, pepper and parsley and, lastly, the meat, mixing all thoroughly. Form into balls the size of a nut, boil for five minutes in soup and serve hot.

France, March 23, 1917.

Dear Mrs. Corrigan,—It is my sad duty to inform you of the death of Pte. E. B. Corrigan, No. 218002 of the 44th Canadian Infantry. He passed away on March 22nd at No. 6 Canadian Casualty Clearing Station. It is some distance from the battalion, so that I did not see him while there. I have no doubt that Capt. (Rev.) Father McCann of No. 6 C.C.S. will write you giving any particulars. He ministered to him in his illness and buried him this afternoon in the Barlin Communal Cemetery, Row F, Grave No. 382. A little cross bearing his name, number, unit and date of death, marks the spot, which will be neatly and carefully kept.

May God give you strength to bear the sacrifice you have been called upon to make.

G. FARQUHAR, Captain,
44th Canadian Infantry.

March 23rd.

Dear Mrs. Corrigan—I regret to announce to you that your dear husband died in this hospital in the morning of the 22nd March about 10 o'clock. He was wounded in the left thigh and buttock and was quite conscious when I saw him about 8 a.m. He was able to make his confession and so I gave him absolution, annointed him with holy oils and also gave him the last blessing. He got much worse afterwards and passed away peacefully about 10 o'clock. I said mass for him this morning and buried him in the little graveyard near here this afternoon at 2.30 and now he is reaping the fruits of his arduous tasks out here. I am sure he is happy now, much happier than we are. He has done his duty like a noble son. He has sacrificed his life for his country and that sacrifice will not go unrewarded.

I will not forget him in my masses, dear Mrs. Corrigan and will also pray for you that our Divine Lord and His Blessed Mother will comfort you in this very heavy and sorrowful loss. May God bless you. Kindly accept my deepest sympathy in this your great sorrow and pray for me. I remain,

Yours sincerely,
Rev. Father Isadore McCann,
O.F.M., C.F. No. 6 C.C.S.

Mrs. Corrigan wishes to express her thanks to the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club for the flowers sent her.

Lieut. Harris of Gore's Landing, who was officially reported wounded, yesterday, is a son of Capt. Harris of the steamer Geneva. He went overseas with the Canadian Mounted Rifles.

OTTAWA, April 18.—The Canadians who have gone to the United States during the past few months through fear of enforced military service, which their own Government never proposed, may find themselves in an awkward predicament, it is unofficially suggested, in the event of the consummation of an arrangement now proposed between the British and United States Governments. Under that arrangement Great Britain would be able to enroll British subjects in the United States for service in her armies.

If that arrangement were made sufficiently sweeping it might amount practically to conscription and might prove embarrassing to those young men who fled from Canada to avoid conscription.

Alfred N. Brooks of 235 Princess street, was sworn in as a member of the 57th Regiment C.D.F., last night, the second recruit to pass the medical examination. There are half a dozen other applicants who have not yet been examined.

It should be understood that for the present joining the 57th does not mean giving up civilian occupations Until the unit goes to camp there will be drills only on Tuesday and Thursday nights and on Saturday afternoon, for which the recruits are paid 50c per drill.

This month the Peterborough Progressive Club have forwarded to Miss Plummer the Field Comforts Commissioner: 276 pairs socks, 24 hospital shirts, 16 round cushions, 648 handkerchiefs, 309 pillow covers, 52 many-tailed bandages, 1,160 mouth wipes, 8 pairs pyjamas, 9 slings, 447 linen squares, 17 gauze face wipes, 9 night shirts, 237 large face wipes, 24 bandages, 28 personal bags, 7 hot-water bags, a quantity of old linen.

OTTAWA, April 19.—The early resignation of Colonel Mewburn, the head of the Canadian Home Defence mobilisation scheme, is expected here. Mewburn, it is stated, is dissatisfied with the failure so far to secure any considerable number of recruits and he wants the application of the Militia Act immediately. He is also, it is said, opposed to the selection of Admand Lavergne as a home defence recruiter in Quebec.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 19.—The enlistments for the first two weeks of April, total 3,329. Since the beginning of the war 409,585 Canadians have enlisted for overseas service. For the past fortnight the Toronto district leads with 957 enlistments. The Ottawa-Kingston district holds second place with 666. London is fifth with 300.

Capt. Thomson, of the 247th announces that to-morrow is the last occasion on which board bills for members of the 247th will be paid.

Mrs. A. E. Dixon, 784 George street, received a telegram to-day, that her nephew, Lieut. Reginald Jolliffe, a Toronto University student, only son of her sister, Mrs. Rev. T. W. Jolliffe, of Toronto, was killed in action.

TO OBSERVE YPRES DAY.

Col. Roosevelt May Speak in Ottawa.

OTTAWA, April 18.—Sunday next the anniversary of the second battle of Ypres, which commenced on April 22, 1915, and in which so many gallant Canadians were killed. The event will be commemorated all over Canada by parades and the holding of church services and meetings. The Great War Veterans' Association will have charge of the celebration throughout the Dominion. The plans at Ottawa include a monster route march in the afternoon, followed by a mass-meeting on Parliament Hill. An effort is being made to bring Theodore Roosevelt here to address the meeting.

SATISFIED WITH THE JOB.

In the American Magazine a writer says:

'Running over the lives of the men I had known in business, I discovered this curious fact: Around thirty or thirty-five their careers began unmistakably to divide into two classes. Most of them had given promise of success; they had moved along about as I had until they had reached an income of four or five thousand dollars. There, half of them had stopped; the other half seemed to take a fresh grip on themselves and forge ahead even more rapidly. Why had the first group stopped?

"It wasn't lack of ability. So far as I could see, the men in the two groups didn't differ greatly in talents; nor was it lack of opportunity. It was nothing more or less than this—the first group had become satisfied; familiarity with their jobs had bred contentment down in contempt. They had settled down in suburbs, just as I had; they were happy with their children; their jobs were easy for them; they were at peace with the world; they had ceased to struggle, which means that they had ceased to grow."

BOWLING

The De Laval Office won three straight games from the factory last night on the water street alleys, Hill came across with a 530 score, and Fitzgerald had high single count of 221. Byers had high count for the factory with 468.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must in order to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The letter signed "F. T. B." in your issue of April 17th, surely does not express the sentiments of the farmers of this country on the serious subject of food production this year. I feel confident that our farmers are moved by higher ideals than the selfish spirit that runs throughout that letter. Listen to this noble utterance: "The farmers need not worry, for they eat at the first table anyway. And it looks as though the city nabobs' bread baskets will be the ones to suffer, which goes a long way to explain this latest outburst of patriotism." "F. T. B." did not realize the full significance of his own words, and I don't believe he meant them. For he must know that the "nabobs" would be the last to feel the effects of an extreme scarcity of food. German "nabobs" seem to have little dread of the bread and meat tickets. The term "nabob" applies to persons of wealth whom we have always with us, and whose means are a guarantee of their security. But if the farmer has no sympathy for the city's rich he must be touched by the poor and those city toilers who are struggling along on their earnings.

If "F. T. B." is under the impression that his limited efforts in production this year will lighten the "nabobs'" bread baskets, a reconsideration of the facts will present to him the real effects, and not those he grimly fancies. And if the farmer is not inspired by a charitable impulse toward the poor and the toilers who are always the first to feel every added pinch, let him remember the many dependents of the soldiers who are receiving to-day the same Government gratuity that was fixed in 1914 in spite of the unprecedented advance in the cost of food, clothing and other necessities.

If the farmer imagines himself besieging the "nabobs" he must see that his lessened production will fall first upon those three unprotected classes who may be regarded in the position of exposed citizens within the line of fire. "F. T. B." will surely not hold them responsible for the recruiting system which he complains has stripped the farms of experienced help. And if manufacturers have made profits the farmer surely has not been overlooked.

The fact appears to be that the farmers are called upon to make a greater effort than ever before, even a sacrifice. Citizens wish to help them if they can, and thereby help themselves, and they have no desire to send out inefficient, not to mention useless men. Their offer is made in good faith, and the responsibility remains with the farmer, the shallow argument of the Farmers' Advocate to the contrary, notwithstanding. The rural community life is essentially Christian, but the idea of the survival of the richest is absolutely unmoral, and "F. T. B." was not writing from his heart, anyway.

Sincerely Yours,
CITIZEN.

RUSSIA WANTS SHELLS RUSHED

Under New Terms Payments Will Be Made at Once.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The American Can Company has completed an arrangement with the Russian Government, whereby deliveries of shells under a $35,000,000 contract entered into more than a year ago can be continued to August 31 instead of April 30. A collateral measure under the new agreement provided that the can company will receive its pay for finished shell bodies as fast as completed, without waiting until the shells have been accepted by the Russian inspectors.

This Russian contract was not affected when the British and French Governments informed munition makers here a few months ago that shell making must be speeded and completed by March 31. The contract came to the can company through British channels, but Russia's needs are still far in excess of her ability to supply herself, and her several unfilled contracts are expected to be completed as rapidly as the shells can be turned out. The Bethlehem Steel Company is working on a Russian order also.

The first development under the new terms will be the release of about $5,000,000 which the can company has tied up in shell "cases." The Russian Government will shortly pay to the corporation this amount, and will afterward pay for the other parts of the shells as they are delivered by sub-contractors. The agreement was signed last Saturday. In quarters of authority it was said that the bulk of the can company's shell order would be completed by the end of the current month, but it was found necessary to get an extension of time for delivering the completed shells because all he parts probably would not be in hand by that time.

It is understood that similar agreements are being negotiated by the General Electric Company and the Worthington Pump and Machinery Company. The General Electric Company, it is said, has about $9,000,000 of its working capital centred in shell cases, and this will be liquidated by the Russian Munition Commission if a plan similar to that of the American Can Company's goes through.

The decision of Russia to pay cash for the shell parts as fast as they are prepared was considered significant in banking circles The impression was that the new Government was fully determined to press the war, and was taking steps to expedite shipments of munitions to its armies.

CARDIFF WAR LOAN MARK.

£150 for Every Man, Woman and Child in the City.

CARDIFF, Wales, April 4.—Subscriptions from Cardiff to the new War Loan amounted to more than £30,000,000, an average of £150 for every man, woman and child in the city. This remarkable contribution is an indication of the golden age which the war has brought to Cardiff. In no British city has such vast wealth been earned so easily and so quickly.

At the outbreak of the war, Cardiff had the largest export trade in the country. Freights began to increase. Ships doubled, trebled, quadrupled in value. Young business men, enterprising and daring, bought whole fleets on a speculative basis which would almost make a New York curb broker hesitate. They reaped the reward of their daring.

In one case a tramp steamer, so old that it was carried on a company's books at a nominal valuation of £1, was sold for £80,000, and resold the next day for an even £100,000. In another case, a steamer bought in the midst of a voyage for £100,000, realized £40,000 for its owner by the time it reached his dock, and was then promptly re-sold for another profit of £40,000.

Among the new millionaires of Cardiff are fourteen young men, who, before the war, were shipping clerks earning not more than $10 a week. One of them had less than a hundred dollars in the bank when he bought his first ship, a week after the war began, collecting the money for his initial payment by borrowing small amounts from a large number of friends and acquaintances.

Two young clerks persuaded the manager of their bank to lend them £10,000, with which they purchased thirty-day options which netted them £500,000 in a month.

It has not been the owners only who have profited. First-class dock labourers, especially trimmers, have earned as high as £20 a week. The miners, too, have earned big money, and the shopkeepers, especially the jewellers and the department stores, have never known such prosperous times.

The day when the poor man could make a huge speculative fortune in Cardiff now has passed, however. The Government restrictions on shipping have put a stop to the free and easy dealings of the first year of the war. Three-fourths of Cardiff's war-created wealth was piled up in the first year of the war. Nowadays a large proportion of its ships are under charter to the Government at a moderate rate, and no sales of ships may be made without Government permission. Taxes also eat heavily into profits. Between the excess profits tax, the income tax and the super-tax, nearly 77 per cent. of the net income of every big ship-owning firm is taken up by the Government, the auspices of the Toronto Garden

KULTUR'S CRIME.

(New York Sun.)

Comment is constantly made upon the indifference if not callousness with which people in general receive news of blood curdling horrors. Acts and deeds which less than three years ago caused a frenzy of grief and anger are accepted to-day as commonplace, everyday events.

This is one of the most awful of Germany's crimes, that she has deadened the sympathies, dulled the sensibilities, hardened the hearts and worn out the virtuous rage of mankind. The neutral spirit is in danger of a cynical lapse into acceptance of lust, cruelty, bestial egotism and brutal tyranny as inevitable conditions of life.

Do we not need a flame of war to cleanse us of the moral foulness with which kultur has encrusted our souls?

The War Veterans fought for you. What are you going to do for them on Saturday?

A rare novelty among screen offerings is the Lasky company's presentation of the celebrated Japanese actor, Sessue Hayakawa, and the popular American screen favorite, Myrtle Stedman, in the virile and unusual photoplay, "The Soul of Kura-San."

To discriminating followers of the silent drama Sessue Hayakawa has brought a unique and powerful screen art.

In such screen successes as the "Cheat," "Alien Souls" and "The Honorable Friend" he has demonstrated a tremendous dramatic talent. Myrtle Stedman has herself starred in many pleasing and popular photoplays. The combination of these two artists of such different types in a thrilling Japanese-American drama must be considered a distinctive screen event.

WEDDING BELLS

ARMSTRONG—SMITH.

The wedding took place at Trinity Manse yesterday of John J. Armstrong to Miss Maria Smith, both of Cavan township. The young couple who were unattended will reside in Cavan. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Wilson.

BOYD—WILSON.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, April 11th, at five o'clock p.m. at Springbrook Farm, the home of Mr. Ed. Wilson, of Ida, Ont., when Mary Irene, the youngest daughter of the late Mr. George Hunter Wilson, of Cavan, was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas James Boyd, a son of the late Mr. Andrew Boyd, also of Cavan. The Rev. Canon Allen, of Millbrook, officiated.

The bride beautifully attired in a white crepe de chene dress, with Georgette crepe trimmings and carrying a bouquet of white carnations, entered the drawing room leaning upon the arm of her brother, to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Mabel Boyd, of Omemee, a niece of the bride. The only attendant was little Gwendoline Stinson, of Peterborough, a cousin of the groom, who made a pretty flower girl, carrying a basket of sweet peas and orchid blossoms and wearing a white mull dress, with lace and insertion trimmings.

After the signing of the register, which was witnessed by Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Guthrie, Peterborough, cousins of the groom, the guests adjourned to the dining room and partook of a most dainty dinner. The presents were numerous and costly, among them being the groom's gift to the bride, a solid gold necklet and cheque, also small cheque to the little flower girl.

The guests from a distance were: Mrs. S. Stinson, Peterborough, cousin of the groom, and Mr. Boyd and daughter, Miss Mabel, of Omemee, brother-in-law and niece of the bride.

Upon the return of the happy couple from points west they will be at home to their many friends at Grandview Farm, lot eight, concession twelve, Cavan, the home of the groom after May the fifteenth.

FORSTLE—McGILLEN.

A very pretty wedding took place in Campbellford on April 18th, 1917, by the Rev. Father Whibbs, when Miss Clara McGillen was united in marriage to Mr. Arnold Forstle. The bride was assisted by her niece, Miss Margaret Butler of Peterborough. The groom was assisted by his brother, Tobias. The happy couple left on the afternoon train for Toronto and on their return will reside in Marmora.

CLANCY—FITZGERALD.

St. Joseph's Church, Douro, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Tuesday morning, when Miss Annie Fitzgerald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Fitzgerald, of Douro, was united in marriage to Mr. Edward Clancy, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Clancy of Hastings. Nuptial Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father McGuire of Douro, who also performed the ceremony, in the presence of a number of friends and relatives of the contracting parties. The wedding march was played by Miss Mamie Allen, and the choir rendered music during the ceremony. The bride was becomingly attired in a suit of navy blue and white crepe hat and was attended by her sister, Miss Margaret Fitzgerald. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Robert Clancy of Peterborough.

After the ceremony the happy couple motored to the home of the bride's parents, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served and an enjoyable afternoon spent.

Mr. and Mrs. Clancy will reside in Hastings.

CONNORS—KEARNS.

A pretty wedindg was celebrated in St. Mary's church on Tuesday morning by the Rev. Father Power, when Irene Kearns, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Kearns, of Crandell street, was united in marriage with Mr. Frank Connors, formerly of Lindsay, but now a resident of Peterborough.

The happy young couple were assisted by Mr. Albert Kearns, brother of the bride, who supported the groom, and Miss Celia St. Thomas, who acted as bridesmaid. Both of the young ladies looked most charming and were attractively attired in tailor-made navy blue suits with white hats.

After the celebrating of the nuptial mass Mr. and Mrs. Kearns autoed to the home of the bride's parents, where a grand wedding breakfast was partaken of by the young couple and all the immediate friends of the contracting parties. The presents to the bride were numerous and costly.

They left on the 11 o'clock a.m. train for Peterborough, where in future they will reside.

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES BEST.

Peterborough lost one of its oldest and most highly respected residents this morning, when Anna Wilson, widow of the late James Best, died, the result of an accident sustained last week when she slipped and broke her hip.

Mrs. Best was born in London, England, 88 years ago and has resided in Peterborough for about 70 years. Since her marriage 50 years ago, she has lived continuously in the home she died in, 518 Smith street. She was a faithful member of the Bethany Tabernacle.

One daughter, Miss Susie Best, two sisters, Mrs. Harper, Lakefield, and Mrs. Stephenson, Woodstock, two brothers, Joseph Wilson, Listowel, and T. J. Wilson, Crescent Springs, Kentucky, survive. Mr. Best predeceased her 23 years ago.

The funeral, which will be private, will take place on Saturday at 2.30. A short service conducted by Rev. Mr. Doner, will be held at the house before leaving for the Little Lake cemetery.

Please omit flowers.

What Is a Rummage Sale?

This question was asked by a stranger who has not been long resident in the city. On enquiry, it has been learned that a "Rummage Sale" consists of a collection of cast-off garments of women's and men's wear, that may have either become unfashionable or hung on the hooks long enough to be of no further use in the wardrobe. These are collected together and sold for what they will bring on behalf of some laudable object that may be popular. The industrious ladies of the Fraser Mission Band of St. Paul's Church have netted an extensive contribution of these rummage goods, and will offer them for sale on Friday and Saturday, April 20th and 21st, at 166 Simcoe street. Proceeds on behalf of missions.

Canada's Help With Munitions

OTTAWA, April 19.—Mr. J. W. Flavelle, chairman of the Imperial Munitions Board in Canada, has furnished the Minister of Finance with a statement showing the extent of the business in munitions which has been built up in this country with the financial assistance of the Dominion Government. The figures are very striking as evidencing both the industrial power of Canada and the extent to which the present favorable financial and commercial conditions have been created by this gigantic business. The total value of orders received by the Board is $850,000,000, which is equal to the entire international trade of Canada, imports and exports of 1912. The value of munitions shipped to April 30th was $470,000,000, the total disbursements to April 30th being $543,000,000. The number of employees is divided as follows: Headquarters staff 800; Inspection 4,000. Workers, direct and indirect 250,000 to 300,000.

How Government has Helped.

Six hundred and thirty factories, chemical and loading plants are in operation in carrying out the orders of the Board. The products covered by these orders include shells, an their component parts, which represent an immense tonnage of steel, brass, copper, lead, etc. They include propellants and fuses, also ships, locomotives and cars. An idea of the financial magnitude of the business is obtained from the fact that the cash disbursements for March were $41,000,000, and will be for April $43,000,000. Towards the financing of this immense business which means so much to the Empire from the standpoint of the successful prosecution of the war, and to our troops at the front as well as to the prosperity of Canada, the Dominion Government has contributed $200,000,000 as a loan to the Imperial Treasury and arranged with the Canadian banks for advances aggregating $100,000,000.

Turned to Canada First.

Of the co-operation of the Finance Department in providing these huge sums, Mr. Flavelle says: "The advances made were not only of great value in themselves in assisting the Treasury to meet the ever-present problem of exchange, but they gave evidence of so earnest a desire on the part of the Government and people of Canada to cooperate and assist in carrying the burden of war, that to an increasing extent those who had the control of the placing of this business turned to Canada first, because they desired to give as much business to us as possible, and, second, because they knew they would receive immediate and tangible assistance in paying for the products ordered. Before orders were placed by the Ministry of Munitions the Treasury's approval of the transaction has to be secured. You can understand, therefore, what a powerful ally we had in securing the business in the knowledge which the Treasury possessed that it would secure sustained support from the Government of Canada in rendering assistance in providing funds to meet these added obligations."

A LEGAL RECEIPT

Down in a south-east Kansas town lives a rather simple-minded youth by the name of Bill Beasley, whose facility in contracting small debts at the local stores is only equalled by his success in evading their payment. One day recently, however, Bill made the mistake of showing some money before one of his creditors, and after the hard-fought argument which followed, the money was handed over to the storekeeper.

"Now," said Bill, sadly, "we're square and I want a receipt. Make it legal, so you won't be after me again."

And here is the receipt which Bill proudly exhibited to his friends:

"To whom it may concern, greeting: All men know by these presents, habeas corpus and nux vomica, that Bill Beasley Don't owe this firm nothing and ain't going to.

"John Hobby."

Flour Is Up Another Notch

Yesterday's Wheat Prices Higher —The Cattle Market

Flour was given another 40c. boost in its upward flight yesterday. A Toronto wholesale flour dealer figured out that at yesterday's flour prices, bread should sell at 22c. the large loaf. It was simply a question, he said, as to how long the present stocks of flour in the bakers' hands, bought in lower market, would last. The wheat markets were again on the rampage. May wheat at one stage going up 10c. above Wednesday's close, and closing 8 1-2c. up. Winnipeg was equally strong, reaching as high as $2.44 7-8 on the May option, and closing 7 5-8 above Wednesday's close. Cash prices were advanced in proportion. The strong demand for cash wheat for export continues to dominate the market.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern, $2.64½; No. 2 $2.60 1-2; No. 3, $2.55½; track, bay ports.

American corn—$1.58 1-2, nominal, subject to embargo.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, 74c. to 76c.; No. 3 white, 73c. to 75c.

Ontario wheat— No. 2 winter, per car lot, $2.43 to $2.45; No. 3, $2.41 to $2.43, according to freights outside.

Peas—No. 2, nominal; car lots, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $1.85 to $1.87.

Manitoba flour— First patents, in jute bags, $12.10; second patents, $11.60; strong bakers, $11.20.

Ontario flour—Winter, according to sample, $10.40 to $10.50, track, Toronto, prompt shipments.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts, $41 to $43; bran, $39; feed flour, per bag, $2.80 to $2.90; middlings, $44 to $46.

Hay— Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $11.50 to $12.50; mixed, $9 to $11; straw, $7 to $7.50.

Cattle Markets.

Union Stock Yards— Receipts, 52 cars, with 220 cattle, 202 calves, 2, 56 hogs, and 40 sheep and lambs.

The market cleaned up slow and draggy, very little life to business, and prices still inclined to sag on the common to medium offerings. Choice well finished butcher steers and heifers hold about steady, but the decline on the poorer quatities is 25c. to 40c. lower than last week.

Fat cows and bulls steady.

Good demand for stockers and feeders of extra quality, and a very good demand for grass cows.

Choice milkers and springers strong.

Calves are easier and $1 lower than last week.

Sheep and lambs firm.

Hogs easier and 10c. to 15c. lower.

German Front Line Glutted With Soldiers

Battered Earthworks Are Being Replaced By Human Bulwarks of Men

DEFEND TO THE END IS THE STERN ORDER

Every Ounce of Teuton Strength is Being Exerted to Hold Line

With the French Armies in the Field, April 20.—"Defend at any cost," is the word which has gone along the German front where the French are battering in their great offensive.

What the "cost" has been, without stopping the French drive, or even slowing up the forward movement of the offensive, was apparent to-day in the count of prisoners, in the heaps of German dead, and in the demoralization of the defenders apparent everywhere.

The German plan seems to be to gorge the first line of the defences with troops. They literally glut the first line trenches. The German earthwork fortifications, battered into nothingness by French guns, are apparently being replaced by human bulwarks of massed men. Into these masses of Germans the French fire is playing death with fearful certainty.

Prisoners told freely to-day that the German orders were to resist at all sacrifices of men and of supplies.

It was noted that no counter-offensive movements of a general nature are being attempted by the enemy. The Teuton commanders are exerting every ounce of their strength in trying to hold to the line. They apparently realize it cannot be expected the exhausted German troops will be able to face the terific French artillery fire in offensive operations.

"Free Wheat" Adds Millions To The Dominion

Lost Opportunity On Same Scale Would Have Equalled Two of Country's War Loans

LONG DELAYED

To-day the owners of Canadian wheat are $20,000,000 better off than they were last Saturday: they are many millions better off than they were last Tuesday, because of "free wheat." And this increase in wealth comes on the remnants only of the 1916 crop not yet hauled to market, estimated at something over 100,000,000 bushels.

It is five years since Canada first had the opportunity to put free wheat in effect. If a similar increase in price had been realized on the five entire crops harvested since then the increased gain to Canada would have been equal to two of Sir Thomas White's great war loans.

In addition, a Western newspaper in a position to judge says that "free wheat" at one stroke has added five dollars an acre to the value of all the wheat lands of the West.

The announcement of "free wheat" came on Monday. Here is what cash wheat prices in Manitoba and Ontario have been doing since:

On Saturday last Manitoba No. 1 Northern at lake ports was quoted at $2.37; Monday at $2.38; Tuesday at $2.50; Wednesday at $2.57.

Ontario wheat was quoted as follows: Saturday $2.08 to $2.10; Monday, $2.20 to $2.22; Tuesday $2.30 to $2.32; Wednesday $2.35 to $2.37.

As everyone knows, markets have ways of anticipating news, so that some of the advance from Saturday to Monday may fairly be credited to the effect of the pending announcement. From Saturday to Wednesday there was a 20-cent advance in Manitoba wheat and a 27-cents advance in Ontario. But even 15 cents on 100,000,000 bushels means $15,000,000.

PLUCKY PHONE GIRL REFUSED TO QUIT

So Policeman Ross Snatched Her From Switchboard and Danger of Death

When fire destroyed several buildings at City Island, Manhattan, a telephone girl proved to be the heroine of the occasion, remaining at her post until a policeman picked her up bodily and carried her away from her switchboard. She was Miss Marian A. Hearle, the daughter of Policeman Hearle, of City Island Station and the only operator on duty in the City Island exchange.

In answering the alarm a fireboat went aground on a sand bar in Pelham Bay, and a motor hook and ladder truck crashed into a stone wall, with the only available substitute ladder seven miles from the fire. The Post Office, branch public library and telephone exchange were among the buildings swept by the flames.

The fire started in the rear of a two story frame building at No. 321 City Island avenue, the first floor of which was used as a post office and the second occupied as a family residence. The fire worked its way to No. 329 City Island avenue.

At No. 323, next to where the fire started, is the telephone exchange. City Island sleeps well at night, and only one operator is needed. Long after the building caught fire Miss Hearle stuck to her switchboard. She would have stayed longer but Policeman Louis Roos, who constitutes the "reserves" of the City Island station, went into the building and said "You have got to get out now." When Miss Hearle demurred he carried her out.

About three years ago while Miss Hearle was on duty at night she saw a fire in the Harlem Yacht Club. She rang up the club house, awakening the janitor and his family, and at the same time turned in an alarm. Thanks to her warning, the family got out in the nick of time.

French Advance More Than Mile In 15 Minutes

Dazzling Whiteness of Snow Covers the Movements of the Infantry

FIGHTING GROWS MUCH MORE INTENSE

GROUND GAINED FIRMLY HELD —FRENCH ARE STILL PRESSING FURTHER AHEAD.

With the French armies in Field, April 19.—Fighting was increasing in intensity late yesterday over a front of more than forty miles.

Gleams of a brilliant morning sun, reflected in the dazzling brightness of a snow-covered ground, aided the French in one of their most brilliant advances. The ground thus taken is now firmly in French hands with the troops pressing on further ahead.

This battle in the snows was between Rheims and St. Souplet Tuesday. The advance of the French was so swift that within fifteen minutes after leaping from their trenches they had occupied all German positions for two-thirds of a mile ahead —advancing more than a mile and a third in an hour.

The tremendously destructive artillery fire from the French guns aided in this, but the snow contributed to the victory. The dazzling whiteness of the snow hid the infantry's advance, blinding the eyes of the German watchers.

Enemy in the West Stricken With Panic

IS DEMORALIZED BY TERRIBLE BOMBARDMENT AND LOSSES.

PARIS, April 20.—Germany's soldiers are reaching the panic stage as the great drive of the Franco-British forces sweeps onward with its ghastly toll of Teuton dead. A week ago first evidence of a breakdown in the morale of the German defenders was observed and reported by British commanders, in the drive around Lens.

Yesterday with Gen. Nivelle's French troops in some places more than five miles behind the German lines in the Soisson-Rheims sector, official statements told of German retreat in great disorder, of abandonment of big quantities of supplies, of something akin to terror among the Germans.

By night it is expected the total of German prisoners will reach 20,000. Nearly a hundred guns have already been taken.

For the first time since the battle of the Marne the German invaders have been driven north of the Aisne river. Not a German soldier remains in French territory to the south.

MORE LICENSES ISSUED.

Over 33,000 Issued for Autos so Far This Year.

TORONTO, April 12.—Despite the lack of steel which prevented the manufacture of auto license plates from having the plates ready at the time appointed, there have been a considerable number more licenses issued up to date this year than for the same time last year.

In 1916 there were 26,000 licenses issued by the middle of April, while up to date there have been 33,000 issued from the office at the Parliament Buildings and other places where the plates can be obtained.

It is thought that by the end of the month enough plates will be on hand to supply all that will be needed during the year.

THIRD MEETING NECESSARY.

STRATFORD, April 19. — Another special meeting of the city council will be necessary to pass a bylaw appointing Pte. Herb. Denroche, a returned soldier, at tax collector, at $700 per year. At Monday's regular session, the bylaw was read once and further action was blocked by Ald. Roberts On Wednesday night the second reading was given but Ald. Jones held up its final passing, declining to meet the plea of his colleagues that the choice be made unanimous. Another meeting has been called for Friday night to give the bylaw its third reading. Both Ald. Roberts and Ald. Jones declared emphatically that they had no other name to offer.

INVISIBLE HORSES

Color of Coats Changed so as to Match Color of the Ground

Useful experiments are being carried out in the United States with the object of determining whether horses can be so colored as to render them less conspicuous and reduce the chances of their being made a target for the fire of an enemy. Some of the tests have been conducted in Arizona, with animals of the 1st Cavalry, and apparently have been attended with considerable success.

According to the Army and Navy Register, a solution was applied to an animal with an ordinary grooming brush or sponge after the coat had been damped with water to prevent the coloring stuff from running down over the dry hair. It changed the horse from a dark chestnut to a yellow dun, according to the strength. This dye lasts about four or five weeks, a longer or shorter time depending upon whether the animal is shedding or not, and it does not take as long to color a horse as ordinary grooming takes, as it is only necessary to go over the animal once in the same direction as the hair lies.

It neither injures nor alters the texture or feel of the coat. At four to five hundred paces, the animal was almost invisible.

One expert has stated that it is almost impossible for a sniper to shoot horses colored in the way that it has been done in the 1st Cavalry corrals on the border, because the enemy will be unable to see the animals at any great distances.

Types of British and German hand grenades now used by troops in the trenches, and thrown by hand. The weight of them varies from two to four pounds, and owing to the stick or handle the British Tommy is able to carry a small supply of them in his belt, till ready to use.

What the Stars Tell

I wonder if an artist, a soldier writes, will succeed in really putting into paint the hideous soullessness of the mud wastes out here. Or the weird grandeur of the night scenes, with colored lights from the two front lines, and the flash of a big gun lighting up the heavy sky. And the stars—well, in after years, no one who has soldiered on the Somme will think of anything but the Somme when he sees Orion and the Great Bear looking down upon him.

$25 For Every Man Captured

During the Napoleonic wars, in order to put an end to the destructive ravages of the French privateers, it was enacted that where a ship of war or privateer of the enemy was taken in action by any of H.M.'s ships of war, a sum should be paid to the officers and men who should have been actually on board the vessel taking the enemy's ship of $25 for every man living on board the enemy ship so taken at the beginning of the engagement.

SAFETY FIRST

Simple Devices Which Have Proved Good in War

An ingenious method of devising shelters against both the enemy and the weather was adopted by the British troops in France. Heavy rains had overtaken the army, and so a new style of tent was erected by them. Fixing a number of stakes in the ground, Tommy covered the top with tarpaulin, or the nearest approach to it which he could procure, and so managed to keep out of the moisture. But the enemy's airmen had also to be remembered, and so on top of covering the soldiers piled up great masses of branches covered with leaves. The result was that from overhead such an encampment presented the appearance of growing foliage, instead of the tents for which the air scouts were looking for.

Disastrous Mistake

A subaltern, writing from France, gives the following incident: A party of twelve bringing up tea walked straight up to a Boche trench, asking, "Is this our bloomin' front line?" and quickly discovering their mistake sheered to the left straight on to a German bombing post with disastrous results to themselves.

Men who have done so gloriously should be looked after in such a way that when they return to civil life they will be useful citizens.—King Manuel.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES.

"My boy, Frank, seemed weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

ZULUS IN FRANCE

General Botha's Contributions to the Empire

A soldier writes: I do not think that I have ever been so impressed with a sense of why the allies are bound to win the war than I was at the sight of a double line of South African natives lined up for me to see in one of the many camps which are already occupied by the South African Native Labor Corps in various parts of the war area. In the ranks of this motionless array, standing rigidly to attention, were splendid looking Zulus, sturdy Basutos from the Northern Transvaal, and deep-chested Pondos. Willing volunteers, every one of them, who have exchanged their sunny luxuriance for the bitter cheerlessness of this particularly severe winter in order to do their "bit."

The officer who conducted me round their compound was a gentleman distinguished in current South African history. He called three men out of the ranks; one a nephew of Cetewayo, another a son of Dinisulu, the third named Dwalana. I desired him to ask Dwalana whether there was any message he would like to send to South Africa. His reply, interpreted, was that he and his comrades were proud to be with the great army of the Empire in France; that they were well cared for and happy, and that although the weather had been such as they had never dreamed of before, yet, thanks to plenty of good food, warm clothes, dry huts with big fires, and a generous supply of blankets, they were getting through it quite well.

These natives wear a blue serge uniform not dissimilar from that of the Royal Marines, with blue cloaks, cowboy hats (frequently adorned, according to taste), ammunition boots, and puttees. Their daily rations consist of 1½ pounds of mealie meal, which is made into a very savory porridge, ½ pound of bread, 1 pound of meat, coffee and salt. Twice a week they get 1 pound of vegetables per head, and tobacco and cigarettes are issued. There is a dry canteen in every compound.

STORY OF CAPTAIN'S GLORIOUS DEATH

Story of Captain Loftus Jones—Though Mortally Wounded Commanded His Ship to the Last

An account of the death of Captain Loftus Jones is given in part in a London paper as follows: The captain now went to the mid-ship gun, the other guns and everything else on the deck having been blown away, and he remained there till the end. Hope, an able seaman, was at the mid-ship gun from the beginning till the end of the action, and distinguished himself by his coolness and efficiency. There were more than a hundred rounds of ammunition fired from this gun.

Ten German destroyers and light cruisers came up out of the mist at close range, about 600 yards, and all fired on the Shark, and a few minutes afterwards the captain had his left leg shot away above the knee. Hope rushed to him with a piece of wood, and Griffin with rope. He asked them to leave him, but Hope said, "We must do it for your good, sir," hoping they might stop the bleeding and save his life.

Down With the Flag Flying

As the captain was sitting on the deck he said, "What's wrong with the ensign?" Hope answered, "It's shot down, sir." The captain gave the order "Hoist another!" The midshipman cleared the way, and Hope hoisted another. (There were always spare flags kept for any emergency). The captain then said, "That's good," and appeared content. Seeing the ship was beginning to sink very quickly and a German destroyer was coming quite close, the captain gave the order "Save yourselves." The German destroyer came near, fired a torpedo into her, there was an explosion and she sank with her flag flying.

Absence of Panic

The action lasted for about an hour and a half. There was no panic whatever, and all obeyed orders promptly and calmly. Filleul, Grimn, Smith and Idwell saw the captain in the water. He had his life-saving waistcoat on, which kept him afloat. Filleul put a lifebelt round him and put him on one of the rafts. There were two other men with him. The other survivors, with the 1st lieutenant, who had not been wounded, got on another raft. The captain said, "Let's have a song, lads." The 1st lieutenant started, "Nearer, my God, to Thee," and they all sang until they were exhausted. Some ships came into sight, and the captain asked Filleul if they were English or German. Filleul told him they were English, and he said, "That's good." These were his last words.

QUEBEC'S SIX HUNDRED

Glory of 22nd French-Canadians at Courcelette on Somme

Captain Gustave Lanctot, formerly with the 73rd Highlanders, gave an interesting description of the gallant and unforgettable deeds of the 22nd Battalion at the Battle of Courcelette, where on the 15th September, 1916, a Canadian Division attacked the German positions, and against terrific odds, inflicted punishment on the enemy and came out of the battle with glory. Capt. Lanctot was at the front at the time of the battle, and though not with his French-speaking comrades at the time Courcelette was taken, he was in the same sector, and his record was collected from official information, and from the men who participated in the attack.

Four Canadian battalions took part in the Battle of Courcelette, and they all distinguished themselves. A few hours before the battle began, the commanding officers of the four battalions were called into conference by General Turner, who commanded the division, and when the plan of campaign was explained to them, Col. Tremblay, who had charge of the French-Canadians, asked for the privilege of leading the attack, because the 22nd was the senior battalion. This was agreed to and it was under these circumstances that the 22nd Battalion went "over the top" first, and played such a prominent part in the operations. Courcelette, was a veritable fortress and the Germans had adopted every device that their military skill could suggest to keep the town, but the Canadians took possession in a way that has often been told, and will never be forgotten. Out of the 640 French-Canadians who went into the battle on the 15th Sept., only 250 answered the roll call next day.

At a supreme crisis such as this in our nation's life, what right have we to talk about comforts, luxuries, and indulgences?—Bishop of Gensington.

HAD BOILS

FOR SIX MONTHS

B. B. B. DROVE THEM AWAY

When the blood becomes impure the very first symptoms which manifest themselves are a breaking out of various forms of skin trouble such as boils, pimples, sores, etc., and to get rid of these troubles you must cleanse the blood thoroughly with a good blood remedy.

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters.

Thousands of people from one end of Canada to the other have used it during the past forty years, and have nothing but words of praise for its cleansing properties.

Mr. Rufus Beers, Upper Main River, N.B., writes: "I want to say a few words about your medicine, Burdock Blood Bitters. I had boils for over six months and sometimes was so bad I could not work. I tried lots of cures but nothing would drive them away for good until I took B.B.B. In a short time I was all better. It is a dandy medicine. I keep it in the house all the time."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont., but so well and favourably is it known that there are many imitations on the market. See that our name appears on the wrapper.

WOMAN GIVEN TWO DAYS

To Make Up Her Mind for Surgical Operation. She Refused; Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"One year ago I was very sick and I suffered with pains in my side and back until I nearly went crazy. I went to different doctors and they all said I had female trouble and would not get any relief until I would be operated on. I had suffered for four years before this time, but I kept getting worse the more medicine I took. Every month since I was a young girl I had suffered with cramps in my sides at periods and was never regular. I saw your advertisement in the newspaper and the picture of a woman who had been saved from an operation and this picture was impressed on my mind. The doctor had given me only two more days to make up my mind so I sent my husband to the drug store at once for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and believe me, I only took four doses before I felt a change and when I had finished the third bottle I was cured and never felt better. I grant you the privilege to publish my letter and am only too glad to let other women know of my cure."—Mrs. Thos. McGonigal, 3433 Hartville Street, Phila., Pa.

CENSURE PEER-CREATING.

Joseph Martin Introduces Resolution in British Parliament.

LONDON, April 19.—Joseph Martin, in the Commons, has given notice of a resolution that "This House regrets, in the time of the great fight of world democracy against autocracy, that the Government has become responsible for the appointment of resident peers in Canada, thus introducing the thin edge aristocracy in a purely democratic country."

Martin's home is in Vancouver, B. C., but he represents a London constituency in the British Parliament.

NOSE CLOGGED FROM A COLD OR CATARRH

Apply Cream in Nostrils To Open Up Air Passages.

Ah! What relief! Your clogged nostrils open right up, the air passages of your head are clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, mucous discharge, headache, dryness—no struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh is gone.

Don't stay stuffed up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just splendid.

ANTI-GERMAN DISORDER

Loss of About $10,000,000 at Porto Alegre—Demonstrations Continue.

RIO JANEIRO, April 19. — Telegrams from different parts of Brazil report the continuance of anti-German demonstrations. The president of the state of Rio Grande do Sul has issued a proclamation forbidding public meetings.

The loss in anti-German riots at Porto Alegre which resulted in the burning of several German houses yesterday is estimated at 20,0000,000 milreis (prior to the war a milreis was valued at fifty-five cents American.) The German residents in Parana have withdrawn to Santaca Tharina, where they are concentrating. Most of the German houses in Petropolis have taken down their German flags and substituted the Brazilian ensign.

PUZZLE FOR THE IGNORANT

Army's Affection For Initial Letters is Confusing

The army has a tremendous affection for initial letters. It possesses so many important officials, dignified with long titles, that abbreviation saves a large amount of labor in addressing correspondence. Possibly few civilians could make head or tail of the following: "The A.D.M.S. through the E.M.O., asked the D.A.D.R.T. for an A.T. to carry a number of G.S.W. and P.U.O. cases to the So-and-so G.H., while a Q.M.S. in the B.D.M.S. had a F.G.C.M."

This reads: "The Assistant Director of Medical Services, through the Entraining Medical Officer, asked the Deputy Assistant Director of Railway Transport for an Ambulance Train to carry a number of gunshot wound and pyrexia of an undiscovered origin (the official title for the disease commonly called "trench fever") cases to the So-and-so General Hospital, while a quartermaster-sergeant in the Base Depot Medical Stores had a Field General Court-Martial."

Our Flag in the Church

The flag in the church is purely the outcome of war. When the martial fever of the Boer War subsided it was taken down and relegated to disuse side by side with the frayed tunic and all the other tokens of wars. After this struggle is over the probabilities are that the same will be done again. Patriotism and religion are so closely intertwined that the House of God is honored in the flag even as the flag is honored in the House of God, and there is no reason why the Union Jack should not for ever occupy a proud place in the churches of the Dominions where it holds sway.

From Tropics to Eternal Snow

On the hottest days in summer a flying man may be in the Arctic regions in ten minutes by mounting to a height of 10,000 feet, just as the climber may pass through all the shades of temperature by climbing Kilima-Njaro, that giant peak which rises above the snow line from the Equator. He commences with the tropical jungle and ends amid eternal snow.

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to such in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washings the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headache, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin ont the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

COLORS FOR "DIE HARDS"

Middlesex Cadets Told the Story of Albuera

A London paper writes: In presenting colors to a Middlesex Regiment, Lord Cheylesmore said that one flag was the emblem of his Majesty their Sovereign and the other was an emblem of esprit de corps and devotion to the battalion. Regimental colors were a proud possession and often turned a doubtful battle into a great victory. There was no greater instance of this on record than the glorious tradition of the old 57th Regiment at Albuera in 1811. Nobly did the men of that regiment respond to their dying general, who cried out to his men: "Die hard! Die hard! for the sake of the old 57th." After that battle only 7 officers and 300 men remained to answer the roll. Ever since that date the glorious Middlesex Regiment had acted with nobility and heroism, and none had shown its gallantry more than this regiment.

Flight of Carrier Pigeons

It is estimated that in calm weather a carrier pigeon can fly at the rate of 1,200 yards a minute; with the help of a moderate wind it will attain a speed of 1,540 yards, and before a strong wind 3,000 yards.

Cossacks Superstitious

Among the numerous superstitions of the Cossacks there is a belief that they will enter Heaven in a better state of moral purity if they are personally clean when killed in battle.

Germany means to starve us out. There is only one answer—a blow straight between the eyes. National Service can deal that blow.—Mr. Neville Chamberlain.

Jesus Annointed at Bethany: John 12, 1-11.

Golden Text: She hath done what she could. Mark 14:8.

1. Verse 1. Where was Bethany?

2. Would Lazarus be likely to have any memory of his experience in Paradise, and would he probably be inclined to discuss it?

3. Verse 2. Would you say or not, and why, that Jesus would eat and drink more than necessary for health for the sensuous pleasure it affords?

4. Why may it be presumed or not, that Jesus enjoyed a social time for the mere pleasure of sociality, and without making the occasion of any religious significance?

5. Verse 2. Is it legitimate and right or not, and why, for Christians to attend elaborate dinners and banquets; to partake of every course, eating like gourmands, and wasting their time?

6. Jesus visited this home very frequently; what was the special attraction? And is it right or not, and why, for a pastor to visit one home more frequently than another?—

7. Why should not a minister have particular friends among the members of his church as Jesus seems to have had?

8. Verse What can you say for or against spending time or money for Jesus, or others, as a pure love offering, and for no other purpose?

9. Why may not money spent for flowers, pictures and other beautiful things, for those whose hearts are hungry be as good Christian work as money spent for bread for the physically hungry? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

10. If this very expensive love offering of Mary gave soul rapture only to herself and to Jesus, why was it not money well spent?

11. Verses 4, 5. Seeing there are so many poor and needy and other objective needs for our money, should our practice of sending flowers to our friends when they are sick, or in other special heart need, be kept up, or not, and why?

12. Why, following the example of Mary, would not perfume, sent to the sick or troubled ones be an appropriate expression of our love and our sympathy?

13. Which is more important to-day—to spend our money to comfort hungry and aching hearts or to feed hungry stomachs?

14. Verse 6. What class of men in our church and social system resemble this man Judas, who in order to get a chance to steal more money would let hungry hearts go uncomforted and hungry stomachs unfed?

15. Among the tens of thousands of church treasurers to-day, few of whom are bonded, how many have you known to steal the funds in their care?

16. Verse 7. What useful lesson may be learned from the fact that Jesus appreciated and approved Mary's love offering?

17. Verse 8. Which class of persons give more to the poor, those who spend money to minister to spiritual needs, or those who ignore such needs?

18. Verses 9-11. Upon what psy-

ORIGIN OF MILITARY NAMES

"Captain" is derived from the Latin "caput," meaning a head; "colonel" comes from the Italian "colonna," a column, the "campagna colonella" having been the first company of an infantry regiment, the little column which the "colonel" led. The title "lieutenant" comes from a word signifying "holding the place"—that is, a lieutenant-colonel is a sort of understudy for a colonel, a lieutenant looks after a company in the absence of the captain, and so on. The title of "lance-sergeant" and "lance-corporal" originated in the fact that in the old days the holders of these ranks carried a lance instead of a halberd, round the head of which was twisted a slow match. Their duties were to go round the ranks with these torch-light lances and give fire to the match-lock men just before a battle took place. The word "dragoon" was first used by a regiment of mounted infantry, so called from the "dragons," or short muskets, with which they were armed; the well-known cavalry call of "Boot and Saddle" is really a corruption of the old French signal, "Boute-Selle," or "Put on your saddles." "Admiral" comes from the Arabic "Emir of Bagh," meaning "Lord of the sea"; commodore" comes from "commandatore"; "mate" is from the Icelandic, and means an equal; and the terms "giving quarter" is believed to have originated in the agreement which existed in the old fighting days, that the ransom of a foot soldier should be one-quarter of his pay for one year.

ASQUITH'S SON WINS D. S. O.

Decorated for Conspicuous Gallantry at the Front in France.

LONDON, April 19.—The King has conferred the Distinguished Service Order upon ex-Premier Asquith's third son, Lieut. Commander Arthur Melland Asquith, for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty.

Lieut. Commander Asquith's war service dates to Antwerp, where he fought in the trenches. He has been wounded two or three times since—once at the Dardanelles.

Another new D.S.O. is Captain the Hon Lionel Samuel Montagu, son of the first Lord Swaythling and brother of the present peer. Among other exploits Captain Montagu single-handed captured fifty prisoners, and later, although wounded, remained at his post of duty.

WHAT DYSPEPTICS SHOULD EAT

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are, nine times out of ten, due to acidity; therefore stomach sufferers should, whenever possible, avoid eating food that is acid in its nature, or which by chemical action in the stomach develope acidity. Unfortunately, such a rule eliminates most foods which are pleasant to the taste as well as those who are rich in blood, flesh and nerve building properties. This is the reason why dyspeptics and stomach sufferers are usually so thin, emaciated and lacking in that vital energy which can only come from a well fed body. For the benefit of those sufferers who have been obliged to exclude from their diet all starchy, sweet or fatty food, and are trying to keep up a miserable existence on gluten products, I would suggest that you should try a meal of any food or foods which you may like, in moderate amount, taking immediately afterwards a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralise hot or cold water. This will neutralise hot or cold water. This will neutralise or which may be formed and instead of the usual feeling of uneasiness and fullness, you will find that your food agrees with you perfectly. Bisurated magnesia is doubtless the best food corrective and antacid known. It has no direct action on the stomach; but by neutralising the acidity of the food contents and thus removing the source of the acid irritation which inflames the delicate stomach lining, it does more than could possibly be done by any drug or medicine. As a physician, I believe in the use of medicine whenever necessary, but I must admit that I cannot see the sense of dosing an inflamed and irritated stomach with drugs instead of getting rid of the acid—the cause of all the trouble. Get a little bisurated magnesia from your druggist, eat what you want at your next meal, take some of the bisurated mag-

CZAR AND CZARINA ISOLATED.

May Speak With Each Other and Suite Only With Guards Present.

PETROGRAD, April 19.—According to the Russky Volya, the ex-Czar and Czarina have been forbidden to communicate with each other or with their fellow-prisoners except in the presence of the officers of their guard.

These new restrictions are the direct result of an attmept by members of the ex-Czar's suite to communicate surreptitiously with the outside world. It is stated that letters have been passed out of the palace through the agency of a man named Kotsebu. One of these letters fell into the hands of an officer who handed it to General Korniloff Commandant of the Petrograd district.

In this letter, which was addressed to a man named Shavaloff, Count Benckendorff instructed an agent to sell all his estates and those of Prince Dolgourokoff and transfer the money to American banks. He also desired to know when the next courier left for abroad, and requested that he should call on Kotsebu at Tsarskoe Selo to receive certain documents.

Kotsebu was arrested and M. Kerensky, Minister of Justice, gave instructions for the new measures against the ex-Czar.

"INSULARITY MAY PROVE FATAL."

"The insular position of our chief opponent, which was held to be his strength, will now, we hope, prove fatal to him. But the general opinion about the objects of the submarine campaign is quite erroneous. It is a minor considerations whether our project of bringing home privations to the English population succeeds or not. If it does, so much the better, of course; but its chief effects must be sought in another direction. The essential point is that Great Britain's economic energy, which is already weakened, should be permanently impaired. We already see that the psychological efect of the campaign depends not only on what actually happens, but on the exaggeration of what happens by the public mind."

After promising that the present increased cost in foodstuffs and raw materials is, for the moment, a negligible consideration, "for the war has taught us in war time money and prices play no part at all," Herr Bernhard proceeds:

"It is the future that we are fighting for. Increased war expenditure means either increased taxation or increased indebtedness, which in Great Britain's case, means increased dependence on foreign countries. And it is just in respect of her future rivalry with Germany that it is of paramount importance for us to inflict the greatest possible damage to her financial strength. The destruction of tonnage is likewise of more significance for the future than for the present."

"BLOW AT BRITISH MARINES."

"If neutral shipping continues to refuse the risk, the risk will have to be transferred to British shipping, and the tonnage of this destroyed will immensely weaken Great Britain in her future competition with Germany. If the war ends as we hope it will, British tonnage will have been so much reduced that Britain will be compelled to yield her mercantile pride of place to Germany. These considerations are of far more importance, in estimating the effect of the submarine war, than the starving out of Great Britain, which public opinion considers its real object."

It is a question whether public opinion in the Entente countries has as yet visualized the possibilities foreshadowed by this writer. It is perhaps not fully alive to the ever-increasing and baneful influence exercised by the Pan-German League in the unofficial war councils of that country. Mainly academic in its inception, with Treitschke as its arch priest and the junkers as its earliest proselytes, the All-Deutscher Verband now numbers among its adherents the agrarians and industrialists with their powerful organizations.

From dreams of a more or less chimerical Weltmacht it has passed into a very wideawake political activity, and, backed by the influential organs of the ultra-chauvenistic and "armor-plate" press, it continues to engineer against the Chancellor a campaign which recalls that of which Mr. Asquith, when he was Prime Minister, was for so long an object.

ATTACK ON CHANCELLOR.

At first Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg was assailed for his assumed reluctance to engage in "ruthless" submarine warfare. Now that this warfare has become an accomplished fact, and the Pan-Germans imagine that it opens the road to victory they fear the Chancellor will not prove sufficiently exacting in the terms of peace which they believe that Germany will be in the position to impose. Wiser than the spokesmen of the chauvinists he has never formulated his exact intentions regarding the retention of the occupied territory, and his opponents fear to see these slip from the German grasp. In these words of Count Reventlow in the Deutsche Tageszeitung, the statesman who would make peace without the acquisitions necessary for our industry and agriculture, would be condemned by history as the grave digger of German prosperity and greatness."

Was Troubled With Shortness of Breath

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, dizziness, and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

The nerves become unstrung, you dread to be alone, have a horror of society, start at the least noise and are generally fatigued.

On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be taken. They are just what you require at this time. They regulate and stimulate the heart, and strengthen and restore the whole nerve system.

Mrs. C. M. Cormier, Buctouche, N.B., writes: "Since two years ago I was troubled with a shortness of breath, and sometimes I could hardly breathe. I went to see several doctors, and they said it was from my heart and nerves, but they did not seem to do me any good. One day I got one of your B.B.B. Almanacs and read of a case similar to mine.

"I bought a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking it I noticed such a change that I kept on taking them until I had used four more boxes, when I was cured."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box, three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co.,

Has Cured Your Neighbours And It Will Cure You

Look Into This Evidence for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food From Your Own Town People

PETERBOROUGH, Ont., March 15. —It is only natural to doubt reports from people at a distance and who are unknown to you. If you have felt this way about what you have read in regard to the great good being accomplished by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you do not need to doubt any longer.

Every day we are publishing in this paper reports from people right here in Peterborough who have been cured by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, some recently and some years ago. When you have read these letters look these people up and inquire into their cases. Every one of them is glad of an opportunity to help others suffering as they did.

Miss Catharine Scully, 517 Sherbrooke St., Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Some time ago I was suffering from a run down condition of the system. I was nervous, could not sleep, and lost my appetite. I used to have severe headaches that became almost unbearable. I tried several remedies and Doctors' medicine as well, but they did not help me. Finally I became so weakened in condition that I was scarcely able to walk. It was then that I first tried Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I used one box, and detected an improvement, so I continued the treatment until cured. I am in good health now, can eat and sleep well, and do not have those terrible headaches. I give the credit entirely to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and can say it is a splendid remedy. If anyone suffering as I did would only try this treatment, I know they would not be sorry."

Mrs. Leether, 108 Lansdowne street, Peterborough, Ont., writes:

"About three months ago, I found myself in a run down condition, due no doubt to the fact that I had been working long hours. I was also troubled occasionally with headaches and pains in my back. Upon the advice of a friend, I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I found the very first box benefitted me, so I continued the treatment until now I feel greatly improved and more like my former self."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

City of Cambrai Old and Famous

Cambrai, the city that forms one of the vital links of the new "Hindenburg line" on the French front, is famous in history, art and industry. It was there that cambric lace originated. That form of fine muslin known as batiste also comes from Cambrai, taking its name after a famous weaver of the Fifteenth century.

In Cambrai are many relics and valuable volumes of history and literature for which the French may well feel alarmed. Its library, one of the oldest in France, has more than forty thousand volumes, some of them of a great age. There is also a large museum of antiquities and objects of art in the city.

Cambrai is the Camaracum of the Romans and a city stood on the present site long before the Christian era. It was the seat of one of the Frankish kings and was fortified by Charlemagne. Probably it is most famous in history because of the Peace of Cambrai, concluded in 1529 by Louise of Savoy, mother of Francois I. of France, and Margaret of Austria, aunt of Charles V. This treaty is sometimes called the Ladies' Peace, and is the only one in history that was signed exclusively by women. It ended a long and destructive war between the Austrians and the French.

The city contains a number of examples of ancient and mediaeval architecture, among them being the Chateau de Selles, which dates from the thirteenth century. The Church of St. Gery there contains a marble rood-screen of rare Renaissance workmanship, while several stone portals date from the Renaissance.

At St. Quentin, another of the important points along the new German line is the famous Church of St. Quentin, one of the finest examples of Gothic architecture in North France. It was started in the twelfth century and was not completed until nearly three centuries later. Its crypt contains the tomb of Gaius Quintinus (St. Quentin) and his fellow-martyrs, Victoricus and Gentianus, who had come thither as preachers of Christianity in the third century. There are many other splendid evidences of mediaeval handiwork in the city.

Because St. Quentin stood at the meeting place of five military roads, it has been the scene of many battles and sieges. One of the decisive battle of the Franco-Prussian war was fought there in 1871, resulting in a decisive defeat of the French by an inferior force of Germans. In fact, the French army, commanded by Faidherbe, was so shattered that it was unable to take any further part in the war.

This city, like Cambrai, is noted for the manufacture of fine fabrics, its pique and window curtains being famed throughout the world.

IN A DESTROYER ATTACKING ENEMY

Must be Always on the Alert and Ready For Action—Learn to See in the Dark

A naval man, writing in a London paper, says: "Knowing that whatever comes will come without warning, you always keep on the top line ready to act immediately. Well for us that we were so, for we just tumbled into action. I don't know a better way of expressing what happened. We could not actually see them clearly, but by the sort of instinct which destroyer crews acquire by long practice we 'sensed' that other craft were about and guessed rather than discerned the faint loom of a hull in the darkness. Promptly we challenged; the reply was unsatisfactory, and instantly the 'scrap' began. There was no preliminary feinting. Blow followed word almost as soon as the word was spoken. Knowing that we must be hostile, there existed no need for the enemy to speak before he struck. And he didn't; he let fly at us instantly.

"First blow often counts heavily, and the enemy wisely tried to get it in. One well-placed salvo is usually as much as a destroyer can stand. Nine times out of ten it will put her out of action.

Unwelcome Messengers

"Every now and again a torpedo would be 'loosed,' and, of course, we didn't know when one of these unwelcome messengers from the enemy might reach us. Catching a salvo is bad enough, but getting a torpedo into you means a knock-out for the boat and Kingdom Come for a good many of her crew—probably the lot of them.

Engagements Short and Sharp

"Usually these night engagements between destroyers are short and sharp, as this particular one was. Pretty soon it had resolved itself into a chase with the enemy running for home and us pelting along after him, banging into him all the time. Owing to the impossibility of making accurate observation it's difficult to say how much damage you do to the enemy on such occasions unless you happen to sink some of his craft outright. A thing like this can be seen, but a destroyer might be ever so badly knocked about and have half the crew laid out and yet get away under cover of the darkness, without her opponents being able to see how much she had suffered. All one can do is to make it as hot for the enemy as one can."

OH! FOR A ROAD

Troubles of the General Staff at Salonica

An army man writes as follows: The most important work of the army in Macedonia is the making and mending of roads, for on the roads everything depends. Until you have a road over which your artillery and transport can travel, you cannot move forward, or hold any position your infantry may gain. Consequently someone at headquarters drew a line from one spot to another on the map, and said, "Let there be a road from here to here," and suggested that, as we were doing nothing in particular at the moment, we might as well take on the job.

The "R.E." people went to and fro, cursing gently. They appointed bridges to be built where the eye of inexperience saw nothing to bridge. They discussed whether they should drive a cutting through a projecting slope of rock or go round it, and decided on the cutting "because the stone would be wanted anyhow."

Finally a point was fixed where a start should be made. It was rather like making bits of a jig-saw puzzle without knowledge of the design. A cutting was made here, a little leading station there, a hollow was filled somewhere else. Presently the skeleton of a tiny tramway arrived over the horizon, to the intense disgust of the mules who brought it. The thing was put together and slipped into place, and stone from the quarry began to flow down it to the prepared bed of the road. When I had to come away the work was in full swing, and I had an exact and clear vision of the completed road.

During those frequent "scraps" against the Spaniards, Drake secured for his crews many thousands of pounds in the way of prize bounty, or "head" money, as it was termed then. A case in point is the capture of two Spanish frigates off the Isle of Wight. When these prizes were overhauled a veritable Tom Tiddler's ground was brought to light, and the following were the individual shares of the lucky recipients: Captains, $243,650; lieutenants, $25,455; warrant officers, $14,340; petty officers, $3,955; seamen and marines, $910.

RUN-DOWN WOMEN

Peterborough women will please realize that we mean just what we say in the above heading. Letters like the following prove the efficiency of Vinol in such cases:—

"For the benefit of the other tired women, I want to say that I keep house for seven in my family. I became run-down, all played out, I did not seem to have any life in me and looked badly. I read so much about Vinol I decided to try it and I must say it helped me in every way. It built me up so I felt like a new woman, and my friends said they could see a great change in me." PRAISED HIS CAPTOR

Experiences of Returned Canadian Soldier

A correspondent writes: When Pte. Law crossed to France he was transport sergeant, but at his own request he reverted and took a course in bombing and joined the battalion scouts. This is at all times exceedingly risky work, and he was generally to the fore on occasions which demanded courage. In the battle of 2nd June, 1916, he was wounded in the right leg, and also sustained several shrapnel wounds elsewhere. While lying in this condition unconscious he was struck by a shell which tore away his left-hand pocket from his serge, which further incapacitated his arm. Some days later he was picked up by a German patrol, who showed more humanity than the Boche is generally credited with, as he supplied him with water under hot fire and later removed him to a casualty clearing station.

Pte. Law had not much to complain of in camp, though he suffered the usual shortage of food. He found, however, that the Canadians were respected in camp on account of their exploits and dauntlessness, and one of his comrades, McGregor of Toronto, was actually complimented by the commandant for his pluck in twice attempting to escape. Pte. Law thinks that the surgeons treated his leg so "scientifically" as to render it quite certain that he would never again be a combatant.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural colour and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Sea Without Danger

Two of the French periscope rifles, as used in the trenches.

How carefully the Russian revolution had been planned may be gathered from the success with which the supposed intriguers were rounded up. Their fates, so far as known are as follows:

CANADIANS ARE POPULAR

English Soldier Gives Tommy's Idea of Canucks

Writing from the front, Sergt. L. Jackson, 31st Sanitary Section, R.A.M.C., refers to the popularity of the Canadian troops in France. "Since I have been in the trenches," he writes, "I have met your Canadian boys several times. They are a fine lot of fellows and are very popular with the English Tommy. I am stationed at present in a well-known town, which is the place where the Canadians made their name when they first came out. In fact, we took over from a Canadian sanitary section. They left baseball bats, violins, and no end of stuff, and the only reason we could assign for their having done so is that they are paid much better than the English soldier, and can afford many things which are beyond the reach of our fellows. They get lots of fun out of their baseball games. The latter, however, are not popular with our men."

COLONEL BEST BOXER

Col. Hercule Barre of 150th Won Honors in England

At an assault-at-arms in Witty Camp, England, between Canadians and English forces, Col. Hercule Barre, of the 150th French-Canadian Battalion, who was wounded in the first battle of Ypres, and made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, won second prize in the Middleweight Open class of boxing, and first honors in the officers' class. Sergeant "Bob" Aikin, a member of Col. Barre's regiment, for some years probably one of the best known figures in the hotel business in Montreal, won the second prize, in the Open Heavyweights. Col. Barre, whom Sir Sam Hughes described as a "hard-bitten fellow and a tough soldier," recruited and commanded the 150th. He had already been on active service with the 14th Battalion of the First Contingent, and was returned wounded.

TWELVE MILES OF GOLD

Some Idea of Size of Britain's Great War Loan

"How difficult it is," says a writer in a London paper, "for anyone to form even a faint idea of what a vast sum like £1,000,312,950 really means! If it were possible to collect ingots of pure gold to this amazing value, they would fill a line of trucks extending along a railway for upwards of twelve miles. As a matter of fact, there would be in that train at least half the gold in the world."

How Spies Are Outwitted

A London paper writes: Long after all the commercial world had forgotten the existence of such a thing, the British Foreign Office used a sand shaker to dry its important written documents. Then specially manufactured ink blotting paper was used, but this was not found to be spy proof, and a return to the sand shaker was contemplated, when someone suggested the simple expedient of a small absorbent roller. These rollers have since been used for drying diplomatic documents. When such a roller has been run up and down a document once or twice, the cleverest spy in the world is at liberty to try his hand at deciphering the impressions.

AERIAL DICTIONARY

The gallant members of the R.F.C. and the R.N.A.S. are fond of using slang terms in their everyday talk about their work.

Bump—Is a patch of rarefied air.

Bus, The—Pilot's slang; means any aeroplane.

Cold Feet—A condition indicating that a man has lost his nerve.

Control Lever, The—The lever with which the pilot controls the machine. It works both the warp and the elevator.

Drift, To—To be carried to either side of the true course by a current of air.

Hun, A—Is the Royal Flying Corps name for a youth who has not yet taken his flying certificate.

Joy Stick, The—The air pilot's slang for control stick.

Nose Dive, To—Sometimes the expression "volpique" is used. A nose dive is when the machine is descending in a vertical direction to the earth.

Pancake, To—Is for the machine to fall flat to the ground.

Pylon Pilot, A—A pylon pilot is a gentleman who prefers flying before a large and admiring crowd at an aerodrome to war flying.

Quire, A—The R.N.A.S. name for the youth who has not yet taken his aeroplane certificate.

Spin, A—Is the most unpleasant sensation possible in mid air. It usually occurs after over-banking, with the result that the aeroplane spins round like a top, and finally crashes to earth.

Stunt, A—A bomb raiding expedition.

MAKING IT PLAIN

A common mistake which some people continue to make is to accept from a druggist an "extract" of cod livers thinking they will get the benefits of an emulsion of cod liver oil.

The difference is very great. An "emulsion" contains real cod liver oil, which has had the hearty endorsement of the medical profession for many years, while an "extract" is a product which contains no oil and is highly alcoholic.

Scott's Emulsion is the standard emulsion of the world. It guarantees the highest grade of real cod liver oil, skilfully blended with glycerine and hypophosphites, and is endorsed by good physicians everywhere.

GIRL MUNITIONERS IN BRAVEST OF ROLES

Long Hours and Hard Work on Night Shifts For Thousands of Britain's Daughters

An Englishman writes: Few who go comfortably to bed at their accustomed hour realize the strenuous efforts and continuous labor exerted throughout the night, and every night, by a considerable section of their fellows. Thousands of girls have answered their country's call and left the busy cities for munition areas to fall into line in the ranks of those who are responsible for the maintenance of the output of the necessary explosives. The scenes of their endeavors are mostly situated among lonely hills or desolate marshes. In many cases housing accommodation immediately near the great factories is inadequate, and thousands, after twelve long hours of work, have to walk or ride several miles to their resting places.

The work goes on with persistent ceaselessness night and day. Nor is it gloomily undertaken; nearly everywhere the girls sing as they work. At about eight o'clock they go to "breakfast," and somewhere between midnight and one o'clock "dinner" is ready for them. By common consent these names are given to the meals, for to these girls night is as day.

Woe betide the hapless one who shows signs of the "Old Man"—a name given to sleepiness; merciless is the sarcasm brought to bear on the offender. Everything looks orderly and quiet, prosaic and matter-of-fact, but all realize the danger that lurks on every hand. The machinery alone offers the risk of minor accidents, and within the factory there is a hospital beautifully fitted out with all necessary appliances for immediate aid.

Smiling Amid Danger

Sometimes a finger may be caught within the grip of the unfeeling rion. Instantly another girl fills the sufferer's gap, as her brother does in the trenches. The work must go on! Sometimes when the air is heavy and the gaseous fumes rise sluggishly, a girl may be carried fainting from the rooms. But work does not slacken, and these same girls make light of such mishaps, returning with a song upon their lips.

Danger greater still lurks everywhere, and smiling, happy-looking girls are not ignorant of the fact, but like true heroines they cheerfully face the risks and invite others to do the same.

WAR CREATES INVENTIONS

What Happened When Great Britain Blockaded France

That new and more nutritious foods will be introduced as a result of the war, none who have studied the subject will deny. Great wars have always affected the question of the people's food supply, and brought to their notice not only new commodities but how best to conserve their own food resources. For instance, a hundred years ago Britain was at war with France. She blockaded her ports just as to-day she blockades those of Germany. The result was that very little overseas foodstuffs reached France, and Napoleon found himself seriously embarrassed as to food supplies for his armies. He wanted something more for his men besides things that were dried or smoked—a desire that was enhanced by his knowledge that huge quantities of perishable foods were wasted because of the lack of adequate means of preserving them. He therefore offered a prize of $2,500 to anyone who would devise a practical method of preserving such foodstuffs. A method was soon discovered, and out of it has grown the world's canning industry.

WAR OF ALL THE RACES

General Smuts in German East Africa had three divisions under his command—two from South Africa and a third, including the Indian and British contingents—altogether a "heterogeneous collection," says he, "including Dutch, Bengalis, Baluchis, Kashmiris, Pathans, Punjabis, Cape Boys (South African half-breeds), East African natives, West Indian negroes and Baganda (natives of Uganda)." There were also British blue-jackets operating along the coast, an armored motor battery, and Portuguese and Belgian forces.

Recruits Must "Keep Out"

The Lord Chief Justice of England ruled that a military representative at a military service tribunal had no right to be present while the tribunal was considering its decision in private.

PAPER FAMINE IN ENGLAND.

Military Officers Notified to Restrict Their Use of Stationery.

LONDON, April 19.—The shortage of paper in England is now appreciated in the Canadian camps by military officers. Orders are issued that half sheets of notepaper only are to be used. Where the letters are unlikely to extend over such a space, a smaller size than foolscap must be used whenever possible. Letters to headquarters need no longer be sent in duplicate and triplicate, except under special circumstances. Coloured attached slips and such like are to be dispensed with whenever possible, and envelopes are to be sparingly used.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

LONG WAR, SAYS GERARD.

And "Tango Lizards," He Adds, Must Do Their Bit.

TRENTON, N.J., April 19.—James W. Gerard, formerly Ambassador to Germany, was the principal speaker to-night at a patriotic meeting held on the plaza in front of City Hall. He received a great ovation when he appeared on the platform with Governor Edge, former Governor Stokes, and Colonel E. C. Stahl, a veteran of the civil war. Mayor Donnelly presided.

William Ogdensberg, 77 years old, a veteran of the civil war, sitting near the platform, dropped dead of heart failure from excitement.

Mr. Gerard predicted that the war would be a long and hard one for the United States. "This is not going to be an easy war for the United States," he said. "Many of you men will soon be called to the colours. Don't let the brave men go to the front to fight while the 'tango lizards' remain in the rear."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Their Chauffeur

By F. A. MITCHEL

When the pan European war broke out two American girls were touring in Germany in a motorcar. They were at Nuremberg at the time and made a bee line for Paris. They had not gone fifty miles from the old town before they were halted by a troop of Uhlans, and their car was impressed into the service of the government.

They were standing in the road, not knowing what to do, when a man came riding on horseback. Seeing two girls looking as forlorn as a couple of chickens in a shower, he drew rein and asked them in German if there was anything he could do for them. They spoke the language tolerably well and told him what had happened. He looked about him for a place where they might be temporarily housed and said:

"The schloss is the nearest abode. I think you had better go there. The count has joined his command, but his mother, the countess, will be at home and I am sure will welcome luckless strangers."

The girls thanked the speaker and resolved to take his advice. Turning in at the gateway of the grounds, they ascended to the entrance of the schloss. No one being there, they passed through it and entered a court. An automobile was the only movable article in sight, and as they approached it a living object crawled from under it. He was clad in overalls and begrimed. He rose and, facing the girls, looked at them inquiringly.

They told their story and said they wished to go to France. He told them that he was quite sure the countess would welcome them. He was endeavoring to get the automobile in order that it might take him to Wurttemberg. He would take them there, and from Wurttemberg they might find conveyance to Paris. This suited them exactly. The man said that he was not fit to accompany them, but pointed to a door at which they might gain admittance to the schloss. They went to the door, rang a bell, and a maid appeared.

"We were told," said one of them, "by the chauffeur that if we applied at this door we might see the countess. Please tell her that two American girls whose car has been taken by the government would be grateful for shelter till they can go forward on their journey."

The maid asked them to enter and, leaving them in a reception room, went away. Presently she returned and led them to a room where a white headed old lady received them and invited them to be her guests as long as they found it convenient.

They told her that they had seen in the court a man working on an automobile who was intending to go to Wurttemberg and had offered to take them with him. At this moment a voice called from above. "Mother!" and the old lady excused herself and left the room. Presently she returned and said that the auto would go to Wurttemberg the next morning and she did not doubt that from there they would be able to make their way to Paris. They were shown to a room by the maid and when they had made a toilet returned to the drawing room.

"I have heard," said one of the girls, "that you have parted with your son, who has gone to join the army. It must be hard to send him away under such circumstances."

"Indeed it is" replied the countess.

The girls supped with the countess and ate a hearty meal, for they were hungry. In the early evening they chatted with their hostess, but were tired and went early to their rooms, where they slept as soundly as if they had not been dispossessed of their only means of conveyance.

The morning was bright, but hot. They breakfasted with the countess, and after breakfast she disappeared for an hour, when the maid announced that the auto was ready and led them to a porte-cochere where it stood. The countess was there with a man in uniform. He turned as they approached, and they recognized him whom they had mistaken for a chauffeur.

"I regret," he said, "that I have not been able to show you any attention. My chauffeur was summoned two days ago to join his regiment, leaving me with an auto needing repairs and no one but myself to repair it. We who depend upon servants do not realize how much we are indebted to them till they are snatched away from us."

The girls looked at each other and smiled. They had mistaken a count for a chauffeur, and when they had referred to him as such to his mother he had doubtless followed them into the house by another entrance and on hearing their words had called her out and asked her to leave them in their mistake.

The ride to Wurttemberg proved an enjoyable one, and before it was finished they were all laughing at the mistake that had been made. They were in no danger of losing the car since an officer of the Bavarian army was at the wheel. On arriving at their destination he secured them a safe conduct to Paris and saw to it that they were given passage on the last train that went there.

They reached Paris in safety and succeeded in getting to England, crossing the channel with darkened ports. But they were a long time finding passage to America. When they got home they boasted that they had been carried to the French border by a chauffeur who was a count and a major in the German army.

DISREGARDS RED TAPE.

Lieut.-Col. Marlow an Indefatigable Worker in Army Medical Service

They say this is a war of young men, and a striking example of that truth is Lieut.-Col. F. W. Marlow, the head of the medical service in Toronto military division, who has not only the charge of all the medical matters in this immense business of gathering and sending forth troops, but who has undertaken, and has won widespread respect through, the still greater work of providing for the returned soldier. Lieut.-Col. Marlow is only 38 years of age. Yet it is very doubtful whether any administrator in the whole military machine has so many serious and undelegateable duties.

But, for all his youth, this is Lt.-Col. Marlow's name in full, giving him all his titles and degrees: Lieut.-Colonel Frederick William Marlow, A.D.M.S., M.D., C.M., F.T.M.C., M.C.P.S., L.R.C.P. (London), F.R.C.S. (England), F.A.C.S., associate professor of gynaecology at the University of Toronto!

The letters A.D.M.S. mean Assistant Director of Medical Service, which is the title of the head of the medical department of a military division. All the other letters are titles he has won in the sphere of medical science.

Lieut.-Colonel Marlow succeeded to the post of A.D.M.S. when Dr. J. T. Fotheringham went overseas. Today he has not only to see to the general welfare of the Army Medical Corps, but his duties cover the medical care and examination of every soldier in the bigger part of Ontario. When the troops marched from Niagara it was Lieut.-Colonel Marlow who had to go over the route and supervise all camps. He had to make all arrangements for the care of road casualties. All permanent camps, such as the Exhibition, the old General Hospital, camps at Oshawa, Brantford, and all over the division, have to be inspected by him and seen to be kept in good condition.

It was in connection with this returned soldier problem that Colonel Marlow earned public esteem. He took the plan for a system of convalescent homes, which he and his associates had evolved, and saw it through to its logical application. When the muddle at the Discharge Depot was uncovered, Col. Marlow was one of the men called to Quebec to help handle the big rush of returned men; and while there, he took the opportunity of lending his wits to the untanglement of the muddle. For months Colonel Marlow has argued that returned soldiers should not, except in simple cases, be dealt with at Quebec, but should be sent on to their home division, there to be held and examined and finally disposed of. It was the simplest and most effective way, and it permitted also of the exercise of personal consideration for the returned soldier.

Personal consideration is one of Col. Marlow's unique points. He is accessible. It is so hard to reach the heads of departments. But possibly on account of his youth, which gives him an inexhaustible well of energy, Colonel Marlow is to be seen any day giving a hearing to the plainest soldier, while gold braid waits its turn. He is no flunkey. And he doesn't do any tagging after anyone.

Canadian Wheat Saves Belgium.

It is interesting to note in connection with the study of the war from an economic point that to-day the price of bread in Belgium is the same as it is in England. Bread of the best quality made from flour, ground from Canadian wheat, has been kept at the level price and unaffected by war, through the good offices of the Belgian Relief Committee.

This committee received a large share of its wheat and flour from Canada through the generosity of the Canadian people, shipped from the Canadian committee's headquarters in Montreal, and its allotment is so regulated that there could be no advance in the price to the people. Of course, a large part of the bread is actually distributed free to those who have no money—for the committee sees that all have sustenance—but in such cases the commune either pays, or gives an obligation to pay, for the bread at the standard price.

This has been accomplished as a small part of the wonderful and almost incomprehensible work of the Relief Committee. The committee has seen to it that rich and poor are treated alike in the distribution of bread. No matter what a man's resources may be, he can receive only his allotment of bread each day and through the same channels that the poor man receives his.

Every Man Finds His Measure in a Semi-ready Suit

Science and a careful compilation of physiological facts has demonstrated the Semi-ready Physique Type System—which has made possible the tailoring of most expensive cloth to the try-on stage without risk of a single misfit.

Breast and waist measures change. Height is the standard—the basis of the seven divisions and the five sub-divisions in the Physique Types—on which Semi-ready garments are designed.

A suit not intended for your physique type can seldom be made to fit even by the expert tailor. Any man can know his own type by taking his height and weight and studying the size ticket on the Semi-ready garment.

Semi-ready clothes are designed to fit with the least amount of alteration. All the parts are made with outlets.

The label and the price is in the pocket of every genuine Semi-ready tailored garment. Look for it!

WAR INSURANCE CLAIMS

To End of 1916, a Total of $6,869,637 Has Been Paid.

OTTAWA, April 19.—The extent of war claims incurred by insurance companies in Canada is indicated in returns made in the insurance branch. The companies were asked to give figures for three years under the headings: Enlisted soldiers killed in action or dead of wounds; enlisted soldiers dying from other causes, and the persons engaged in war service as civilians dying as a result of military operations.

In 1914, death claims under these headings against Dominion companies were incurred to the extent of $17,595, and by provincial fraternal societies, etc., to the amount of $2,000.

In 1915, the Dominion companies' claims were $1,939,735, and provincial concerns, $83,853.

In 1916, the claims incurred by Dominion licensed companies were $4,560,938, and by the provincial licenses $265,516.

NEWS FROM THE OLD LAND

ENGLAND.

Women cashiers have almost entirely superseded men in Britain, and the ladies are giving every satisfaction. It is very exacting work, for there is always somebody trying to "do" the cashier, and quite a few counterfeit notes have been put into circulation. At the busiest time of the day, when the rush is on, hand, brain, and eye have to be swiftly and continually at work. The experienced cashier can tell at a glance the sort of customer she has to deal with. She has to be not only a quick calculating machine, but also a reader of character as well. She manages it, on the whole, admirably and is very rarely let in by a swindler. Recently a man presented a note which was a forgery. The girl was making up the change, when she noticed that a certain mark was not on the face of the note. She made an excuse about getting some larger coins, and called the manager, to whom she told her suspicions. The man was arrested, and when his rooms were searched six partially forged notes were found by the police.

The manufacture of gramaphone needles, which before the war was largely in the hands of Germany, is now being successfully carried on in Sheffield. Of late, however, the demand for hackle pins, for Government purposes has been so great that the output of gramophone needles has had to be reduced. Hackle pins which are used for combing textiles, and gramaphone needles are alike, except in length. One factory employs about 50 girls. Each is provided with a navy blue serge overall, and is expected to provide her own working dress, many of the girls choosing trousers for preference. The girls seem to enjoy their work, judging from the sounds of singing that are to be heard mingled with the hum of the machinery. It is believed that there will be great openings for workers in this trade after the war, but it will be essential that the proper machinery should be supplied.

Mr. Asquith has received from the French Government a diploma to the memory of his son, Lieut. Raymond Asquith, to commemorate his death "in the cause of freedom and humanity," and the "homage and gratitude of the French nation." This diploma is exactly similar to those given to every French family which lost a relative in the war. Its presentation to Mr. Asquith has raised the suggestion that the British Government should institute something of the some kind. In France the diploma was instituted by Parliament as late as July this year, and the work of presentation was taken up with great enthusiasm. The first diploma was presented by the President of the Republic on July 15, on the occasion of the great military review, and, fittingly, it went to the relatives of the first French soldier to fall in the war.

Trade unionism for women has recently been discussed in England. It is pointed out that women now are very much in demand, and that it was not right that a woman should take a man's place and under-sell her labour. Standing alone, women could not do anything, but united with men in trade unions and with the parliamentary vote behind them, they could hold their own.

The control over modern aircraft was shown recently in London, when after "looping the loop" five times at height of about 1,000 feet, an airman performed the looping feat sideways, wing over wing, the biplane revolving like a windmill" as it descended to within 150 feet of the ground. At this height the airman gracefully righted the machine and again soared upwards.

Chemical Glassware and specimens of laboratory porcelain, which before the war were almost entirely produced abroad, were exhibited at the third British Industries Fair in London. In the number of exhibitors the toy section is the strongest. This trade also was practically non-existent here before 1914.

The marriage rate in Britain for the past year was the highest on record, the birth rate, on the other was the lowest. Infant mortality was very low, being at the rate of one hundred and ten deaths per thousand births. This is five above the rate for 1914, but below the average for the ten years 1905-1914.

In recognition of the excellent work done by the technical schools in teaching munition manufacture, Birmingham Education Committee, has recently been the recipient of a grant of fifty-seven thousand dollars from the munitions department.

Male bellringers of Dorking having all joined the Forces, ladies of the town have determined to take their places in the belfry in order that the bells shall not be silent when peace is declared and the regular ringers return.

It was stated at the annual meeting of the Court of Governors of Birmingham University that 762 of the present and past staff and students had enlisted or taken commissions.

The variety of the food supplies by the canteens is one of the chief causes for the remarkable absence of illness among munition workers in Britain.

A pullet laid an egg while a sale was being held in Durham for war charities recently. The egg was offered for sale, and sold and resold until it finally realized fifteen dollars.

Charged at Newport, Mon., the other day with stealing beer, three boys said they poured it down a sink, as they wanted to sell the bottles to get money to go to a picture hall.

A malt clearing house has been set up in England, to apportion and regulate stocks of malt among brewers in accordance with the restricted brewing order.

A wedding-ring maker recently applied to a West Ham tribunal for exemption. He told the court that his firm was now doing an enormous trade.

Poultry-keeping is to be taught in London County Council evening schools.

IRELAND.

The daylight sawings scheme sadly bewildered the Irish farmers, and a visitor thus describes his experience:—"I had occasion once to stop a prosperous-looking farmer jogging leisurely home in an ass cart, to ask the time. 'Gettin' on, sorr, for half foive by what you want to know," was the reply, supplemented,, as I thanked him and moved on, by the further information, "But ,by God's own toime, sorr, it's not gone half four yet."

Potato Supplies in the Dublin markets have been diminishing during the past fortnight, and unless farmers in County Dublin and in the north of Ireland release their stocks immediately the City of Dublin will be without potatoes. The Department of Agriculture has nothing to do with the distribution of the supply, and matters have become so serious that the potato factors have asked the Chief Secretary to receive a deputation on the subject.

Ireland has been much concerned lately over the report that the Sunday mail delivery was to be abolished. However, the rumour was found to be entirely unfounded. The Irish depend upon the cross Channel service from England, which reaches Ireland late Saturday for their British mail and newspapers and as it is too late to deliver them on Saturday, the Sunday post is always looked forward to, especially in the Provinces.

A mysterious Irish cable censor has been operating at Ballinskelligs, Kerry. He gave his name as "Captain" Staples, and took up his residence at a hotel. He never paid his bill, but the proprietor did not , take steps about it, thinking he was a Government official. Then one day he disappeared, and has not been seen since. It is suspected that he was an agent of the enemy, rather than of the Government.

The death recently took place in Dublin of the O'Conor Don. The O'Conor Don, who succeeded his father in 1906, was a descendant of the ancient Irish Kings of Connaught, and could trace his lineage back to Turlough Mor O'Conor, King of Connaught, and afterwards monarch of Ireland, who died in 1156.

SCOTLAND.

In the Fishing villages of Cullen, Buckie, Lossiemouth, Portgordon and Duffstown the women are arranging to engage in fishing during the coming season. The majority of the men have joined the trawlers or the navy, and the women folks, who are strong and accustomed to hard, manual labour, will begin with line fishing, and in July attempt the herring fishing.

The movement in Scotland for preparing for another war loan is widespread, principally in ammunition towns. In many places masters of munitions' works have set the example by allocating so much of their estimated profits to a prospective war loan account, and many of the employees have ear-marked a certain percentage of their wages for this purpose.

Before the war there were only some thirty teachers of French in Edinburgh, apart from the language classes in the university. Now there are over one hundred, and all are doing well. Some of the teachers are French-speaking Belgians, who, driven from their own country by the Kaiser's hosts, have found a safe haven in many parts of Britain.

In Stirling boys over fourteen years of age have begun to prepare the grounds of aristocratic families for spring sowing. Already 1,000 acres have been hypothecated for growing vegetables, and it is believed that all of this will be put down in vegetables. In Alloa poultry raising is being encouraged.

When Peter The Great Was Tsar

Days of long ago were recalled when in the English Chancery Division Mr. Maugham, K. C., asked for leave under the Courts Emergency Acts, to issue writ of sequestration against the property and effects of Don Pedro Suarez, described as the Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary in London for the Republic of Bolivia, in order to obtain payment of $80,000, which he, as the administrator of the estate of a relative, had been ordered to pay into court.

Counsel said that in the ordinary course liberty to proceed to execution would be granted but the defendant had contended that he was entitled to the protection afforded by his position as Minister to a foreign Power. The defendant, however, had deliberately waived the privilege, having submitted himself to the court, and judgment having been pronounced against him.

In asking for the writ counsel made an offer not to attempt to enter the Bolivian Legation or to attempt to seize the defendant's emoluments as Minister or any of his goods or chattels which were necessary to his personal comfort or dignity as such.

Apart from these things execution could be proceeded with against such investments, real estate, and cattle as he might have.

In dealing with the law on the point Mr. Maugham cited the Act passed in the reign of Queen Anne, which was said to protect the representatives of foreign Powers. It had a curious origin. During the time that Peter the Great, the Tsar of Russia, was living in London, he was arrested in the street for a debt of $200.

As a result seventeen persons who took part in the arrest were committed to prison; but the Tsar so deeply resented the affront that he demanded that the sheriff and others should be punished with instant death.

Queen Anne informed him that no such punishment could be inflicted unless it was in accordance with the law, but in order to satisfy his imperial majesty a bill was passed into law with the object of preventing and punishing such outrageous incidents in the future.

A copy of the Act, elegantly illuminated and accompanied by an autograph letter from the Queen, was sent to Peter the Great at Moscow, and he accepted this as full satisfaction for the insult, and the offenders were discharged from further prosecution.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY.

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," w Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Planford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her and on recommendation of a friend I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart write you this letter."

The French Have Taken Over A Score Of Towns And Villages

German Losses Have Been Staggering---Two Complete Divisions Wiped Out By the French Artillery at Jouvrecourt---Drive is Undiminished in Its Force and To-day's Official Communique Reports Further Progress Made.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

(By Henry Wood)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, April 20. — Seventy-seven square miles of France had been reclaimed up to to-day from the invader by the five days' continuous steady smashing by the French. General Nivelle's men had now progressed over a front of nearly forty miles to a depth of from three-quarters of a mile to four full miles. A score of villages and towns have been taken since Monday, when the great offensive started. The German losses have been staggering. Two complete divisions (forty thousand men), which made a counter attack on Jauvincourt, were literally wiped out by the French artillery alone. Demoralization is spreading among the Germans, even among their officers. Great masses of reinforcements, hurriedly rushed to the line, are unavailing in stopping the advance. "The battle is progressing favorably," is the calm way in which the French military chiefs regard the offensive. "The results exceed the expectations." French officers regard the advance between Ostel and Courtecamp as having reached the proportions of a great success. The utmost strategic importance is attached to the formidable positions captured there.

LONDON, April 20.—Field Marshal Haig struck again last night at Cambrai. "We gained ground in the neighbourhood of Villers Guislain," he reported to-day.

PARIS, April 20.—Undiminished in its force, General Nivelle's great offensive to-day reclaimed more land for France from the invader in fierce fighting at several sections of the forty-mile front. "In the regions of Laffaux and the plateau of Vauclerc, the French further progressed," the War Office statement declared. "In the Champagne violent counter attacks were repulsed with heavy enemy losses. East of the Loivre several lines of German trenches were captured."

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Whether "war prohibition" is to be an emergency measure of the present Congress, will probably be determined by President Wilson and his Cabinet to-day. It is probable Congress will be asked to authorize the Government to take any action deemed necessary in handling food, conservation and distribution during the crisis, and this would include the power to shut off the supply of grain and other food stuffs to distilleries and breweries.

BERLIN (via London), April 20.—The occupation of previously prepared "Siegreid" positions by German troops has been completed, to-day's official statement stated. "The occupation began Monday and was completed yesterday by the abandonment of the bank of the Aisne between Conde and Souprie."

"The enemy follows hesitatingly," the statement said.

(By Perry Arnold)

NEW YORK, April 20.—The fifth day of the French offensive and the forty-fourth of the British "push" found both Allied armies still advancing to-day. Official statements showed General Haig driving his steel wall closer to the Cambrai-St. Quentin line of communications, and thrusting more menacingly directly on the front of Cambrai, while General Nivelle struck trip-hammer blows at a crumbling German defence on the Soissons-Rheims line.

LONDON, April 20.—Despatches to-day from Berne, Switzerland, say that there are signs of serious revolt in Hungary, where Socialists have demanded that Austria-Hungary and other Central Powers make their peace conditions, and seek to engage enemies in peace conferences till an agrement shall be reached.

LONDON, April 20.—A German wireless despatch picked up here to-day declared that no German Socialists had been sent to Stockholm by Chancellor von Bethmann-Holweg, and insisted there were no negotiations there between German and Russian Socialists on separate peace.

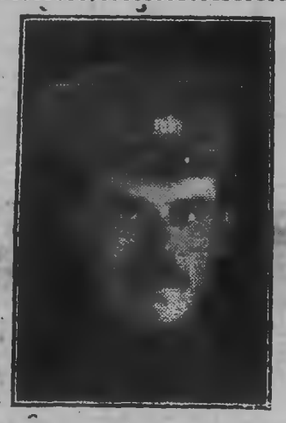
Every Returned Soldier Wanted

In connection with the Church parade on Sunday the Great War Veterans wish to invite every returned officer and man in Peterborough, whether a member or not, to turn out and attend divine service. The service is in memory of the gallant soldiers who fell at Langemarck, and it is expected that every soldier in the city who has been overseas will attend. The wearing of uniforms is authorized for Sunday, and the War Veterans hope to see every officer and man out. The parade will fall in at the Armouries at 10.30 o'clock on Sunday morning and, headed by the Band of the 57th proceed to Knox church.



PTE. FRED HAYLOCK, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who is officially reported wounded.

YPRES ANNIVERSARY

Arrangements for the Tag Day of the Great War Veterans will be completed to-night when the final details in connection with the big campaign will be settled. All ladies who have volunteered to assist may secure their collection boxes at the Barrie Building to-night, any time up to 10 o'clock and it is hoped that every one who is to take part in the drive for funds for the War Veterans will be on hand. The factories are to be visited to-morrow and employees are asked to take notice of this fact. The Daughters of the Empire are co-operating with the Veterans in the campaign and there will be a small army of collectors out to-morrow. It will be a big day, and it is expected that the collection will be a record-breaker.

MISS GUNTHER OF THE WHITE SEWING MACHINE CO.

In the City For One Week

She will be at the Cressman Store for an entire week. During that period she will conduct demonstrations, showing the adaptability of the White machine and demonstrating its many superior advantages. Special prices and easy payments on machines will also be a feature of the big sewing machine week at the Cressman store. The public are asked to remember that the sale and demonstration will last for the one week only.

MORE PETERBOROUGH NAMES ARE REPORTED IN TO-DAY'S CASUALTY LIST

Pte. Alfred Black, Missing Since Zillebeke is Officially Presumed Dead--Pte. Fred Newton Wounded--More 93rd Battalion Members in the List---To-day's General Military News.

Up to to-day the Peterborough newspapers have been supplied with copies of casualty notices, so that when messages were received from Ottawa in regard to local soldiers, the news could be published on the same day. Henceforth this source of information will not be available, and the Examiner appeals to the relatives of Peterborough soldiers to inform this office if any official news is received. They should remember that the citizens generally are vitally concerned in the news of casualties among our boys at the front, and unless relatives will supply the particulars, such information will no longer be available for publication. Please telephone the Examiner if any news is received.

Among the Peterborough casualties recorded to-day is that of Pte. A. Black of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, who is now given as presumed dead. Pte. Black, who left here with B Squadron, 8th C.M.R., has been missing since the battle of Zillebeke in June of last year, and is now regarded by the authorities as dead. His mother received the message this morning.

Two more members of the 93rd Battalion are on the casualty lists to-day, Pte. M. W. Woodbeck, of Lasswade, Ont., and Pte. J. Montgomery of Buckhorn. Both are officially reported wounded.

Pte. Billington Wounded.

Mrs. J. T. Billington, 470 Elm street, received an official message from Ottawa this morning that her son, Pte. William George Billington, Mounted Services, has been admitted to No. 3 General Hospital, Boulogne, on April 11th, wounded slightly in the thigh. Pte. Billington enlisted in B Squadron, 8th C.M.R. and this is the second time he has been on the casualty list. He was wounded at Zillebeke in June last and returned to the front in October.

Pte. Fred Newton, 13 Park street, is officially reported wounded to-day. Pte. Newton enlisted with the 136th Battalion, Port Hope, and went overseas with that unit, afterwards being transferred to another Canadian Battalion at the front. The official message states that Pte. Newton was admitted to hospital at Boulogne on April 13th, suffering from severe wounds in the left arm and thigh.

Pte. Haylock.

Pte. Fred Haylock, who enlisted here with the 39th Battalion early in 1915 and went overseas with that unit, afterwards being transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front, is to-day officially reported wounded. The message states that he was suffering from a gun shot wound in the left arm. His home was on Ware street.

Pte. Bell.

Pte. Harold Bell, who enlisted here on Oct. 1st, 1915, with the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported admitted to hospital at Outreaux on April 10th, suffering from a gun shot wound in the arm. Pte. Bell's father is with the Canadian Engineers, and a brother went overseas recently with the 204th Beavers. His mother resides at 17 Lyall Ave., Toronto.

Pte. Bell was born in Peterborough, but moved to Toronto with his parents six years ago. He went overseas with the 93rd and was transferred to the 1st Canadians.

Pte. E. G. Hardie.

Pte. Edward G. Hardie, formerly of 93rd Battalion, has been seriously wounded, according to an official message received by Mrs. Hardie, 561 Patterson street, this morning. Pte. Hardie was admitted to hospital on April 10th, wounded in the nose and face. He went overseas with Col. Johnston's unit and was transferred in a draft.

More Men Needed.

"Canada will be proud," said His Majesty the King in his message to Sir Douglas Haig, when he learned of the part the men of the Dominion had taken in capturing Vimy Ridge.

It was a splendid achievement and one which is bound to make every Canadian proud of his land.

But the question which is the main consideration is this: Will it cause Canadians to undergo still greater sacrifices?

More men are needed. Sir William Robertson, Chief of the General Staff, said last week that the immediate needs of the Empire at the present time were half a million men between now and July. Is Canada going to contribute her share of these?

The Government is despatching as rapidly as possible all the overseas troops now in training here, and in the course of a few weeks all the battalions will have crossed the ocean. It is necessary that Canada be not left without an adequate force for Home Defence. The active militia, numbering approximately 12,000 men, is not enough. Drafts of overseas troops from these regiments have depleted the ranks, until at the present day hardly any but physically unfit men and men too old for service are left. The Government lays its needs squarely before the people. It needs 50,000 men at once, in order to relieve the overseas troops.

Terms of enlistment, pay, clothing, equipment, subsistence, etc., for the Canadian Defence Force are the same as for overseas troops. As soon as a unit is recruited it will be taken to camp for the summer, and in the fall it will return to winter barracks. The militia regiments have been asked to raise the force and they have already opened up their armouries and are enrolling men. The young men who cannot go overseas, but who would like to do what they can for the country, are invited to become identified with one of these units.

All particulars can be obtained from Lt.-Col. Walker, O. C. the 57th Regiment, at the armouries.

A cable from England states that Lieut. H. C. Gillham, formerly of the 93rd Battalion who was reported wounded in the battle of Vimy Ridge is now in hospital at Camberwell. Lieut. Gillham was injured in the arm.

The members of the 93rd Band who were transferred to the Canadian Army Medical Corps at Kingston are home on leave.

COBOURG HEAVY BATTERY NOTES

The overseas draft of the Cobourg Heavy Battery has been increased by the following enlistments:

Gilbert Wicks—Cobourg.
G. C. Reid—Cobourg.
J. S. Dickson—Campbellford.
E. H. Wilkinson—Toronto.

The appointment of Lieut. N. C. Bilton as Officer in charge of the next overseas draft has been approved.

The following figures in connection with recruiting of the drafts for the Cobourg Heavy Battery will be of interest:

Since commencement of the war this Battery has recruited 459 men. These are classified as follows:

Men between ages of 18 and 30, single, 360.
Men between ages of 30 and 45, single, 19.
Men between ages of 18 and 45, married, 72.
Men between ages of 18 and 45, widowed, 2.
Men rejected medically unfit after enlistment, 6. Total 459.

The proportion of representatives of the different nationalities and religions is shown by the following table:—

Canadian	342
English	77
Scotch	16
Irish	9
American	9
Russian	1
Other Nationalities	5

The Hindenburg Line Continues To Crumble

Additional Important Gains Made By the French at Numerous Points From Soissons Eastward to the Old Champagne.

MOORE BOOTY CAPTURED

LONDON, April 19.— The southern part of the Hindenburg line in France continues to crumble or fall back before the forces of General Nivelle. Thursday witnessed additional important gains by the French at numerous points from Soissons eastward to the old Champagne, and also the capture of men and guns.

In the latter region north-west of Auberive the French captured strongly-fortified German trenches on a front of a mile and a quarter and made prisoner 150 Germans. Northeast of Soissons the village of Aisy, Jouy and Laffaux and Fort de Conde were captured by the French, while to the east, near Hurtebise, another point of support fell into their hands and with it 500 prisoners and two cannon.

Violent artillery actions are in progress between the Somme and the Oise, in Champagne, near Le Mort Homme, in the Verdun sector, and in Belgium around Dixmude.

The French War Office reports that Wednesday night the Germans threw twelve divisions of fresh men into the fray between Soissons and Auberive in an attempt to hold General Nivelle's forces back, but that their efforts were unavailing.

Will Not Relax Pressure.

A staff correspondent of the Associated Press with the French armies, telegraphing under date of April 19, says:

"The French success in the forward movement has been much more considerable than indicated by the published reports or the army communiques, which narrate a very sober tale of the events. There is no intention of relaxing the pressure on the Germans, who are opposing a tenacious resistance without avail.

"Besides points of formidable strength and most important strategic value, such as Ostel, Courtecon and Vailly, which have fallen before the French assaults, reports sent by runners from reconnoitring parties indicate steady progress everywhere and large captures of material. The staffs take no risks; everything is methodically prepared in order to be as certain as is humanly possible of success before trying to approach each objective point.

"To-day's weather was better for the operations, but it was so misty that aeroplanes were almost useless.

Divisions Annihilated.

"The commanders of the German reinforcements hurrying to the front appear to have lost their heads or have been badly directed in several cases. One division marched directly into wire entanglements and was almost entirely annihilated or taken prisoner. Eighteen new German divisions have been thrown into the front since Monday, several of which were blown virtually to pieces by the French artillery immediately after their arrival. Two divisions, launched directly into an ineffectual counter-attack before Juvincourt, suffered in this way.

Everybody Can Help To-morrow

Everybody can help to make to-morrow's Tag Day of the Great War Veterans a success if they will give according to their means. The query in last night's Examiner, "Would you take 25 cents to go Through What These Veterans Have?" was merely to bring before those who are in a position to give larger sums the importance of the cause. All can help and the youngster's five-cent piece and the ten cents from those to whom the giving of ten cents is a sacrifice, will be just as much appreciated by the Veterans as a cheque from a man of means. Give what you can, but buy a tag. It will all count.

MORE BRITISH VICTORIES OVER TURKISH ARMIES

General Maude Reports Complete Rout of 18th Turkish Army Corps in Mesopotamia

GOOD NEWS FROM EAST

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, April 20.—The complete rout of the Turkish eighteenth army corps and another advance in Mesopotamia north of Bagdad was reported in an official statement to-day.

"On Tuesday night," Gen. Maude reported, "we forced the passage of Shatt-el-Adham, and on Wednesday attacked the main Turkish position, covering Istabulat railway station. We completely routed the eighteenth army corps."

"Our captures counted 27 officers and 1,247 men, with others coming in. Six machine guns were taken. Only the exhaustion of our forces prevented the capture of the enemies' guns. Our casualties were only 73 men," the statement says.

LONDON, April 20.—General Murray has resumed his march to Jerusalem and achieved another victory over the Turks, an official statement from the Egyptian front announced to-day.

"On Tuesday we advanced north of Wadi Ghuzzeh and captured a Turkish position on a front of six and a half miles," the statement said. Wadi Ghuzzeh is a river running into the Mediterranean sea and only a short distance from Ghaza. British troops are now within fifty miles of Jerusalem.

The British attack, delivered against the Turks entrenched close to the Mediterranean, was assisted by bombardment of their positions from warships, the report stated. All British gains were consolidated and fighting was continuing beyond the captured positions yesterday evening.

FRIDAY, MARCH 30, 1917

WAR VETERANS' TAG DAY.

There is only one consideration that justifies the essential humiliation of the necessity for a tag day appeal in the interests of the local members of the Great War Veterans' Association; and that is the opportunity it presents for popular participation in substantial recognition of the great services they have rendered in fighting for us—in fighting for the triumph of the principles of liberty and civilisation to which we owe our possession of the finest citizenship in the world.

The objects of the Association are so admirable, represent so laudable an ambition, that it justifies a repetition of them from Wednesday's Examiner. The objects of the Association, as expresed in its constitution, are:

(1) To perpetuate the close and kindly ties of mutual service in the Great War and the recollections and associations of that experience.

(2) To preserve the memory and records of those who suffered and died for the Empire; to see to the erection of monuments to their valour and to the establishment of an annual memorial day.

(3) To ensure that proper provision is made for the care of the sick, wounded and needy among those who have served and among their dependents.

It will be noted that the veterans who have stood shoulder to shoulder in the fighting lines with to keep their ranks "dressed." Though they may have served in separate spheres of action, By the bond of a common service in a common cause for a common country, they have become comrades. To keep whole the ties and recollections of the war, to keep green the graves and memories of the fallen brave, to look after, provision for, sick and needy of those who have served, and their dependents, requires a centre of intercourse and association—a rendezvous, a rallying point, a home—in order to keep up the esprit de corps and maintain the intimacy of association that separation in the activities of civilian life may otherwise tend to impair.

The Veterans will need material help, while they are being fitted into the places in civilian life they will have to occupy. This of itself is a problem, and the government is to be commended for its action in granting three months' pay and allowances to honourably discharged Canadian soldiers, till they become settled.

But that does not provide a common bond for the local Association, and it is hoped that the public will be be spontaneously liberal and substantial in response as have been the spirit of service, service itself, and sacrifice by those who have come back with honourable scars and records of excellent service.

The date of the day of appeal—Saturday—should revive the memories of the splendid work of Canadian soldiers earlier in the war, when they set a standard of courage, fighting steadiness, endurance and sacrifice, that has made the name of Canada a shining mark in the annals of a war of great achievements—a record that has been maintained all through the stern fighting from Ypres to Vimy Ridge. The eve of Ypres, when Canadians met the shock of gas, and with their flank uncovered by the retirement of other troops, held their ground against a fierce, largely outnumbering enemy, and by their "gallantry and determination, saved the situation"; stayed the onrush of the Germans towards Calais and saved Britain froom a possible invasion, is a suggestive date. Recollection of this great day, in which many of our returned veterans had a part, should stir memories in our minds when we meet the Daughters of the Empire on Saturday.

The returned veterans fought for us; they rallied round the flag and kept it flying midst gas and smoke and shot and shell, and they now want a flag for their home headquarters. Among the contributions on Saturday, some liberal and loyal citizen might express his contribution by a fine flag for the Great War Veterans' Association of Peterborough.

A WELCOME EXIT.

While the passing of a human life out of existence—the death of a man—is a natural subject of regret, the death of a tyrant will be hailed with joy. General Von Bissing, the Hun Governor-General, or rather the Brigand-in-Charge, of Belgium, is dead—peace to his human ashes, and curses upon his official memory. He was seventy-three years of age, and lived three years longer than he had a right to live, according to the royal Psalmist, who tells us that our years are "three score and ten, and if by reason of strength" they are more, "yet is their strength labour and sorrow." This was literally true of Von Bissing. He was appointed Governor-General of Belgium in 1914, three years ago, and the days of his years in office have been "labour," for he has been as busy as his master, the devil, in doing the devil's work; and his years of office have been "sorsow"; for he has tortured and oppressed Belgium to the Kaiser's taste. He has been the agent of the foulest tyranny of government, the world has ever known. It was bad enough to outrage the neutrality and territory of Belgium, but it was infinitely worse to harry and outrage the people, to punish with death and worse, people in their own country for the slightest resentment of the presence and outrages of their oppressors.

Endless infamy will attend the name of Von Bissing for the monstrous murder of Edith Cavell, who was killed in cold blood, with her hands still red from the wounds of German soldiers she had tended with the loving skill of her craft in common with other soldiers of her own kind, in the mission of mercy she was filling. His reign of ruin was marked by ceaseless outrage upon the persons and property that had been outraged by the invasion of Belgium. It is a splendid thing to see die an official who carried out with fiendish fidelity the commands of his fiendish masters.

Please God, it will not be long before we can write finis after the curse of Prussian militarism, which regarded Von Bissing as a hero. The German papers attribute his death to over-work—in his evil work.

A Royal Proclamation

Meetings At Gospel Hall Continue to Grow in Interest

Meetings in Gospel Hall continue to grow in interest and attendance. The singing last evening was especially cheery and attractive, including a duet by the Misses Martshorn. Mr. Harper took occasion to thank the local papers for publishing the reports of the meetings. To-morrow being the last service of the week a large crowd is expected at which time Mr. Harper will speak on "An Eastern Love Story."

The message of last evening was taken from Acts 18: 38-41. The Evangelist showed the need of the Gospel Message in the occurrenc of the word sin. He enlarged on sins universality, power and penalty and then showed the value of the Message in the Person of Whom it speaks even the Lord Jesus Christ. The birth, life and death of our Lord was reviewed and sinners exhorted to trust Him in order that they might enjoy the "power of the Message" which is forgiveness of sins and justification from all things. The differ- Sale Price ..... 5c ence between the two blessings was illustrated by the well known case of Capt. Dreyfus of some years ago. The response to the Message was then dealt with by the Evangelist who said it was It was a challenge to foith—all who believe are justified—that faith apart from works or prayers would save the guiltiest sinner. He also said it was a warning to unbelief. The service was concluded with a telling incident that happened at the Niagara Falls some years ago. Those who were out of Christ were exhorted to believe in Christ to the salvation of their souls.

The people of Peterborough are enjoying these services and speak of blessing received.

VICTORY OVER WOUNDS

The Disabled Soldier's Resurrection

Canada should be as proud of her wounded soldiers' victory over their wounds as she is of the glorious fights in which they fell. Their struggle up from the depths of disablement is often as hard, and even as heroic, as their desperate defence of Ypres or their dashing capture of the Vimy ridge.

We hear little, altogether too little, of these hard-won victories won by disabled men, because they are fought out in the seclusion of a hospital, not in the theatre of war with the whole world looking on. But such victories equally deserve public recognition. They show the same spirit, the same pluck, and still more indomitable perseverance.

A preacher on Easter morning was thanked for the inspiring sermon he had just preached, on the Resurrection. He said: "I had my text sitting in front of me—a man in khaki with an empty sleeve. He has had two resurrections already. He was buried by a shell explosion, and was dug out only just in time to save his life. That was the first. He spent months in hospital, fighting his way back to health. That was the second.

"Doctoring and nursing of course did much for him; so did the exercises and occupations that they provide nowadays—perhaps the best part of the treatment. But the man himself was working out his own resurrection, by resolutely putting his own will-power into the task. Now he is almost ready to go out into the world, a better and abler man, he says, than he was before, in spite of his lost arm.

"While the rest of us are thinking of a resurrection beyond the grave, he has won a resurrection this side of it, to a new life of activity and independence among his fellow-countrymen."

Authentic cases resembling that are not rare in the records of the Military Hospitals Commission. Here are a few that have just been communicated to us:

A mechanic who enlisted in the Princess Patricia's Regiment, was wounded, returned to Canada, spent three months in a convalescent hospital, and now earns double his former pay, having taken full advantage of the mechanical drawing and arithmetic classes carried on there. Writing to the hospital instructor he says:

"When I enlisted, I was earning about $3 a day at my trade. At present, and since my discharge from military service, I am able now to hold a job as foreman in a machine shop, with more than twice the salary I was getting before. This benefit to me is greatly due to your practical information, and my only regret is that I was unable, after my discharge, to continue instruction with you as you had advised."

Another letter received is from an ex-private in the 13th Battalion. Before enlistment, he was getting $12 a week as driver on a city milk round. "I always had a liking for drawing," he says, "and felt that if ever I had the chance I would take up a course in mechanical drawing." This opportunity came to him at one of the Commission's convalescent hospitals. After six weeks' application to the work there, he was able to secure an appointment with a salary beginning at $75 a month, with good prospects of advancement.

A locomotive fireman enlisted, was severely wounded, and had to have his left arm amputated. Under the Commission's scheme of re-education, which is offered to all men incapacitated for their former work by service, he received special training in telegraphy and railway routine. As a result he secured an appointment as station agent and despatcher, at $110 a month.

Still another patient, formerly a mechanic, passed the Civil Service qualifying examination after instruction in hospital, and has got a Custom House position at $900 a year, rising to $1,500.

A man who had been a guide and trapper, and had never handled tools, returned from the front with one eye destroyed by a wound, and the sight of the other eye impaired. In spite of all these old and new disabilities, by putting his mind to it he became a first-class carpenter, after three months in the hospital workshop.

Equally remarkable is the case of a Polish labourer. He came to Canada six years ago, and worked in a coal mine till he enlisted. At the front, he was both gassed and buried. Though he knew absolutely nothing about carpentry to begin with, after two months of instruction in hospital work he was able to hold his own with any ordinary carpenter.

Not every man, of course, can "double his pay." But one of the most cheering facts proved by experience during the war has been this—that almost all the disabled men, including the very seriously wounded, can be equipped once more with power to earn a good living.

And often, as Lord Shaughnessy said the other day, the occupations and training provided by the Military Hospitals system "reveal astonishing talents which even the man himself did not know he possessed."

May Buy The Ontario Power Company's Plant

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, April 20.— It is understood the Hydro-Electric Commission has offered twenty-five millions for the power plant, transmission lines and all other rights of the Ontario Power Company which is at present a powerful competitor with the Commission for Niagara Falls power. If it goes through the Commission will be materially strengthened in source of supply for Central and Western Canada.

Notice

Any person who has been thinking about looking into the "Handy Volume" Issue of The Encyclopaedia Britannica is hereby advised that he must HURRY UP and send for our descriptive, illustrated book or he will be too late to get one of the few remaining sets.

Our stock of Britannica sets, printed on genuine India paper, is growing less so rapidly that after Wednesday, April 25th, there will not be time enough for any one to write us, get the book describing the Britannica, read it and decide about buying before the last set is sold.

We do not want any one to buy the Britannica unless he knows it will prove useful to him in his everyday life—his work, his business, in improving his mental equipment and his place in the world.

To know whether the Encyclopaedia Britannica will be of direct help to you in your business, in your home life, in the education and mental development of children, you ought to see and examine the entire set. This you can do at

TREBILCOCK BROS.

Peterboro's Largest Bookstore 417 GEORGE STREET

If for any reason you are unable to go and see a complete set of the Britannica, you should write us for full information AT ONCE.

The end of the sale of this great work in its handiest form is almost here. We can almost put a finger on that date now.

You can judge the closeness of this date for yourself when we say, No more descriptive booklets will be sent out after Wednesday, April 25th, because by then there will be so few sets of the Britannica left that the last set will be sold before anyone can get the Britannica literature, study it, make up his mind about buying and get his order back to us.

THEREFORE, STRIKE NOW

See the Britannica or write for information today.

If the publishers could get enough of this wonderful genuine India paper, that makes each volume of the "Handy Volume" Britannica only one inch thick, we could easily sell many thousands more sets. But they cannot get any more. No more India paper can be made because the war has made it impossible to get any more of two necessary raw materials—flax from Belgium, Germany or Ireland and hemp from Russia.

If you are at all interested in owning this great library of facts, be advised NOW and send in the coupon for full information. You have only just enough time to get and read this literature and make up your mind. Strike Now. Sign and send the coupon today.

Remember that you have the use of the books while paying for them. You only have to send $1.00 with the order and $3.00 a month (for the cloth binding) for a limited number of months.

Gentlemen:

Please send me at once your free illustrated, descriptive booklet about the "Handy Volume" Issue of the new Encyclopaedia Britannica, printed on genuine India paper.

I want this so that I can learn whether the Britannica will be useful to me in my work and my home, and so that I can decide before all the remaining sets are sold whether or not I want to buy.

Send me full information as to the smallest monthly payment I will have to make for one of these remaining sets; also the lowest cash price.

Potatoes Scarce And Dear Local Orders Go Unfilled

Lindsay and Norwood Asked For Shipments This Morning But Had to Be Refused—Labour Men Wanted 100 Bags But Couldn't Get Them.

Potatoes are selling in the city at from $4.00 to $4.50 a bag, a condition which may militate against the complete success of the production movement. Mr. W. J. Oke stated this morning that the people of this country were just beginning to realize the scarcity of potatoes. He had received an order from the labour men of the city for one hundred bags but simply could not fill it. The Farmers' Club of Norwood 'phoned up this morning for one hundred bags which Mr. Oke had also to refuse. Lindsay sent down a considerable order stating that the supplies there were exhausted. Mr. Oke was unable to replenish them.

Recent reports from Toronto and Saskatoon disclose the fact that shipments to the United States continue In other words, while the Government is exhorting the people of this country to put forth greater efforts for production, including the planting of potatoes, no effort has been made to conserve the Canadian supplies. The present price of over $4.00 indicates one phase of the difficulty of putting in large crops by those who are anxious to do so. Mr. J. J. Hartley's advice to the Trades and Labour Council is therefore decidedly apropos. He urged the union men to plant heavier crops, although the cost of seed might be two dollars more than was expected.

The Canadian Grocer's reports from the Southern States which will be the first section of America to provide new crop supplies, shows that Canada need not place much hope of relief in that quarters. Buyers have already offered $3 a bag to Florida dealers for their entire field. This price is equivalent to $10 on this side of the border. Alabama reports a lighter potato crop than usual this year.

Returning to the local situation, the present business is in small quantities, from hand to mouth as it were. The supply is very limited, there are no indications of immediate improvement and the price-trend is upward.

REV. DR. ANDERSON'S ADDRESS ON "GIBRALTAR"

"Gibraltar" was the subject of an interesting address given last night by Rev. Dr. Anderson at the Collegiate Hall. Mr. G. A. Gillespie was in the chair.

Gibraltar, he said, was one place where Britain kept the keys to her Empire. It was taken in three days and withstood a siege of four years.

Tunnelling at Gibraltar.

One of the seven wonders of the world is the tunnelling at Gibraltar. This was begun when at the siege the officer in command, seeing the French ships carrying ladders ready for the soldiers to scale the rock, offered a thousand pounds for the man who would solve the problem of stopping their advance up the rock. The idea of tunnelling, given by a soldier, resulted that when the alien troops arrived they felt the earth crumbling under them. There is now 70 miles of tunnelling. In this is kept four years' store of food in case of another siege. Great siege guns are also concealed in the tunnel.

Inhabitants of Gibraltar.

Every nationality is met in Gibraltar. In a crowd you may meet Moors, Spaniards, Russian and French sailors, and lowest of all humanity, the 'Rock Scorpions' or Spanish Jews, who bleed the sailors and soldiers.

Drinking Water.

There was no source of drinking water in Gibraltar, but the Government overcame the difficulty by placing reservoirs, which conserved the rain water. The streets of Gibraltar are kept in the most sanitary condition by sea water pumped up. In the Spanish side the utmost filth is noticeable everywhere, and the smells rise to high Heaven from the unkept streets and filthy conditions.

The Gates at Gibraltar.

Britain, the nation which works slowly, thoroughly, and without advertising, sees that Gibraltar is kept safe, even to so small a detail, as Mr. Anderson related. At a stated time in the evening a Sergeant goes to the gates of the high iron fence at the border and, after going through the formula of asking who comes here, etc., the gates are locked and any unfortunate straggler outside remains there until next morning.

In conclusion, Dr. Anderson presented Mr. Gillespie with a copper cross made from the copper of Nelson's victory.

The War Veterans fought for you. What are you going to do for them on Saturday?

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

(By Lowell Mellett)

LONDON, April 20.—"President Wilson can obtain Home Rule for Ireland merely by saying the word."

The Nationalist member, J. Devlin, acting leader of the Irish Parliamentary party since Redmond's illness, so declared to the United Press to-day. He explained if the President made it clear to England's leaders that a settlement of the Irish question was necessary to bring about whole-hearted American participation in the war, the leaders would not fail to act on the suggestion.

"One evasion follows another in disparaging succession," Devlin said, "but there are signs that the Government appreciates the effect of Americans asking themselves, 'How about Ireland?'

"We have been led time and again to think that a settlement of the Irish question would be granted—only to be put off once more.

"President Wilson's action would be final and decisive in obtaining Ireland her Home Rule."

ROME, April 20.—Pope Benedict has been "horrified" and has expressed deep indignation over the reports of Germany's plan to render fats and fertilizers from the bodies of soldier dead, according to an article printed to-day by the newspaper "Inforazione."

Want To Work On The Farms

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, April 20.—Four hundred youths and men have applied from larger Ontario cities to the Ontario Department of Agriculture for assignment to farms for the summer. The highest wage offered for boys is $32 per month and for single men, married men and married couples, $50 per month. Other offers range as low as $15 and $30 respectively.

A LECTURE ON PROPHECY

The third in the series of monthly lectures on the subject of Prophecy will be given this evening in St. Paul's Church. The speaker will be the Rev. Mr. Hollinrake, of Barton Street Methodist Church, Hamilton. His subject will be "Why I Became a Pre-millennialist."

All Christians believe in a time of future blessedness for our earth when "men shall beat their swords into plough-shares and learn war no more," and when the will of God shall be done everywhere in the world. This time is generally spoken of as the Millennium, meaning a thousand, because it is supposed to last one thousand years. A pre-millennialist is one who holds that Christ comes before the thousand years, a post Millennialist believes that He comes after. The one holds that it is the presence of Christ that makes a Millennium possible; the other holds that the world will reach this condition of blessedness through present agencies, through the preaching of the Gospel and the influence of the Holy Sprit on men's hearts. Rev. Mr. Hollinrake will speak of both of these doctrines at length, and will tell us why he was compelled to give up the post for the pre-millennial position. The public are invited to attend.

A PRESENTATION TO MRS. THROOP

About twenty-five members of the Married Ladies Bible Class foregathered last evening at the home of Mrs. James Lillico, 579 Homewood Avenue, where a presentation was made to Mrs. Throop, a member of the class who is removing to Hamilton. The presentation which was made by Mrs. George Jamieson, took the form of a handsome suit-case umbrella with sterling silver handle.

THE ADDRESS.

The following address was read by Mrs. Lillico:

Our Dear Mrs. Throop:

I am you will understand how very sorry we are to part with you. You have been so faithful in doing all you could to promote the interest of the class.

We shall indeed miss you, and the sweet Christian fellowship and social intercourse we have enjoyed together.

But, dear Mrs. Throop, our friendships are not for earth alone, they only begin here to be perfected when we gather in the presence of our Blessed Lord, Jesus, "where there is fulness of joy and pleasure for evermore." And until then, "underneath are the everlasting arms." Be assured we shall follow you with our prayers and best wishes.

As the token of the love and esteem in which you are held by our class, we ask you to accept this umbrella.

Signed on behalf of our class.

H. H. ALLUM
Teacher.

Following the reading of the address the party sang: "For she's a jolly good fellow." Light refreshments were served and the party dispersed about eleven o'clock.

WORK FOR SHIPYARDS.

Orders Have Been Placed in Canada for 22 Steel Steamers.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 19. — The shipyards of Canada will be busily engaged all this year and part of next upon orders for steel steamships for the carriage of Canadian food products and other supplies to Great Britain. Already orders for twenty-two vessels of tonnage running from 3,400 tons to 8,800 have been placed. Eight other vessels are under construction.

The Minister of Finance has also offered to finance all orders placed by the Imperial Government for the construction of wooden ships in Canada. The sum involved may amount to ten million dollars.

EXCITEMENT ON WINNIPEG GRAIN EXCHANGE

WINNIPEG, Man., April 20.—There was great excitement on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange to-day over the announcement that the Entente powers and the United States had completed terms to purchase the entire wheat crop of the continent. It will mean the closing of Winnipeg Grain Exchange, as there will be no transactions. A move started to-day to close Chicago deals in future will have to be suspended.

The War Veterans fought for you. What are you going to do for them on Saturday?

Sprightly Spring Attire for the Man Who Cares About His Clothes

Snappy Neckwear with the Freshness of Spring

Neckwear designers have turned their thoughts into new channels this spring — the result is unique patterns that are entirely novel. We find the designs difficult to describe, they are so unlike anything heretofore shown. They are typically Oriental in colour and pattern. To fully appreciate you must inspect. Price 75c

A wide and varied range at different prices from 50c to $1.50 await your coming.

"JUST WRIGHT" FOOTWEAR, A PROPER HOUSE FOR THE FOOT

We have compared footwear to a house—there is a similarity. Your foot lives in a shoe for all but eight or ten hours every day, closely confined (housed) within the walls of leather. We ask, "Is there a lightness to your step or do your feet drag and shuffle along in continual uneasiness?" "Just Wright" footwear is all that the name implies, it is the highest accomplishment in the art of shoe manufacture. Designed primarily for comfort, yet undiminished in style. Prices from ..... $5.00 to $9.00

"THE ARMORE"—A new English last; dark mahogany shade. Made of best leather procurable. Price $9.00

"NIAGARA"—Blucher style. Black gun metal shade, medium comfortable toe. Price ... $5.00

"UNCLE SAM"—An English last, with "Neolin Sole" and rubber heel. Colour mahogany. Price $8.00

"LONDON"—In the old reliable straight last. Made of soft vici kid leather. Price $7.50

LOTS OF HATS & CAPS

The greatest compliment that can be paid a merchant is continual patronage from his customers, and it has been our lot to receive repeated visits from patrons who have received "hat and cap" satisfaction in this store. This season has been particularly good—the range of styles is extensive and attractive. See them To-morrow. Hats $2.50 and $3.00. Caps $2.00 and $3.00.

Brothers Prefer Cheerless Liberty To Farm Work

Two brothers, aged 15 and 10 years respectively, who were placed in the Children's Shelter yesterday afternoon, on their most serious promises to remain until Saturday morning, when they were to be placed with two Ennismore farmers, stayed just ten minutes. Mr. Spence, the Agent for the Society, had scarcely turned his back when they cleared out. The first trace of them was obtained this morning when it was learned that they had called at an East City grocery store, where they obtained on credit a supply of bread, biscuits and maple syrup. The woman with whom they had previously stayed had an account with the grocer. Mr. Spence searched East City and the river banks, while the police gave the city a "once over" without results.

The story of the boys is a rather pathetic one. Their father died and the mother re-married. Then she passed away and from police reports the step-father has made practically no effort to train or provide for the boys. The older boy displayed a pair of hands yesterday that were encrusted with dirt. His hair, a light colour, was long and matted. Recently he has been living wherever he found shelter, it was stated. He wouldn't stay at St. Vincent's Orphanage, nor in a good home with an aunt, in Toronto, and seems to be getting beyond correcting.

They were made Wards of the Children's Aid Society yesterday. Two smaller boys were also made wards. Their father is at the front. Their mother died since he went overseas, and the aunt with whom they were left, also died recently. They are bright little chaps and will be well cared for until the father comes home.

Dear Mary:—

Until lately I'd overlooked getting a kitchen cabinet. Why, I wouldn't be without one! It takes up so little room and saves so many steps. And then there is space for everything.

By all means, Mary, get a kitchen cabinet. You'll soon save enough from waste to more than pay for it.

You'll thank me for this "tip."

As always—HELEN

P.S. I got my new kitchen cabinet where I didn't have to pay for it all at one time from

WEDDING BELLS

A quiet but pretty wedding took place in the Sacred Heart Church on Wednesday at 9 a.m., when Mary Ellen Fraser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs J. J. Fraser of this city was united in marriage to John Francis Walsh son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Walsh of Hastings. Nuptial Mass was celebrated by Rev. J. J. O'Brien and assisted by Rev. J. P. McQuire, Douro. The witness being Miss Bessie Walsh cousin of the groom and J. D. Fraser of Lindsay, the bride's brother. The happy young couple motored to Hastings, the groom's home, where they will reside.

SUTHERLAND—JORDAN.

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place yesterday at the George Street Methodist Parsonage, when Mary, daughter of Mrs. James Jordan, 629 Union street was united in marriage to Private Ross David Sutherland. Rev. Mr. Peever officiating. The bride looked very lovely in a tailored suit of navy serge and hat to match. After the ceremony the happy couple left for the home of Mrs. Wilbert Armstrong where about forty guests were invited to the wedding breakfast. Many beautiful and costly gifts were received, testifying the popularity of the young couple.

OBITUARY

F. J. GRIFFIN.

Just one week after the death of his wife, Mr. F. J. Griffin died at Norwood this morning at the residence of Mr. Harry Buck, aged 81.

Mr. Griffin, who was born in the United States, resided for many years in Norwood, but has lately resided in the west. In all his business undertakings he has been prosperous. He was widely respected by all who knew him and his death will cause widespread regret. Notwithstanding his advanced years, he was very active until a week ago, when, with the death of his wife, worry caused his general breakdown and finally his death.

One daughter, (Mrs. Heartbrand, California, two sisters, Mrs. Wylie, Sudbury, Miss Emma Griffin, Minneapolis, and two brothers, Charles of Peterborough and Clayton of Detroit, survive.

The funeral will take place on Monday at 1.30 to the Norwood cemetery from the residence of Mr. Harry Buck.

LECTURES BY DR. ANDERSON

Rev. Dr. Anderson will lecture tonight in the Collegiate Assembly Hall on "British Rule in Egypt. Has It succeeded?" His Honour Judge Huycke will occupy the chair and in view of the charm of Dr. Anderson's previous lectures on "The British Navy" and "Gibraltar," it is expected that there will be a large attendance. There will be no admission charge, but a collection will be taken in aid of the Sailors' Institute.

On Monday night in the Public Library Hall Rev. Dr. Anderson will speak under the auspices of the Daughters of the Empire, on "Malta, the Halfway House of the British Empire."

CYCLE RUN TO-NIGHT.

Every Bicyclist Invited to Join in Social Run from Bank's Garage.

A social bicycle run will be held this evening leaving C. E. Banks' garage at 7 o'clock. It will be headed by Mr. Fred St. Onge of Montreal, a noted trick bicyclist. The pace will not be fast and it is expected that a large number of bicyclists will turn out. Everybody with a wheel is invited to join the run.

Robert Hicks & Co. Shorten Their Men's Hours

Business-like Concession to Enable Employees to Advance Their Garden Work

With a creditable appreciation for their employees' interests, the coal firm of Messrs. Robert Hicks & Co. have granted a concession to their workmen which is worthy of imitation. Shortly after the noon hour today Mr. Hicks called his men together and intimated that his Company had decided to shorten their day's labour by one hour, allowing them to quit work at 5 o'clock instead of 6, for the purpose of enabling them to devote the extra time to home gardening. It was also hinted that in all likelihood, after the gardening season, a nine and-a-half-hour would constitute their day's labour, without any lessening of their wages.

Messrs. Hicks & Co. realize that without their active co-operation for the welfare of their employees the wheels of business would not run so smoothly. At best, in normal times, the coal handlers' work is a very laborious one; and where a good body of men have been secured it is wisdom to grant them every reasonable consideration. City folk rarely stop to think of the part their coal delivery man plays in ministering to their wants and comfort. And for Messrs. Hicks & Co. to take this thoughtful interest in their men is evidence of their good business methods. Next!

THE NEED OF THE HOUR

Dear Sir,—As Secretary of the local branch of the Organization of Resources Committee, I feel it encumbent upon me to take issue to some extent with F. T. B., who wrote in Tuesday's paper, pooh-poohing the idea of farmers getting much help from the men of the city.

Discussing the probable shortage of foodstuffs, this writer sets down these words, "the farmers need not worry for they eat at the first table, any way." Now F. T. B. is no doubt a most estimable man, but in these words he expresses a spirit of selfishness, which, if at all general throughout the Empire would even now, after so much sacrifice of blood and treasure wreck our chances of success in the war and, perhaps, bring millions to the point of actual starvation. It took us a long time to realize that the war could last as long as it has, and it is taking us a longer time to realize that the foodstuffs of the world (not only the Central Empires) are rapidly approaching the point of exhaustion. Millions of men who were formerly food producers are now consumers, without being producers. Hundreds of tons of foodstuffs have been destroyed every week by enemy submarines. Thousands of acres of fertile, arable land will this year be waste because of the ravages of war. Millions of acres more will be idle because of the world-wide disorganization caused by war conditions. The plain truth is, as Mr. H. B. Cowan pointed out most forcibly in last night's issue: "We are facing a problem of food shortage that may become desperate before another year." This is a problem that must be faced squarely; it cannot be pooh pooh'ed away. And I want to state most emphatically that the solvent of this problem is not a narrow spirit of selfishness, but a broad spirit of cooperative patriotism.

I was a farmer, myself, before I became a lawyer, and I know the farming classes of this Province too well to believe for a moment that they are at all lacking in the true spirit of patriotism. I believe that with few exceptions they want to do their bit for the Empire in the way of increased production. Their difficulty is that they have not got the help and one man on a hundred acres or more can only do so much. Now it is to help to remedy this difficulty that the Organization of Resources Committee is trying to work out plans for getting men from the city out into the country. It is undoubtedly true that inexperienced help will prevent full efficiency, but it is also true that hundreds of farmers in the Province pulled through last summer because of the assistance rendered by school boys, many of whom were never on a farm before. There there's a will there's a way.

Any one who needs to be convinced that the scheme to get men out on the farm is effective should spend a day at Mr. G. A. Gillespie's office. He has already placed nearly twenty men and he tells me that his time has been almost entirely occupied this week in bringing the applicants for help and the applicants for work together, and, he is getting them together. If you are a farmer needing help send your name in to Mr. Gillespie; if you are a city man willing to give some time this summer (be it much or little) to this great work of food production on a Peterborough County farm, go down to Mr. Gillespie's office and get in on it.

Everybody is helping. Our two big saw mills will not open up till after seeding. Our manufacturers have promised to keep jobs open for any men who hire with farmers. Our banks are extending the vacation term to any clerks who will take it out pitching hay or sheaves. Our schools are allowing their boys to go out on the land right away. Everybody is doing it except F. T. B. This is no time for knocks. The urgent call is for boosters.

PRODUCTION! In this sign we shall conquer.

Yours truly,
JOSEPH WEARING.

Stop! Look! Listen!

Coming

Charles Dillingham's Production of IRVING BERLIN'S Monster Ragtime Musical Revue will be the attraction at "The Grand" next Thursday.

In the person of Al. B. White "STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!" has a comedian who is head and shoulders above the average. Mr. White has a way with him that is irresistible and he makes a big hit with the audience. Close behind him comes Leona Thompson, who brings beauty and grace to the principal feminine role, and plays her part throughout with an enthusiasm which is infectious. As a fun-maker George M. Smith is an able second to Mr. White, while among the women of the troupe Peggy Reynolds, in a role well fitted to her talents, shines with especial brightness.

The company is so large and so many members of it share the credit for the success of the piece that it is impossible in a brief review to give praise to all who deserve it. Alton and Allen, first in a black-face role and then as country constables are among the cleverest dancers of their type and every member of the troupe who takes part in the delightful skit entitled "A Ragtime Musical Revue" proves himself or herself a fun-maker of distinction. The play is one of those loosely constructed things that permit the introduction of a number of specialties, and all of these are excellent. They include dancing, singing and comedy, all of an exceptionally effective sort.

"STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!" is hard to beat as a remedy for the blues. One finds nothing in it to criticise adversely. Full of colour, melody and clean fun.

BOWLING

The Grocers' Bowling team did their best last night to try and put the Printers out of the lead in the bowling league by capturing two games from them. To date the Printers have only five losses, and the Grocers seem tickled to claim the honour of taking four games from them.

The game was quite exciting from start to finish, as the bowling was fairly even, and an extra win at the present time affects the league standing considerably. Hard spares were made by Moore, Wilson and Cairns of the Printers, while Heard Ross, Gillespie and Fitzgerald of the Grocers did the same.

To-night the DeLaval team meet the West End team. The score:

From the above tables it will be seen that the proportion of Canadian born men who have enlisted with the Gobourg Heavy Battery is very large, viz: 74 1-2. The proportion of single men between the ages of 18 and 30 is also large, being 78 per cent. It is also worth noting that of the men enlisted only six were rejected by the final medical inspection board, before going overseas.

PLOWING IS GENERAL AND SEEDING BEGINS

Farmers at the market this morning brought in news of general activity in the country. Plowing operations are in full swing and some seeding is under way. Mr. Sam Redmond began wheat sowing on Wednesday, and from other districts there are similar reports.

THE RADISH

Radishes are among the first vegetables that one can venture to plant in the open ground. Almost as soon as the snow disappears preparations can be made for getting a little patch say eight or ten feet square in shape for radishes and lettuce. These two vegetables are able to endure a few degrees of frost without injury. In a favourable season they may be sown by the 15th or 20th of April.

To get early maturity it is necessary to have warm loamy ground sloping to the south. Well rotted manure will help to make the soil loose in texture and more capable of absorbing the heat of the sun. If still heavy clay has to be used it can be lightened up to some extent by manure, preferably poultry droppings.

Buy large plump seed as it will germinate more quickly and produce roots in shorter time than small seed. Rows may be fifteen inches apart or less according to the vigor of growth of the variety. Thin out to about three inches apart.

Given a suitable soil and good weather radishes require little attention. Unless a crust forms on the surface little or no cultivation is needed; the radish is one plant that can get the start of weeds. They should be sufficient size for using in a month. Make sowing every two weeks to have a steady supply of tender roots. A little economy can be practised by sowing them between the rows of carrots and parsnips which take a longer time to mature.

Winter radishes are grown as a stand in the same manner as turnip seed is sown in June and July, the roots gathered in autumn and stored in cellars.

WANT LES DARCY TO FIGHT AT WINDSOR

WINDSOR, April 26.—Local fight fans may yet have an opportunity of witnessing Les Darcy in action if a proposition made this afternoon by Grant Hugh Browne, former boss of Madison Square Garden, New York, and now president of the Western Racing Association which operates the Devonshire track here, is accepted by the management of Windsor's patriotic campaign.

Browne asks the Windsor authorities to back him in a plan to secure a permit from the Ontario Government to stage a bout at or near Windsor between Darcy and an unnamed opponent. The fight promoter believes he could raise in this way from $150,000 to $200,000 to aid the war funds of Canada.

Several members of the local patriotic organization have already expressed themselves as in favour of accepting Browne's proposition. "If Darcy is not a slacker and wants to prove it to the world, let him offer his services without charge for a fight in Windsor," is the way one member of the committee puts it.

Huns Refining Their Dead Men For Oil And Fat

Gruesome Enterprise First Engaged in as a National Necessity, But Not Now—A Limited Liability Co. Renders Dead for Gain—Corpses Are Baled Together With Wire and Shipped to "Offal Refining Plant."

GHONES OUT FOR GAIN

LONDON, April 21.—That the Germans are systematically collecting the corpses of their dead and shipping them to rendering plants where they are subjected to a process for recovering the oils and fats for use as fertilizers seems incontestably borne out by the latest information. When such stories were first published they were generally disbelieved. American consuls formerly in Germany who arrived here after their recall said the Germans are distilling nitro-glycerine from the corpses and so obtaining the essentials of explosives.

BOAST OF "EFFICIENCY."

It now develops that the German censors are allowing the German papers to print accounts of and even to boast about the efficiency which allows nothing to be wasted. The Belgian newspaper "L'Independence Belge" of April 10, prints an account of the industry, in which it says, "We have long known that the Germans shriped their dead behind the firing line, fastened them into bundles of three or four bodies with iron wire and then despatched these bundles to the rear. Until recently trains laden with the dead were sent to a town near Liege and a point near Brussels."

GHOULS OUT FOR GAIN.

Much surprise was caused by the fact that of late this traffic has proceeded in the direction of Gerolstein and that on each waggon was written D. A. V. G. "German science is responsible for the idea of the formation of the Deutsche Abfalls Ververtungs Gesellschaft or German Offal Utilization Company, Limited, a dividend earning company with a capital of $240,000.

POPE IS "HORRIFIED."

ROME, April 21.—Pope Benedict has been "horrified" and has expressed deep indignation over the reports of Germany's plan to render fats and fertilizers from the bodies of soldier dead, according to an article printed yesterday by the newspaper Informazione.

Reports have persisted that German efficiency has been utilizing the dead to supply oils, fats and fertilizer so desperately needed in the Central Empire now. The most circumstantial of these stories, printed recently in Belgian newspapers, declared that the refining factory was located near Gerolstein, close to the Belgian-German frontier. It gave ghastly details of how the bodies were utilized.

PARDON RUSSIAN REFUGEES

Men and Women Who Fled From Czar's Land to Escape Its Terrors Are Now Free to Return to Native Land If They so Desire

One of the first fruits of the Russian Revolution to show itself in Canada is the granting of a pardon to all Russian political refugees in the Dominion. Henceforth Russian political refugees, who have gone through the Dominion under the constant fear that the hand of the Russian Government would stretch across the seas and reach them, will breath freely, and may even return to their native land without fear of interference, if they desire to do so. What this means to a man or a woman who has been in exile for many years with the constant fear of being shadowed, even though they were innocent of crime, can only be realised by those who have experienced the peril. One Russian lady in Canada has been in fear for many years, just because when the Russian Duma was first created with its then very limited powers, she had the audacity to cry "Vive la Duma."

Stories have frequently been heard particularly in Western Canada, where Russian political refugees have been arrested on warrants for murder. One famous case occurred in Winnipeg eight years ago, and it will be remembered that public protest meetings were held in an endeavour to arouse Canadian public opinion to the danger of the Russian hand of autocracy being stretched to this Dominion.

All this is a thing of the past. Mr. Serge de Likatcheff, the Russian Consul General here, has received an order from the Russian Provincial Government, declaring that Russian political refugees in Canada may in future return to Russia, because the change in the Russian regime has freed them. The order also states that a Russian consultative committee has been authorized by the Provisional Government, to meet in Montreal and deal with all questions concerning consular aid to Russian political refugees who may desire to return to Russia. This committee will be known as the Russian Political Refugee Consulting Committee, and they have opened headquarters at 133 St. Lawrence boulevard, over the Verdun Lunch establishment. Though the committee has hardly had time to get down to work, they have already posted their headquarters' name on the door in Russia and it is evident that this committee, which means so much to Russian political refugees in this Dominion, has taken tangible form, and is already in existence.

Grain Prices Touched New High Records

Market Prices Fluctuated Over a Wide Range—Flour Advanced Another Fifty Cents—The Cattle Market

The grain markets were again in a wildly excited state yesterday and for a time prices fluctuated over a wide range, reaching new high records, but finally coming down and settling below Thursday's close. Reports of drastic action to be taken by Washington with a view to the full control of all foodstuffs, was the cause of most of the excitement. Manitoba flour was advanced another 50c yesterday.

Manitoba wheat — No. 1 northern, $2.43 1-2, No. 2, $2.39 1-2; No. 3, $2.54 1-2; No. 4, $2.43 1-2; track, bay ports.

Manitoba oats—N. 2 C.W., 80 3-4c, No. 3, 80c; extra No. 1 feed, 80c; No. 1 feed, 78 3-4c; all rail delivered.

American corn — $1.67, nominal, subject to embargo.

Ontario oats — No. 2 white, 74c to 76c; No. 3 white, 73c to 75c.

Ontario wheat — No. 2 winter, per car lot, $2.40 to $2.42; No. 3, $2.36 to $2.40; according to freights outside.

Peas — No. 2, nominal; car lots, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $1.87 to $1.89.

Manitoba flour — First patents, in jute bags, $12.60; second patents, $12.10; strong bakers, $11.70.

Ontario flour—Winter, according to sample, $10.40 to $10.50, track, Toronto, prompt shipments.

Millfeed — Car lots, delivered, Montreal, shorts, $43 to $44; bran, $41; feed flour, per bag, $2.80 to $2.90; middlings, $46 to $48.

Hay—Baled track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $11.50 to $12.50; mixed, $9 to $11; straw, $7 to $7.50.

Cattle Markets.

Although cattle prices this week averaged 30c to 40c lower than last week's average, it does not necessarily mean that the general cattle position is weakening, or that a general lowering of beef cattle prices is in sight. On the contrary the situation is still essentially a very strong one. The comparatively small decline this week on medium and common quality cattle, was a slight reaction from the unduly boosted prices of the week before. That boost, besides bringing a lot of poor and half finished cattle on the market this week, shippers figuring that the high prices would hold, also resulted in some slackening up of orders in the wholesale beef trade, and it is said, to a number of cancellations. Hence a fall in prices was inevitable. The real cattle situation is unchanged. The number of choice, finished stable fed cattle in the country is probably small, as compared with the full requirements for the coming summer, both for home and export consumption. Present high prices are therefore likely to prevail for some time, and many in the trade look for still higher levels.

In a few weeks grass fed cattle will be coming in, and may relieve the situation somewhat, but all available stocks of well finished stable cattle will command the strong market.

There has been a good demand this week for grass cows, and good stockers and feeders.

Offerings of calves have been on a liberal scale and prices have receded from recent high points.

Choice milkers and springers found a strong demand.

Sheep and lambs are still very scarce, and firm at present high record prices.

Hog prices weakened during latter part of the week and prospects are said to be lower for next week.

Cattle Receipts.

Union Stock Yards—total receipts for the week, 511 cars, with 7,991 cattle, 3,184 calves, 15,674 hogs, 291 sheep and lambs, and 1,233 horses.

BIRD LIFE AT FRONT

Carol Gaily and Build Nests Undisturbed by Shot and Shell

The undisturbed lives of the birds on the battle front is remarked upon by a gunner in France. He speaks of the sudden outburst of a song at dawn of day being wonderful. Thrushes and blackbirds, he says, vie with a dozen different birds in a wild melody that recalls shady lanes in the "Old Country." The skylark springs suddenly from his nest in the grass, and mounts upwards singing his morning song. Above him the aeroplanes circle surrounded by tiny balls of white cloud. A moorehen stalks out of the reeds at the edge of the moat, and swims rapidly to the other side. Hundreds of starlings and sparrows swoop down, chattering and arguing, bathing at the edge of a tiny rain-filled hollow, or collecting food for their young. A white butterfly flutters by. Magpies and jays are to be seen in every direction. The surprising indifference of all the birds to gunfire is extraordinary. Storks and herons float by silhouetted black against the sunset sky. The wild ducks sometimes settle in the moat or sleep in the swamp, but they are always gone with the dawning. When the weather is hazy long lines of geese and swans pass over, flying low toward some favorite haunt. The grasshopper warbler winds his reel of song. The golden oriole, the wood and willow warbler, are to be heard; cuckoos call each other.

Some Wonderful Operations

"Very remarkable" is indeed but a mild term to describe some of the operations, particularly in regard to bone-transplanting, which has been performed with success on returned soldiers. For example, in one case, a man with a smashed jaw, presenting a fearful appearance, had one of his toes) transplanted into the angle of his jaw, with wonderfully effective results.

Government Not Representative

Before we are able to sign any peace we shall have to insist on dealing with [illegible] government totally different in essence and constitution to that which is now misgoverning Germany.—Mr. J. W. Lowther.

WRONG BUTTONS TOOK THE SPY TO HIS DEATH

Russell Gore writes in the Detroit News: The Padre met the man strolling back of the lines. The Padre's routine takes him everywhere—into the trenches, the billets where men rest and bathe and smoke after doing their "bit" on the firing line—the hospitals where the dying are calling for the consolation of the church, the streets of ruined villages where men pause and chat even while occasional shells are flying over their heads.

It was on the street that the chaplain met him. He had blue eyes, a fair skin, and wore the uniform of the British army. The eyes had in them the suggestion of a smile, and they looked straight at you confidently. The uniform was the regulation khaki in which all the world at the front seems to be dressed. It was a detail of this uniform that caught the chaplain's attention. The three black buttons, denoting a captain's rank, that adorned the epaulettes on the officer's shoulders, had been gilded.

"Quite an idea," agreed the Padre, pausing to chat with the stranger and commenting on his bright buttons.

The two stopped to exchange some gossip about London. The stranger knew London as well as the Padre. He was full of bits of up-to-date information about the best theatres in which to while away an evening and the best places in which to get a meal not too much curtailed by the dietary regulations. He spoke English perfectly.

"ONE OF US, I SEE."

Another British officer sauntered by. He was one of the Padre's acquaintances, and the chaplain called him.

"See how our friend here has furbished up our sober shoulder buttons," he said by way of introducing the man with the honest blue eyes.

But he noticed that the third officer dismissed the gilded shoulder buttons with a glance, and instead fixed his eyes on two buttons—two small and inconspicuous buttons on the sleeve of the stranger's coat.

"You're one of us, I see," he said cordially, and extended his hand. The Padre noticed idly that his sleeve also had two buttons on its edge. Curiously he glanced at his own uniform—supposed to be exactly like that of every other British officer except for the black epaulettes that identified him as a chaplain. For the first time he noticed that there were no buttons on the cuff of his sleeve. And there were no buttons on the sleeves of any one of the dozens of officers who were passing and repassing the group of "Y—sure—yes—why, of course," answered the blue-eyed officer to the newcomer in the group.

"THE" REGIMENT.

Then the officer the Padre had called over began to ask questions about the regiment. They were asked just as though the other must know about what regiment he was speaking. The Padre wondered at this, because there had been no mention of any particular regiment. As the talk went on, he became subtly aware that a skillful cross-examination was in progress, and that it was not going particularly well for the man cross-examined. He very obviously didn't know this or that officer to whom the newcomer referred as intimates, he didn't know where the reserves of THE regiment was. His blue eyes were becoming more and more troubled, and the other's dark eyes were narrowing down into slits of suspicion.

Finally the third officer stepped away, and spoke quietly to the sentry who was pacing back and forth. The sentry withdrew only to reappear a moment later with six other men in charge of a corporal.

"YOU'RE A GERMAN SPY"

"Place this man under arrest," said the other quietly, placing his hand on the shoulder of the officer with the gilt buttons on his shoulders.

"How dare you do this?" demanded the man, speaking in a voice that though loud, sounded strained to the chaplain. "I'm a British officer like yourself, and I—"

"You're not!" retorted the other, quickly. "You're a spy. You have stolen a British uniform or had one made for you. You're a German spy—a Saxon, I think, by your blue eyes."

But the other continued to protest.

"It's a lie—I'm not a spy. I'm an Englishman" he insisted. "I was talking with the chaplain here about England, and he can tell you that I know all about it. It is my home. Cross-examine me and see."

"You may know all about England, but you don't know anything about the regiment to which your uniform says you belong," shot back the other, while the guard waited until the strange colloquy was ended.

"What regiment do you mean?" asked the other, quickly, and a hunted, baffled look—the look of a man who has planned carefully but who sees everything slipping into ruin because of some small oversight—came into his eyes.

"What regiment" echoed the other, pointing at the two buttons on the prisoner's sleeve. "You wear those two buttons and ask that? Why, man, you're convicting yourself by that very admission. Don't you know that there's only one regiment in the British Army whose officers wear buttons on their sleeves?"

Into the spy's blue eyes came what seemed like a shade of disappointment. Perhaps he was thinking of the carefully prepared plan spoiled by a tiny little error; perhaps his thoughts flew back in that moment to some one in Germany he held dear. Anyway, he gave no sign as the guards closed in about him and marched away with him.

Within an hour from the time when the chaplain stopped to chat with him it was all over. Not only was it all over for him, but by the time the big hand of the clock had climbed the circle, he was buried and the earth thrown over him.

"He died gallantly," said the Rev. A. Cameron Mackintosh, the Church of England rector who was the "Padre" of the story, as he turned the coat over in his hands. "He wouldn't be bandaged, but faced the rifles with his eyes open, and a smile on his face. And just before they spoke he shouted 'Deutschland uber alles!'"

THE TELLTALE COAT.

The correspondent fingered the coat curiously. It was of the soft material worn by the British and Canadian officers. Outside it was of the regulation pattern except for the two telltale buttons that, according to one of those Kiplingesque traditions of the British army, may be worn by but one regiment among the thousands at the front. Perhaps the coat had been taken from one of the dead men of this regiment, or it may have been copied from a tunic stripped from a dead man.

"See," said the Padre, "pockets—pockets—pockets. They were filled with maps on the finest paper. You can see, too, where the knives of the members of the court-martial have cut into the linings in search of other pockets. The evidence was complete, and he died within the hour—gallant, unafraid, and smiling."

The newspaper man turned the coat over looking for holes not made with knives.

"You won't find them," said the Padre. "He died in his shirt sleeves. The coat was taken off him before the execution, and I keptp it—well, to remind me of a brave man who was our enemy!"

KING Hot Water Boiler

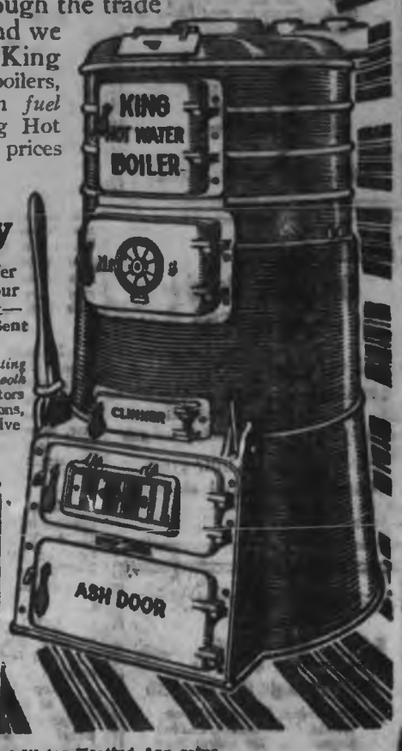
Cast in one piece, giving strength; full sized air-tight door, making the fire pot and ash pit dust tight.

Don't sacrifice your comfort another winter trying to get decent service from an inefficient, old heating system. If you have such, scrap it. By wasting coal you are burning money, and a poor heater is the most extravagant way of trying to keep a house warm. The wise way is to make plans for a new boiler at once. The King Boiler can be purchased through the trade in any city, town or village in Canada and we can assure you of quick service. The King is not any more expensive than other boilers, though far superior in heating power and in fuel economy. Do you want to know what a King Hot Water Heating System will cost? Write us for prices and full particulars.



Fourteen Reasons Why

There are fourteen separate reasons why you should prefer a King Boiler for heating your house, explained in our Boiler Booklet which, with our Illustrated Booklet—Comfortable Homes—and our Booklet on Radiators will be Sent On Request.

VERDUN A SCRAP HEAP.

Armies Said to Have Hurled 30,000,000 Shells into the Area.

In connection with the anniversary on Feb. 21 of the beginning of the drive at Verdun, the German newspapers printed the results of a calculation made by a Swedish statistician as to the amount of metal buried in the battlefields around the French stronghold.

On the assumption that no fewer than 1,000,000 shells a week were fired during thirty fighting weeks it is estimated that 1,350,000 tons of steel was hurled across the plains around Verdun, and is now imbedded there.

It is estimated that 135,000 freight cars were required for the transport of shells alone. Fifty tons of steel is said to have been dropped on the average into every acre of the Verdun battle area.

Some German papers are quoted by the London press as saying that it is worth while considering the question whether this colossal quantity of steel cannot some day be reclaimed and made to serve industrial purposes.

Telling what the other fellow should do is the mildest and the most useless occupation.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Nourishment and Economy: The time now is when every person should not only know how to get the greatest amount of nutriment from the least amount of cost of food, but each housewife and cook should thoroughly familiarize herself with the necessary foods to form a well balanced ration for her family. It will be at least two years before the people in Europe can supply for themselves and from their own soil the amount of food stuff that they could normally produce and that is on the presumption that the war should cease in the very near future.

These countries have not for many years been able to grow enough food for their own use and so we must feed them as well as ourselves. The Department of Agriculture at Washington has just issued a farmer's bulletin (No. 868) from the office of home economics that should be carefully studied by all of us and the simple and practical directions for a balanced and palatable ration should be put into everyday use. To give you an idea of its value I quote only a small portion. You should send for the bulletin; it is free.

Grouping Foods to Show Their Uses: Perhaps as easy a way as any to select the right foods is to group the different kinds according to their uses in the body and then to make sure that all the groups are represented in the meals. Fortunately no more than five groups need be considered: (1) Fruits and vegetables; (2) Meats and other protein-rich foods; (3) Cereals and other starchy foods; (4) Sweets; and (5) Fatty foods. The materials under each of these heads have their special uses. It will be helpful therefore for the housekeeper to form the habit of thinking of the many different kinds of foods which she handles as grouped in some such way as the following:

GROUP 1.—Fruits and vegetables, such as apples, bananas, berries, citrus fruits, spinach and other greens, turnips, tomatoes, melons, cabbage, green beans, green peas, green corn, and many other vegetables and fruits. Without these the food would be lacking in mineral substances needed for building up the body and keeping it in good working condition; in acids, which give flavor, prevent constipation, and serve other useful purposes; and in minute quantities of other substances needed for health. By giving bulk to the diet they make it more satisfying to the appetite.

GROUP 2.—Meat and meat substances, or protein-rich foods: Moderately fat meats, milk, poultry, fish, cheese, eggs, dried legumes (beans, peas, lentils, cowpeas, peanuts), and some of the nuts. These are sources of an important body-building material, protein. In the case of children part of the protein food should always be whole milk.

GROUP 3.—Foods rich in starch: Cereals (wheat, rice, rye, barley, oats and corn), and potatoes (white and sweet.) Cereals come near to being complete foods and in most diets they supply more of the nourishment than any other kind of food. It is not safe, however, to live only on cereals. The grains may be simply cleaned and partially husked before cooking, as in cracked wheat and Scotch oatmeal; they may be ground into flour and used as the basis of breads, cakes, pastry, etc., or they may be partially cooked at the factory, as in many of the breakfast preparations; or they may be prepared in the form of such pastes as macaroni, noodles, etc. In all these forms they furnish the body with the same general materials, although in different proportions.

GROUP 4.—Sugar (granulated, pulverized, brown and maple), honey, molasses, sirup and other sweets. Unless some of the fuel is in this form the diet is likely to be lacking in flavor.

GROUP 5.—Foods very rich in fat: Bacon, salt pork, butter, oil, suet, lard, cream, etc. These are important sources of body fuel. Without a little of them the food would not be rich enough to taste good.

Some food materials really belong in more than one group. Cereals for example, supply protein as well as starch; potatoes supply starch, as well as the mineral matters; acids, cellulose and body-regulating substances, for which they are especially valuable; and most moat supplies, fat as well as protein. For the sake of simplicity, however, each material is here grouped according to the nutriment for which it is usually considered most valuable. These points are all brought out in more detail in other bulletins which discuss the special groups. The list below show some of the common food materials arranged in these 5 groups. If the housewife will consult them in planning meals until she has learned where each kind of food belongs, she will have taken the first step towards providing a diet which will supply all the food needs of her family. It will be only one step to be sure but it should prevent two mistakes—that of serving meals that have not sufficient variety and that of cutting down in the wrong places, when economy either of time or money is needed.

GROUP 1.—Foods depended on for mineral matters, vegetable acids, and body regulating substances. Fruits: Apples, pears, etc., bananas, berries, melons, oranges, lemons, etc. Vegetables: Salads lettuce celery, etc. Potherbs or greens, potatoes and root vegetables, green peas, beans, etc., tomatoes, squash, etc.

GROUP 2.—Foods depended on for protein: Milk, skim milk, cheese, eggs, meat, poultry, fish, dried peas, beans, cowpeas, nuts, etc.

GROUP 3.—Foods depends on for starch: Cereal grains, meals, flours, etc., cereal breakfast foods, bread crackers, macaroni, and other pastes, cakes, cookies, starchy puddings, potatoes and other starchy vegetables.

GROUP 4.—Foods depended on for sugar: Sugar, molasses, sirups, honey, candied, fruits preserved in sugar, jellies and dried fruits, sweet cakes and desserts.

GROUP 5.—Foods depended on for fat: Butter and cream, lard, suet and other cooking fats, salt pork, bacon and table and salad oils.

Next week I will tell you more of this practical bulletin, but as I said before, you should send for it.

PLENTY OF FOOD, BUT PRICES GO HIGHER

Paradoxical Situation has Developed in Chicago Commodity Markets.

CHICAGO, April 20. — With food prices mounting daily on the grounds of scarcity investigators in Chicago learned to-day that storage houses of this city are stacked to the roofs with supplies of hitherto unapproached magnitude, not only are private warehouses of the dealers and jobbers fairly bursting with food, but public warehouses as well, while thousands of tons are in cars on sidings. The bulk of the stored products consist of sugar, rice, canned goods, coffee and other non-perishables. Ownership of these goods is not confined to regular dealers and brokers, but in many instances by men in other lines who have taken a "flyer" in food.

Back to the Fluffy Afternoon Frock

Dainty Lingerie Dresses to Share Honors With Sports Clothes

KIMONO STYLES ARE IN AGAIN.

New York, April 19.

The fluffy afternoon frock is to divide honors with sports clothes this season. While we know that sports clothes are all important, that their charms are indeed legion, and that no woman who considers herself as having the least pretensions to being fashionable will be without a goodly assortment of them this year; yet in spite of all this we must acknowledge there is a touch of severity about them that creates a craving for the contrast of dainty, frilly, lingerie frocks.

7676

There comes a time in the life of even the most ardent devotee of sports when one must relax and it is at these times that the feminine longing for dainty, picturesque frocks, meant solely to make one as bewitching as possible, must be satisfied.

And so for the delight of the feminine heart there are the most irresistible creations of sheer silk voiles, soft chiffons and crepes, to say nothing of the abundant variety of cotton voiles, marquisettes an swisses that are offered this year.

Silk marquisette is combined with charmeuse in many dainty dresses of the more elaborate kind. The firmer material takes seemingly the less important part, but it really is quite important, forming the background, as it were, to bring out the sheer material to the greatest advantage. It may be used in a band at the edge of the skirt and in touches on collar and cuffs, or it may be used for a skirt with a long overdress of the sheer material falling over it. Georgette crepe is another of the dainty materials employed in this manner.

SMART BORDERED FABRICS.

Among the fashionable designs used in dress materials, borders appear very frequently. The bordered fabric with a design scattered all over the surface is one of the most striking of the new effects. Borders on plain materials have been used largely before, and they are again favored this season, but the border around an all-over design is the very newest fashion. Both the embroidered and the printed effects are looked upon with favor. The colors show the same tendencies noted in the other spring and summer materials; that is, they are quite gay and often combine with several bright tones.

One of these fascinating bordered fabrics is illustrated in the sketch of an afternoon dress for a young girl. This shows by far the simplest and not the least effective way of using such materials. The border goes around the bottom of the skirt and makes the belt, and a strip of it is applied around the edges of the sleeves, forming a veritable frame for the figure.

KIMONO STYLES AND SHORT SLEEVES.

The designers have returned to kimono sleeves and the body-and-sleeve-in-one effects. Many of the new blouses and dresses are made in these styles; and a good many show the short sleeves, which have a fair promise of being taken up for spring and summer, though not to the exclusion of long sleeves. The most favored type of long sleeve at present is fitted closely from the elbow to the wrist. At the elbow, or above it, there is fullness, the sleeve being shaped in a point extending away from the elbow.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or exposure in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by stimulating them, as is supposed others but by strengthening the system of the liver and bowels, by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

PLAN FOR EARLY CUCUMBERS

It is too early to sow cucumber seed for transplanting in May. It is none too soon however to be making plans and looking around for cans and boxes or even sods in which to start the seeds. Cucumbers make a quicker growth than cabbage or tomatoes, and only four weeks need to be allowed between planting and removing to open ground. It is not safe to set them out before the middle of May—even then considerable risk will be taken; and hence the middle of April may be counted as the date for the first seeding.

In case one has a hotbed or a frame with a little bottom heat there will be no difficulty in getting a start. Get if possible squares of thick tough sod six inches each way, lay them with the grass side down and make a hollow on the upper side for fine soil in which to place the seed.

Where no artificial heat can be provided, the planting will have to be left a little later and ordinary frames covered either with glass or cloth used. A sheltered sunny situation must be selected. Indoor planting may be practised if enough room can be provided for the boxes.

Instead of sods it is often more convenient to use earthen or paper pots filled with rich garden soil and having an inch of rotted manure in the bottom. Berry boxes and tin cans, the latter with the bottoms perforated or knocked out, will serve very well. All plants of the cucumber class are very sensitive to root disturbance, and the idea is to have the plants rooted in a ball of earth that can be carried without breaking apart and set in hills in the open ground.

In a space six inches square about eight seeds may be sown, these to be thinned to four and when transplanted only the two most vigorous ones left. Plants started in this way soon get beyond the stage where they will be injured by the cucumber beetle. The only other pests to guard against are the cutworms, and for these the tin cans with bottoms punched out will be the best protection.

A temperature of 60 to 75 degrees should be maintained during the early growth of the plants. If outside they can be protected on cold nights by mats or blankets. Hardening off is necessary, the process being much the same as for other plants, admitting the air freely by the frames or carrying the boxes outdoors on fine days.

Studebaker
Established 1852

The Best is Cheapest in the Long Run

WHEN you finally select your new car, your ultimate satisfaction of that car will depend upon the comfort you get out of it.

As far as the actual price of the car is concerned, $100 one way or the other makes little difference to you financially. But—to pay less than Studebaker prices for your car may mean a sacrifice of safety and comfort, a constant source of expense and endless trouble.

Experience has built perfection into the Studebaker. Studebaker has spent four years in refining, improving and perfecting this one basic design, selecting the right material, developing the right manufacturing organization.

If it were mechanically possible to produce a car that would give the maximum of comfort and satisfaction for any less than Studebaker prices—Studebaker is better equipped to do it than any other maker.

The beauty of a Studebaker goes beneath its beautiful paint and varnish work, beneath its conservative, dignified lines—beneath its luxuriously soft upholstery. The beauty that makes the Studebaker a joy forever is the beauty of quality—the quality that gives durability, that gives uninterrupted usage, that makes your car as good at 50,000 miles as it was at 5,000.

Villard Denies Being A Slacker

Champion Says He is Willing to Do as He is Told by His Country.

PHILADELPHIA, April 20. — Jess Willard is no slacker. He said so with willing emphatic belligerence.

When somebody produced a newspaper clipping which contained a statement by Captain F. R. Kenny, in charge of the recruiting station in Chicago, that Willard had not attempted to enlist, he dismissed it with a contemptuous brush of his mitt-like hand.

"About three weeks ago, in Chicago," he said, "I went to the recruiting stations and told them I was ready. They told me my bulk was too great and they were not taking married men just then. I went away satisfied. I don't know much about muskets, but I'm ready if my country needs me. I'm willing to do anything that I'm told."

"But," somebody timidly interjected. "Captain Kennedy is an officer in the regular army. He says he has no record of your attempt to enlist."

A fighting glint, not unmixed with a humorous one, came into the big blue eyes of the world's heavyweight boxing champion.

"Don't you believe what I'm telling you?" he asked quietly. His huge muscles. The crowd of sporting writer, reporters and small adoring boys that had gathered round Jess moved back a perceptible distance from the midget-like tent outside which they were standing and which serves for Jess' circus dressing room.

The White Lead Behind a Paint Determines its Quality

ONLY a very real quality in a White Lead can give successful results in paint-mixing. A worthless compound masquerading as White Lead cannot impart to paint those essential qualities without which it never gives permanent satisfaction.

To avoid risk of failure in mixing your paint, make it a point to use only paint in which the White Lead used is

SILENT CONTEMPT FOR WORRIED FRITZ

Huge Slave Drives Include Women—Spirit of Victims is Admirable—Tragic Scene in Warsaw

Here follows part of the story of an educated Pole, as published in the Amsterdam Telegraaf: More crushing and agonizing than this increased famine, however, is the moral opression, the menace of which is over the country. The "Courts of Blood" perform their work without cessation. Firing parties are always at work. Before my departure I saw with my own eyes how the Germans proceed in the sweeping away of men. At night cordons of troops surrounded a working class quarter at Warsaw not far from the Nadwislanska Station with loaded rifles. "Alles heraus!" (All out) ordered a sergeant. The soldiers chose here and there those men and women whom they thought suitable, separated brothers and sisters, mothers and children, and compelled those whom they declared good for slavery to leave immediately. Thus more than 100,000 men and women were removed from the part of the country under the Government of Warsaw.

The Worst Of It

Young women and girls are torn from their family and collected in groups, pell-mell with women of evil life, with the lowest of their sex. The most beautiful women are reserved for the officers. Deportation trains leave the country every day for Germany. There, as in Poland, the hardest labor is imposed on the deported with, in addition, a severe regime of terrorism and of punishments.

In Poland there is a regime of misery which no civilized people would dare to impose upon its worst criminals. Tuberculosis is consequently beginning to make frightful ravages among the emaciated population. But in spite of everything, the energy of the unhappy people is not giving way.

Defiant Songs

Little account is made of fines, espionage, prison. They mock the enemy whom they detest. They write Polish songs which they sing to German tunes. To the air of "Deutschland, Deutschland uber Alles" they sing: "Germany, Germany, ferocious beast." And the Germans hear the air without understanding the words, and approve, flattered.

HIGH TEA IN FASHION

Practice in England Which Saves Meal a Day

A London correspondent writes: The "high tea," a general institution in the North of England and Scotland, is becoming fashionable in the West End of London. Society is discovering that the high tea, which takes the place of late dinner in innumerable homes throughout the country, has many things to commend it. The high tea of the North is usually quite as satisfying and nourishing as the many-coursed evening meal it displaces. It requires less preparation than the more elaborate "dinner," and, in addition, makes "afternoon tea" unnecessary.

High tea is now coming into its own in Mayfair. In three houses in Park Lane it is served daily at six o'clock. "The Mayfair high tea is not a social meal," a leading hostess of London, now doing Red Cross organization work, told a newspaper representative. "Though I thoroughly approve of the idea, and have instituted the high tea at home, I think it will be a long time before people have the courage to ask their friends to that meal. It is essentially a private meal, in fact; one might almost call it a secret meal at its present stage." Tea without sugar, war bread, margarine, jam every other day, and ham and eggs or fish, are stated to constitute the high tea menu.

CONCERTS ON THE SOMME

Plenty of Excitement When the Floor Collapsed

"You ask me," writes a soldier who is in the midst of the fighting on the Somme, "if we ever hear any of the theatrical or concert parties who come out from England. Well, hardly in this part of the line—it's far too hot for them—but we have some very decent impromptu concerts. One, a few days ago, which we held in an old village hall, was very interesting. Half way through the second song the floor gave way and dropped all the audience about twelve feet into the cellar. The platform remained intact. No one was hurt, and when we were certain we could go no lower it was funny to look up at the artists' faces. The fellows who were near the wall had grabbed gas brackets and were still hanging there like so many pictures. Yes, we have 'some' concerts on the Somme."

Our Wonderful Army

Mr. Forster, in speaking for the British War Office, made some interesting statements. He says we have made for ourselves and our allies: 25,000,000 gas helmets, 250,000,000 sandbags, 105,000,000 yards of khaki cloth, 115,000,000 yards of flannel. "Taking the last two together we have manufactured 111,000 miles of cloth and flannel, enough to go nearly 4½ times round the earth. These are stupendous figures even in these days when the million has become the amount of arithmetical calculation," he observed.

Japanese Make Many Shells

More than 80,000 Japanese munitions makers are working day and night turning out ammunition for the Russian armies. This statement was made in the March, 1917, issue of the Japan Magazine, in an article on "Making Munitions for the Allies."

For refusing to go, "Conscientious Objector" has been written across the face of a clock at Walworth.

George Downard, a Sandgate veteran, refused the Turkish medal because he did not like the Turks.

M. Berezitzeff, vice-President of the Finnish Economic Department, arrested.

FROM ALL OVER

Eastern Ontario

There comes hosts of letters from people who have been benefited by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Because it cures in Nature's way, by building up vigor and vitality in the body, this treatment appeals to all as the most rational and most certain method of overcoming disease. Make the blood rich and red, instil new vital force into the starved nerve cells by using this great food cure and you will soon realize what it means to be strong and well.

System Run Down

Mrs. E. H. Stafford, corner Gore and D'Arcy Sts., Perth, Ont., writes: "Last spring my system was run down, my appetite was poor and I could not sleep at all well. Knowing the benefit others had derived from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I commenced using them. After continuing the treatment for some little time I felt much better, could sleep well, and found my appetite greatly improved. I have also recommended the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to many people who have had the same good results."

Loss of Weight

Mr. W. J. Wilson, grocer, Perth, Ont., writes: "In fitting up this building for a grocery business I worked very hard, and after putting in my stock I continued plugging away good and hard, too. I commenced to feel myself going down—my weight went from 180 pounds down to 154 pounds. My appetite began to fail, and, of course, upon retiring I could not get a good night's rest. Sometimes after going to sleep my nerves would twitch and I would awaken up with a start and then lie awake for hours. I remembered having used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food before, so I started in again, and took a good treatment, using about half a dozen boxes. I soon felt my appetite returning, I could sleep well and commenced gaining in weight, until I felt like a new man. From the benefits I have received from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I cannot speak too highly of them."

Nervous Indigestion

Mr. J. F. Miner, Third St., Cornwall, Ont., writes: "For a great many years I was troubled with stomach trouble, indigestion, nervousness and sleeplessness. Through reading your advertisements I was persuaded to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I had tried different preparations, as well as doctors' remedies, before, without relief, but after taking a treatment of Nerve Food I find I am greatly relieved and feeling much better. My wife also finds the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food a very great benefit for nervousness and sleeplessness."

Headaches Sleeplessness

Mrs. R. H. Code, 108 John St. East, Smith's Falls, Ont., writes: "For the last few years I had been suffering from headaches and sleeplessness, and could feel that I was in a nervous, run-down condition. The children at times would cause me a great deal of trouble, and sometimes, if they were noisy, it would seem as though I could not stand it. For a long time it was impossible for me to go to church or anywhere there was a crowd, because I would get almost blind and feel very dizzy, caused by weakness of the nerves. Some months ago, through reading your Almanac, I was induced to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I secured some and found that in a very short time I was being benefited, so I continued the treatment. Now I feel fine, can go to church or in a crowd anywhere without any difficulty. I can highly recommend the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to anyone suffering from nervousness, sleeplessness or run-down condition."

Sick Headache

Mrs. H. E. Wagar, Tweed, Ont., writes: "About eight years ago I was suffering from nervous debility, sleeplessness and a run-down condition. I had frequent sick headaches, and at times would wake up from sleep at night with a start, and then lie awake for a long time before I could get to sleep again. I secured some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food at the drug store and commenced using it. This treatment gave me such relief that I took many boxes — I cannot tell just how many, but enough to build up my system and rid me of nervousness and sleeplessness. I am not bothered now with sick headaches, and am enjoying extra good health. I recommend this medicine to all suffering from nervousness of any kind."

Rheumatism Neuralgia

Mrs. Fred Seymour, Water St., Cornwall, Ont., writes: "A couple of years ago my nerves were bad, I was in a run-down condition and was suffering from rheumatism and neuralgia. I also had headaches, lost my appetite and could not sleep at night. I tried different remedies, as well as doctors' medicine, without relief. A friend of mine advised me to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I secured a box and commenced using it, and found that I felt so much better I continued the treatment. Before long I had gained a good appetite, could sleep well at night, and am now much bette able to do my work. I am glad to recommend the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to anyone suffering from nervous trouble of any kind."

Exhausted Nerves

Mrs. Philip Wing, 4 Mill St. S., Smith's Falls, Ont., writes: "About a year ago I was suffering from nervousness and a run-down condition of the system. I felt that I required a good tonic to build me up. Seeing some of the advertisements in the papers about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I read of the benefit other people were deriving from the use of this Food Cure, so decided to try it. I purchased a box and found that I was greatly benefited by using them. I got more and continued the treatment with good success until I found I was greatly benefited. I have recommended the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to many of my friends."

Dizziness and Fatigue

Mrs. Chas. Lafferty, King St., Trenton, Ont., writes: "For some time I was troubled with nervousness, could not sleep well and was in a generally run-down condition. I used to take dizzy spells, and sometimes was so bad that I was afraid to walk on the street. A friend of mine had been using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with such good results that I commenced using them, too. I think I used about five boxes in all, and can say that I am now in much better health, can eat and sleep fine and do not feel that dizziness I used to. I am stronger and better in every way, and even my friends remark how much better I look. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me so much good that I cannot praise this wonderful medicine too highly. I would recommend this treatment to all suffering from nervousness or run-down system."

Billy Sunday Prays For All New York

Asks Divine Blessing Upon the Mayor and Other Officials and the People

NEW YORK, April 18.—Billy Sunday closed his meeting last night with a prayer for everybody in New York. Standing on his pulpit, with his twenty-thousand-odd hearers on their feet below him, he called down divine blessing on every class of the population. It was the second prayer of its kind in the New York campaign, but this one was longer and more detailed than the first one.

Here is Sunday's prayer—or some of it, for no shorthand could catch all of his rapid delivery:

"Thank you, Lord, for this great throng. Help them. Say, Jesus, that fellow's had a hard time to-day. He's been watching the ticker and it's gone against him. He's a lot poorer than when he went downtown to Wall Street this morning. Lord, help him; he needs lots of help.

"Lord, go down Broadway and Fifth and Sixth Avenues, through the theatre district and the big hotels, the saloons and cabarets. Don't you miss anybody. Jesus, save Wall Street; save the east side and the household of the poor.

"Lord, bless the Mayor. He's a good scout, my friend John is; Jesus, he's helped us along. Bless Woods of the police; he's a good man. Lord, Bless the firemen and the policemen; bless the fellows that deliver the mail. Then there's the Collector of the Port, my friend Dudley Malone; bless him. He's watching all that come in and catching the ones that try to put something over. Jesus, go down along the docks and the water front; go over into Jamaica and up in the Bronx. Go into the hospitals, bless everybody there; bless the physicians. Bless the lawyers, too, oh, Jesus, there's a bunch that needs lots of help.

"Then the newspapers. Aren't you proud of 'em, Lord? Wish I could remember them all. What with the war and the price of paper aren't you proud of the space they've given us? The devil didn't like those reports, Lord: he stood at the managing editor's elbow and said to him, 'Leave that out; don't give him much space to-night.' But it didn't do him any good. Bless the bows that sit on my right and my left and report the meetings. Bless the street car men, and the subway—the interurban—no, that's not right; what is it, Jesus? Yes, the Interborough; that's what I mean. Go down into the haunts of vice and corruption; don't you miss anybody, Lord. Don't make any difference whether he could get anything at the National City Bank or some of these big trust companies; bend over the battlements of Heaven and help him. Bless us, lead us, guide us, help us all and save us all. Lord. Amen."

In the afternoon service Sunday preached on personal work to an audience of about 6,000. He appealed for personal attempts on the part of Christians to convert others who are not believers. "You say, 'Where will I find these people to talk to them?' he said. "Where won't you find them? Where can you find a place where they are not? Only the cemetery. Right in your neighborhood, right in your block, how many are Christians? Is your husband a Christian? Are your children Christians? If so, let them alone and get after somebody else's husband and children. Suppose I said, 'Well, my family are all Christians; let the rest of the world go to the devil.' There's too much of that spirit in the church to-day.

"Go from house to house. Go to the people in your block, in your place of business. Have you said anything to the telephone girl when you called her up? You're quick enough to jump on her when she given you the wrong number. Have you said anything to the delivery boy, the milkman, the boy who throws your paper on the doorstep Have you said anything to the girl who waits on you at the store, to the servant who brings in your dinner at home to who brings in your dinner at home, to the woman who scrubs your floor Where will you find them? Where won't you find them?

"It is remarkable," said Mr. Grantler, "how mean some people are. I had with me on a fishing trip two friends who evidently were familiar with my reputation as an angler. Before starting, one of them made the following suggestion: We will agree that the first one who catches a fish must treat the crowd, I assented to this, and we started. Now, don't you know those two fellows both had a bite, and were too mean to pull them up."

"I suppose you lost, then?" remarked the friend.

Said the manager of the gas company, who was questioning an applicant for the job of meter inspector: "I want it understood that we don't tolerate drinking in our employees."

"Yes, sir; I can't drink, sir; one drink always makes me see double."

"Well-er-we might permit you to take one drink each day before you start to inspect the meters."

The Newest Idea In Hosiery

We paid a big sum to obtain new and improved machines to knit seamless, full-fashioned hosiery—the most up-to-date in the world. We control these machines—no others can use them.

Mercury Hosiery

knitted on these new machines has the narrow ankle that fits without a wrinkle—something that women have long wanted in Canadian-made hosiery. We get this by fashioning the hose at the sides (see 2 in the picture).

The toe also is perfectly turned and fits without a wrinkle (see 3).

The dotted lines at toe and ankle show how much wider ordinary hosiery is.

No. 1 at the top shows the fashioning here which makes the hosiery more elastic and comfortable at this point.

CANADIAN BIG RAID FINE ACHIEVEMENT

No Rest For Germans Anywhere in Front of British Lines—Dug-Outs Wiped Out

A British correspondent writes: Midway between Souches and Givenchy, within the German lines, lay a very strong position, honeycombed with trenches, mine galleries, and dug-outs, about which the Canadians were curious and perhaps even a little anxious. It culminates in a slight mound locally known as "The Pimple," which was believed to be heavily mined. This was the objective of the raid, and lay about 700 yards within the German lines. It, the trenches, and the wire in front of the enemy lines were bombarded, and at four o'clock the next morning a strong raiding party went out over the parapet to see what they could find. The front of the attack was about 600 yards north and south, and there was a party on the left to protect the northern flank of the attack. This party encountered the first opposition, being attacked by machine gun fire. The two officers in command of its were both wounded, and in the dark the party fell into some confusion; whereupon an officer from the main attacking body went over, took charge of the flanking party, straightened it out, and continued the fight until the main objective had been successfully gained.

Wiped Out in a Day

When the position on "The Pimple" was reached the Canadians found that, although its strength had, as they had thought, been formidable, it was formidable no longer. Our artillery had done its work; the trenches and galleries were wrecked, and all the patient toil with which the place had been fortified was wiped out in a day's bombardment. All that remained was to go through the trenches, take as many prisoners and papers as possible, wreck the dug-outs, and return. The dug-outs were very deep, and the voices of Germans talking in them could be heard. Smoke bombs were thrown down first, to induce the occupants to come out. In many cases they came, quite blinded by the smoke, not knowing in the least where they were. All these were, of course, taken prisoners.

Canadians' Losses Slight

The Canadians, in this attack on the most formidable point which they had yet raided on this sector, suffered, I am glad to say, comparatively slightly. Most of the casualties occurred on the left flank, where the German machine guns made the fighting very severe; but of our whole casualties 90 per cent. were "walking cases" and made their own way to the dressing station. What the German losses were, besides the 47 prisoners, cannot be known to us; but there were no "walking cases" from a bombed dug-out. And let us never forget the gunners. Their work is the foundation upon which all these operations are built, and without it all the individual valor and coolness in the world would be unavailing.

VALUE OF THE AEROPLANE

A correspondent from the seat of war writes: The value of the aeroplane in modern warfare cannot be too highly praised. From the ground it would be practically impossible to locate the enemies' dug-outs, secondary defences, and batteries. But the aeroplane takes us immediately to a new grade of warfare, in which the location of the defender's secondary trenches, guns, and even machine gun positions becomes a matter of extreme precision—provided only that the offensive has secured command of the air and can send his aeroplanes freely over the defender's lines.

SNOW AT THE FRONT

No Friend to the Boys Who Are Fighting the Enemy

All scouts hate snow. A man is creeping about snow-covered No Man's Land, when up goes a flare, and he knows that he is outlined in black against the ground as clearly as a man on a kinematograph film. The gunner adds his voice to the chorus of complaint. Officers and sergeants spend their days in seeing that the men do not make tracks in and out of the position for the Hun airmen to read. Every night, after the ammunition and rations have been brought up, all hands have to turn out and cover up the wheel tracks.

"Signals" weeps aloud. One airline after another snaps under the burden of flakes, and irascible brigade-majors and staff captains make themselves almost purple in the face trying to hold converse with each other. The flying men are the only people who get any benefit from snow, for the feet of men and horses print many secrets on its white surface. But not even the airman has a good word for the cold!

Dummy Seaplane Discovery

A steam trawler from Vlaardingen encountered between the Maas lightship and the Schouwen Bank an anchored dummy seaplane in which was a dummy figure dressed as an airman. A large number of contact wires were attached to the machine. A German submarine saw the trawler putting out a boat and, seeing that the trick had been discovered, fired several shots, which caused the machine to sink with a violent explosion.

Somme Battlefield, Refuse Dump

A correspondent from the front writes: The Somme battlefields appear like some great refuse dump. Litter is strewn everywhere. The evacuated German back areas remind one strikingly of the scenes around a deserted mining camp in which the gold veins have given out.

By permission of the War Office, a working model of a tank made out of biscuit tins at the front by Lieutenant Slaughter, A.S.C., was exhibited in Westminster.

CONVICTION QUASHED IN CASE OF DOCTOR

Justice Clute Holds That No Specific Charges Made.

TORONTO, April 20.—Justice Clute today quashed the conviction of a London doctor, who was fined $100 or two months in jail for issuing 201 prescriptions between February 15, 1916, and March 17, 1917.

The Judge held that no specific charges were made, other than that certain trenches of the Ontario Temperance Act had been made, and, further that very little evidence was admitted to prove the charges.

STARTING EARLY VEGETABLES IN THE GARDEN.

Home gardeners who do not own a hotbed and who cannot readily buy young plants can get much earlier crops of tomatoes, cabbage, cauliflower, peppers, eggplant and lettuce, if they will start the seed for their early gardens in seed boxes in the house. Early potatoes sometimes are forced in the same way. Seeds so planted germinate and are ready for transplanting by the time it is safe to sow the same kind of seed in the open ground When the soil is dry enough to work, therefore, the home gardener starts his early garden with seedlings well above the surface. Transplanting if properly done, instead of hurting seems to help such plants develop a strong root system. Garden enthusiasts should get a good deal of pleasure from this kind of preliminary indoor gardening. They also can use boxes to hasten the blooming period of many sorts of flowers which stand transplanting.

Any sort of wooden box, filled with good soil, answers the purpose. The following directions for making seed boxes and handling the plants have been prepared by the Bureau of Plant Industry and the States Relations Service, United States Department of Agriculture, for the guidance of the canning and gardening clubs in the North and West.

Seeds of early tomatoes and cabbage, as well as cauliflower and pepper, should be planted in a seed box in the house at once. The seed box should be 3 to 4 inches deep, 12 to 14 inches wide, and 20 to 24 inches long. A layer of about 1 inch of gravel or cinders should be placed in the bottom of the box; then it should be filled nearly full of rich garden soil, or soil enriched with decayed leaves or manure. The rich soil beneath the family woodpile or around decaying logs is splendid for this purpose. The soil should be pressed down firmly with a small piece of board, and rows made 1-4 to 1-2 inch deep and two inches apart crosswise of the box. The seed should be distributed 8 or 10 to the inch in the rows and be covered. The soil should be watered and the box set in a warm place in the light, in the sunshine by a window being best. Water enough must be given them from time to time to cause the seeds to germinate and grow thriftily, but not enough to leak through the box. If a piece of glass is used to cover the box it will hold the moisture in the soil and hasten the germination of the seeds.

When the plants are from an inch to an inch and a half high they should be thinned to one or two inches apart in the row so as to give them space enough to make a strong stocky growth. If it is desired to keep the plants which are thinned out they may be set two inches apart each way in other boxes prepared as mentioned for the seedbox. When the weather becomes mild the box plants should be set out of doors part of the time so that the plants will "harden off" in preparation for transplanting to the garden later. A good watering should be given just before the plants are taken out of the box for transplanting so that a large ball of earth will stick to the roots of each one.

"The Safeguard"

THAT the strong arm of protection is ever about those we love, is a beautiful—a comforting—an inspiring thought. Every man—if he is a man—has an ambition to shield his family from the consequences of what may happen to him. He knows it is a duty he owes to his wife and children—to those dependent upon him.

Women, by intuition, sense the need of this protection. Every woman has witnessed around her many of life's tragedies and, while unselfishness and pride may prevent her from speaking about it, she has a grim horror of herself having to face some day the same suffering and humiliation as she has seen become the lot of others.

It would be an easy matter by means of an Imperial Monthly Income Policy for you to build about your loved ones a strong and rugged safeguard against which the storms of adversity may beat, but to no avail—a safeguard which, after you are gone, will remain a permanent, tangible evidence of your affection.

It will place you under no obligation whatever to learn all about an Imperial Life Policy suited to your own particular needs. Write for full information today. Tomorrow you may be uninsurable.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAMES SUTHERLAND)

THE MILLENNIUM.

In our last we said that the Millennial Kingdom would continue upon the earth one thousand years; and the Jewish church before him, and the Christian church after him (St. John) have further believed and taught that these thousand years will be the seventh millenary of the world. This doctrine, he says, was generally believed in the three first and purest ages; but afterward grew into disrepute, having been debased with a mixture of fables. It has suffered by the misrepresentation of its enemies as well as by the indiscretion of its friends. It has been made an engine of faction and turbulent fanatics, under the pretence of being saints, have aspired to dominion and threatened the peace of civil society, one section of the church has endeavoured by all means to discredit this doctrine, the Kingdom of Christ, being founded on the ruins of anti-Christ. It sprang up again at the reformation and there is danger both of pruning and lopping it too short, and of suffering it to grow too wild and luxuriant. Great caution, soberness and judgment are required to keep the middle course. It is safest and best, faithfully, to adhere to the words of scripture, or to fair deductions from scripture, and to rest content with the general account, till time shall accomplish and cast light upon all the particulars. It is not our business to frame theories and invent hypotheses, but faithfully to follow the word of God, as our surest guide, without regarding much the authority of men (newborn on the prophecies). These views may thus be stated in the words of W. Jones. On this interesting subject much has been written by persons of learning, ingenuity and talent, the question which divides them is—will the reign of Christ during the one thousand years here promised be spiritual or personal. Are we to understand these verses in a literal or figurative sense? As the language of history or prophecy, is the resurrection here mentioned to be interpreted literally of the resurrection of the body from the grave. Will Christ descend in person from his throne in glory to remain again upon this earth during one thousand years, and shall all his people be raised from their graves at the commencement of the Millennial period and in their risen and glorified bodies inherit the earth, some understand the words literally, while others who consider the language to be prophetical and figurative, give a corresponding interpretation of it, considering the millennium to denote a time when the everlasting gospel shall be universally preached and the blessings of it participated both by Jews and Gentiles in a far more abundant and general way than at any former period; then the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth, in short, when the Kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the Kingdom, under the heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High Daniel 7-27, so opposite are the ways of this subject that difficulties attach to each, it were vain to disguise and useless to deny, but what else can be expected on a subject of unfulfilled prophecy. Let us keep in mind that it relates to events, yet future, that it does not constitute an article of the faith once delivered to the saints, though it certainly is one of no inconsiderable importance in reference to our duty in using means to extend the Redeemer's Kingdom in the earth. The preceeding extracts will sufficiently convey to the reader some idea of the nature of the statements which have been made as to the subject of the millennium without attempting to enter more fully into the modern controversies on the subject, It may, however, be well to state summarily what are the opinions held by those who advocate both views of the question, only observing that among these advocates, few, or none, hold the opinions of either part in their full extent or without some modifications to a greater or less degree. First: One view is that the millennium is to succeed the renewal of the earth by fire, and the second Advent of our Lord in glory, who is to reign on this new earth, with the risen and glorified saints, for at least one thousand years after having taken vengeance on all his enemies, then alive, who will not be raised from the dead till the thousand years expire, to receive their final sentence. That this second Advent of Christ in glory may be looked for very soon, and events are now happening, which entitle the believer to lift up his head and look up, believing that his redemption draweth nigh, that the conversion of the Jews is not to take place till this millennial period begins, nor any universal state of Christianity to exist before; that Christ's servants are then to serve him and see his face, and to be the ministers of his future purpose to this earth. Second: The opposite view is, that the second Advent of Christ in his glory, will not be till the end of the earth's history that the millennium will precede his coming, and that there is to be an apostasy after it, has run its appointed course that the millennium will not begin for two hundred years to come at least, and consequently the second Advent of Christ instead of being expected within a few years, is not to be expected for some hundred years. That during the millennium there will be a universal state of Christianity, though it is not meant to affirm, that every individual will believe but merely, that every nation in the whole world will receive, and generally speaking, obey the gospel to the extent that persecution will cease, and a happier order of things prevail. Both are agreed to the fact of a millennium, but differ wholly as to time, and as to its nature, there is, however, another opinion, which must not be passed without notice This would assume that the millennium is past, or passing away. Gipps is among those who take this view in recent times. By carrying the spiritualising interpretation to the extreme and considering the first resurrection as fulfilled in the wilderness, it, in effect places much of the thousand years in a period when darkness overspreads the face of the earth, and during several hundred years of which the profession of the truth, as it is in Jesus, was only to be found in a few harassed and persecuted individuals. Thus it represents the dragon as chained in the pit, while mohammedanism and other religions reigned supreme over the eastern and western world. This conclusion which represents the apocalyptic millennium, which has always been considered as but another name for the golden age of the church synchronising with the most calamitous period of her annals, will, no doubt, do violence to the most cherished sentiments of the reader, respecting this distinguished era, such is the admission of Bush, who advocates this view, adding, however, that he knows not how to avoid the above stated conclusion, and the reader will probably not be much inclined to admit premises which lead to such a result. Between such a statement and that of Cunningham, and others who expect our Lord speedily to appear in his glorified body personally to fill the throne of David and reign over his saints on earth, the view of Faber, looking for a large effusion of the spirit to establish the spiritual dominion of Christ may be considered as pointing out a middle course. The declaration of our Lord himself that his Kingdom is not of this world, and that it comes not with observation, John 18-36—Luke 17-20, also militates strongly against the idea of Christ assuming the charge of an earthly monarch. Wardlaw remarks that if the words occurred in an historical or epistolary composition to explain them symbolically, would justly be pronounced unnatural, unless specially warned of a purposed deviation. In a professedly symbolical book, there is the same force of objection against their being interpreted literally. The whole of this very vision is symbolical, the dragon, the binding with a chain, and the sealing. Why then are we immediately to make a transition from the symbolical to the literal, from the style of prophecy to the style of history. The vision of the souls of them that had been martyred he considers strongly, supports the figurative of spiritual interpretation, that it signifies a glorious revival, and extensive prevalence of the spirit and character of those who had laid down their lives for the word of God and for the testimony of Jesus. In reference to the literal interpretation; Wardlaw, further remarks that the description limits to a particular class or description of the martyrs, and that the words, that the rest of the dead lived not again till the thousand years were finished signifies the reappearance of the spirit and character of the hostile opponents of Christ and his cause at the end of that period. He also objects to the literal view as an anticipation of a part of the final judgment described as subsequently taking place on all the dead. He urges that the uncertainty of death is the same to us, as the uncertainty of the sounding of the trumpet of God, and that preparation for death and preparation for judgment are one and the same thing, that he who is not ready for the coming of the Son of God, and for taking his station before the dread tribunal, is not ready to die, and on the contrary that he who is ready to die is equally ready for the Lord's appearing.

Farmer Killed By a Train

Special to the Examiner:

BROCKVILLE, April 21.—Charles Knight, a farmer, was killed by a train near here.

Another unfortunate thing is the average man's inclination to believe everything he hears.

"Nature" chose Assam

Scientists tell us that Assam in northern India was the original home of the tea plant. Thousands of years ago "Nature" chose the climate and soil of this favored region as most suitable for growing tea.

It is, therefore, natural that the hillside gardens of Assam (see picture) grow the teas which to-day are famous for their flavor, fragrance and rich strength.

It is of these Assam teas, skilfully blended with choice Ceylons, that Red Rose Tea consists. It is this rich Assam strength that users of Red Rose Tea must thank for its splendid economy—for the greater number of cups it yields to the pound, fully one-third more than ordinary teas.

To make certain that these Assam qualities are fully preserved for you we put Red Rose Tea into dust, odor and air proof sealed packages. Red Rose Tea reaches you pure, fresh and full strength—we guarantee it.

GREATER PRODUCTION MOVEMENT

The canvas of owners of properties has not been as prompt as expected. The men undertaking the work have found that duties from day to day, and from night to night, have interfered. But there are available many properties and lots.

These arr being listed by the secretary and in a day or two the lists will be published by the good assistance of the papers. The lots will be in two lists.

Those lots for the use of which consent has been obtained from the owners. Another list, all equally good, but for the use of which consent has not been had. Not that the owners will not allow them to be used, but that the committee has not had time to interview.

For those, consent given, application for use will have to be fyled with the secretary, at the Patriotic Fund room. Applications may be made by 'phone, to be followed with written memo. This to avoid dispute as to priority of application. If the lot has not been already taken the applicant can have it and go to work.

For those lots, not consented to, no reference may be made to the secretary. Select from the list what you would like and hunt up the owner and arrange. It is a personal matter between you and him, or her, if the owner be a lady. But get consent to use and meet any small conditions specified.

It is hoped that the lists will be ready first of the week. This notice is printed that a lookout may be kept for the list in the papers.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Phil Webster

By HAROLD JOY

Phillis Webster as a little girl was a tomboy. At fourteen she was pretty as a picture, and at seventeen she was prettier still. But if she outgrew some of her tomboy practices she retained the tomboy spirit.

In some families all letters that come to the house are considered lawful prey by any member and opened at will. One day a letter came for Phillis' brother Jack from Florida. Jack being away at the time, Phillis opened the missive. It was from his friend, Egbert Farnsworth, who was running an orange plantation in Florida, urging Jack to make him a visit. Farnsworth said that he was without associates, having only an aunt with him who kept house for him, and he wished Jack would come down and make him a visit.

Phillis was seized with a desire to leave the rigorous northern winter for the genial southern climate. If she were only a man instead of a girl she would contrive, if possible, to have Jack's invitation transferred to herself. As it was, she wrote Mr. Farnsworth that Jack was not at home and would not be able to accept his kind invitation.

Phillis wrote a hand that might easily be mistaken for a man's and signed herself "Phil Webster." By return mail she received a reply from Farnsworth extending the invitation to Phil.

This was a terrible temptation for Phillis. So far as propriety was concerned, Farnsworth's aunt being with him, Phil might visit the plantation, though it would not be exactly the thing for a girl of a retiring disposition to do.

Phil struggled with herself for some time, then gave way.

When Egbert Farnsworth went to the station and a pretty girl accosted him, saying that she was Phil Farnsworth, he could have been knocked over with a feather. Phil pretended not to notice his surprise, but apologised for making the visit, saying that her father and brother being both away and she being very lonely, besides, the winter being very cold and, knowing that he had an aunt with him for chaperon, she had not the courage to refuse an invitation from her brother's most intimate friend.

Egbert was tickled to death at having a girl visitor and took her home to his aunt, whom he instructed to assume the direction of her movements, as if Phil were her daughter. Phil appeared as unsophisticated as a country girl of fifteen and convinced the aunt that she had no idea she was doing anything out of the way.

Farnsworth behaved very circumspectly. He consulted his aunt before proposing to take Phil anywhere with her. Then he proposed a bathing party, and whenever the good lady demurred as to the proprieties the three went together.

Phil had affected a childlike timidity as well as simplicity. Though she had taken prizes in swimming contests, she went into the water shrinkingly, as though fearing to wet her pink toes. Miss Farnsworth always accompanied her to the shore and charged Egbert to see that she never got beyond her depth. Phil enjoyed the play, in which she was performing the principal part, immensely and begged Egbert to teach her how to swim, keeping him busy giving her instructions.

But this kind of bathing did not suit Phil at all. She longed to take a header off the dock twenty feet above the water. One morning about daybreak getting out of bed she donned her bathing dress and stealthily stole out to the dock, which was but a few hundred yards from the house. All was still, and she believed every one was asleep. Unfortunately for her Miss Farnsworth had awakened early and was tossing about in her bed. Thinking that to stir about her room might enable her to go to sleep again after returning to bed, she got up and walked the floor. Glancing out through a window, she saw Phil in bathing dress hurrying toward the dock. Surprised, she paused and watched. Phil went to the far end of the dock, then plunged off head foremost.

Miss Farnsworth, thinking that the girl was either a sleepwalker or was intending to commit suicide, gave a shriek that awakened Egbert. Hastily putting on a dressing gown, he ran into his aunt's room. Miss Farnsworth's eyes were strained toward the dock. Egbert followed them with his and saw some one swimming like a dolphin.

"Who is it?" he asked.

"Phil!" cried the astonished woman, with a tone of severity, for her eyes were opened to the fact that she had been made a dupe.

When Phil finished her swim she returned to the house and stole up to her room as warily as she had gone out.

After breakfast Egbert held a consultation with his aunt concerning their guest. Miss Farnsworth argued that they would be blamed by Phil's family for harboring her and advocated her being sent home at once. Egbert pleaded for delay, saying he had a plan that would obviate all danger. Miss Farnsworth was persuaded, and Phil was permitted to remain awhile longer. But Egbert informed her that her game of childlike simplicity was played out.

Egbert's plan was to take her home as his fiancee. This he did, and it served to protect her from a severe reception. They were all glad to get rid of the responsibility of keeping her in order.

The Crown of Womanhood

"Uncared for hair cannot be beautiful. There is no part of the human makeup so revengeful as the hair. It cries out: Look at me, care for me, or I will disgrace you! Treat me with consideration and I will be a glory to you."

With the above words, Lillian Russell, an unquestioned authority on feminine attractiveness, places no uncertain value on nice hair as a beauty asset. Unkempt, uncared for hair not only cannot be attractive but is actually a disgrace.

But why have ill-kept, untidy hair? By devoting a few moments regularly to brushing and intelligent application of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE, the hair may be made to yield wonderful returns in increased personal charm.

Dandruff is the direct cause of more hair trouble than anything else. The hair becomes thin, harsh, uneven and falls out in quantities. It looks dead and lifeless; there is no luster. The scalp itches.

HERPICIDE will remove the dandruff which is causing all the trouble, clean the scalp, give the hair life, snap and luxuriance. The hair stops coming out, the itching ceases almost at once and withal there is a most gratifying sense of cleanliness.

To the woman who wishes to make the most of nature's gifts by having fluffy, beautiful hair, NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE is a toilet necessity. It is exquisitely perfumed and is a delightful hair dressing.

In 50c and $1.00 sizes. At drug stores and toilet goods counters everywhere. Guaranteed by The Herpicide Co.

Send 10 cents for sample bottle and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. S, Detroit, Mich.

Historic Inn Closed.

"The Three Pigeons," one of England's oldest and most famous inns, and the sole existing tavern of Elizabethan times, was closed a few days ago by the Middlesex Licensing Justices, in accordance with a movement inaugurated some time ago by the temperance leaders to restrict the number of licensed inns.

"The Three Pigeons" was used as a background for the low comedy scenes in the "Merry Wives of Windsor," and Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," and is alluded to in Dickens' "Our Mutual Friend." The inn, perhaps, has had more literary associations than any other English tavern.

Few Doctors in Serbia.

That Serbia, a country of 3,000,000 population, has fewer than 200 doctors is a surprising revelation of the war.

"NEU-TONE"

An Oil Paint For Flat Interior Decoration

Simple, harmonious color schemes in plain, restful tints, give an added charm to the home. "NEU-TONE" is the modern wall finish. It is cheaper and better than wall paper—and doubly pleasing because of its quiet effects.

"NEU-TONE" is waterproof, sanitary and durable. It cannot scale, fade or rub off—and may be washed with soap and water.

When you get new furniture and want to change the "NEU-TONE" decorations of any room, simply apply a fresh shade of "NEU-TONE" over the one on the wall.

"NEU-TONE" saves the scraping and muss that usually accompanies decorating. "NEU-TONE" is equally good for every room in the house—for any plastered wall ceiling, burlap, wood or metal surface.

Ask for a copy of "Harmony in Neu-Tone", "Town and Country Homes" also "Floors, Spic and Span". All are free, to you. 99

CAMPBELL & BEST

WESLEY'S FISHING DAY.

Famous Musician's Joke Was Countered by His Host.

Mr. Edward Lloyd, the famous British tenor, whose reappearance with that other veteran singer, Sir Charles Santley, at the Mansion House at a concert organized by the Lady Mayoress for the benefit of the Belgian Refugees, aroused so much enthusiasm, tells an amusing story of that eccentric genius, Dr. Wesley.

The famous composer and organist conducted the first Gloucester Festival at which Mr. Lloyd sang at the beginning of his career. "There are many capital stories told about Wesley," says Mr. Lloyd. "He was a most enthusiastic fisherman, and on one occasion was out with his rod and line fishing in a piece of water when a keeper approached him and told him the stretch was private.

"'Oh, it is?' he said. 'My name's Wesley.'

"'I don't care,' said the keeper, 'what your name is; you can't fish here without an order.'

"'All right,' said Wesley, 'you take in my name to your master, and I'll follow you.'

"The keeper consented. The owner expressed regret at the occurrence, and said he would be charmed if the doctor would remain to lunch. After lunch the host said he would be delighted if the doctor would try his organ, a very fine instrument in the hall, and the doctor, nothing loath, sat down and play for half an hour. The music over, Wesley returned to his fishing, fished to sundown, and then went home.

"The next day the owner of the organ and the lake was surprised to receive a letter from Wesley asking for ten guineas for his services on the organ.

"Wesley was even more surprised when he had in reply a letter as follows:

"'My charge for a day's fishing is twenty guineas. If you will kindly forward ten guineas, that will make us quits.'"

Careless Speech.

"I hear the Grabcoins have hired a tutor for young Reginald Grabcoin."

"Yes; but whenever Mr. Grabcoin mentions the new member of the household Mrs. Grabcoin is greatly humiliated."

"Why so?"

"Mr. Grabcoin has a way of pronouncing 'tutor' as if the person referred to did exercises on the trombone, cornet or some other kind of horn."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

THE A B C OF WAR SERVICE

There is not yet a general understanding of the conditions and obligations of service in this war. Young men are offering themselves and designating what they are to do. War means something far different from what is implied in that kind of volunteering. The man who would serve his country submits himself in detail as follows:

A—He presents himself without condition or reservation for such use as the country can put him to.

B—He fills out a statement for the information of the Government as to what he is best fitted for. This is a description and not the expression of a preference.

C—Authorities duly constituted by the State or nation should, and will, pass on the applicant, those best qualified for other service to be enfitted for soldiers to be enlisted, those rolled for the period of the war and assigned to their regular tasks, under control of the Government. The soldiers show their dedication to their country by their uniform, the others by the brassard.

The big point is that soldiers and industrial reserves must be under a common control and there must be no trifling. European experience has shown that it takes five men behind to keep one soldier at the front. When men submit to the discipline they develop their full usefulness and the status is the same for warriors and workers. All the various forms of war activity can be kept going, and there will be no disruption of industry. But no man can pick and choose. His fitness for war must be judged by his country and not by himself. That is the sacrifice that the young manhood of America is facing to-day.—New York Times.

The Stage Is All Set for Peterboro's First Motor Show With a Fine Promise Of Success

Many Automobiles and Accessories will be Exhibited Directing the Public's Attention to their Various Styles and Makes. Proceeds will be Donated to the Red Cross Society. See the Motor Car at Its Best.

The Motor Show at the Armouries on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 26, 27 and 28, should prove a big attraction to the citizens of Peterboro and the surrounding district, for the reason that the automobile has long ceased to be a novelty but has become a commodity within the means of a steadily increasing number of people, as it is to others a real necessity.

Once a luxury for the rich alone it has stepped down with all its improvements, gracefulness of outline and efficency of service, inviting the man of moderate, even humble, means to share its pleasure and material advantages.

EFFICIENCY HAS IMPROVED — COST STEADILY RECEDES.

This is probably the outstanding feature of the developmenc of the automobile. Simplicity of action and operation, decreasing cost of running expenses, practically unlimited adaptability, compactness and beauty of design, new and appealing comforts with security, these and countless other attractive improvements have been accompanied not by proportionate advancing carges, but by prices that, for the most part, have been gradually diminishing. For such is the wonder of this vast industry.

RESPONDS TO DEMANDS OF PEACE AND OF WAR.

Its utility is the strongest recommendation the automobile presents to-day. It is regarded as a luxury only in after consideration. The mine of its resourcefulness and usefulness has only been tapped. Its advent has revolutionized and practically monopolized transportation. Manufacturer, merchant and farmer are discovering every day new uses for the motor-driven car in some or other of its many forms. As the lumbering tank, an evolution of the armoured car, it strikes with abandon and fearful force at wired entanglements and skillfully fortified trenches. In agriculture its possibilities are apparently more numerous than were ever dreamed of, and its general advantages to the farmer are only limited by inadequate roads. In the form of a freight truck its improvements have been exceptionally rapid in their succession. They have solved transportation problems with a directness and thoroughness at which the world has marveled. And as in the business of peace, so have they responded to the demands of war, turning the tide of battle, carrying supplies from the railheads, often to the trenches, and expediting the removal of the wounded, thereby assisting in reclaiming lives that were almost spent.

THE AUTOMOBILE PROVIDES A NEW FAMILY INTEREST.

But it is to the average parents with a family of young children the automobile holds out the fulfillment of splendid dreams. The motor car brings the country and lakeside, with all their scenic delights, within an afternoon or evening's run. Just turn the self-starter switch and—how smoothly the landscape rolls past you. From your doorstep to the tonneau, then a magic flight from hill to hill, sweeping through the shadows where woods meet overhead, and out into the light where the road reaches through open fields. This is the unalloyed pleasure of motoring, seeking out new by-paths, new vistas, with the countryside, far and near, beckoning to you.

After all this is the secret of the luxury of motoring—it is ever bringing new contacts with nature. In all this aspect the automobile in its touring exerts an imperceptible influence, tending to broaden and deepen character that is susceptible to the manifold impulse from nature. The open, with its universal appeal, the wealth and happiness it brings, these are the urging advantages most fathers recognize in their desire to provide pleasure that will attract, benefit, and at the same time, hold their children together. And the mother, too, for the automobile is as tractable to the feminine as to the masculine. The motor wheel knows no sex.

A RECOGNITION OF THE MOTOR CAR'S SERVICES.

It is not strange, therefore, that the automobile should be accorded the dignity, even the homage, of which the Motor Show is an eloquent expression. This age that exacts efficiency first must recognize the wonderful service of the motor driven vehicle in all and in any of its forms. The farmer who once barricaded his roads against these "fearsome and dangerous contraptions," realises to-day, as he admits the error of his preconceptions, that his doubts and reluctance have left him only the legacy of bad roads. In this direction, alone, the influence of the automobile upon the highways of this country is rapidly working an extraordinary change, now on the eve of an extraordinaryr of fuk fruition. For the farmer it annihilates distance with an effectiveness that promises to affect his affairs in all their ramified details, and may eventually alter his social and business ideas and customs to an extent of which we are only vaguely sensible at the present time.

For these reasons we tender our homage to the automobile, the Aladdin's lamp of tion the automobile presents to-day. It is transportation. From behind the wheel or the sidewalk's edge we admire its purring, powerful action; in the Motor Show we set it apart, on a pedestal as it were, as a tribute to its service.

CARS TO BE EXHIBITED.

Overland.
Gray-Dort.
Chalmers.
Grant Six.
Chevrolet.
Dodge.
Briscoe.
Ford.
Maxwell.
Studebaker.

In addition there will be bicycles, tires and accessories.

FOR THE RED CROSS.

And, above all, remember that the proceeds will be handed over to the Red Cross Society. This patriotic feature should not be overlooked. Band concerts, refreshments and other attractions, are being arranged for the entertainment of the crowds. The admission charges will be 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children.

Strips of five tickets for one dollar are offered for those who will bring their friends.

MEN AND WOMEN OF THE WORLD, IN THE WORLD'S SPOTLIGHT

Gen. A. C. McDonnell, C.M.G., Commander of the Canadians. Born in Windsor, Ont. Son of S. S. McDonnell, K.C. Was educated at Trinity College, Port Hope, and later at the Royal Military College, Kingston. Served in N.W.M.P.

Jerome K. Jerome, the noted British author, is soon going to France to drive a Red Cross ambulance. The humorist, who is fifty-seven years old, has frequently offered his services since the war began, but without success.

Famous French aviator, Mungesser, shot his twentieth German plane.

Joseph Reinach, French Minister of State (formerly Minister of Commerce). Editor of the "Figaro." He is now attracting much attention by his editorial attitude, "Away With the Hohenzollerns." It is too vague to speak of destroying the German militarism, we must abolish German militarism's soul, which is the House of Hohenzollern with its feudal castes and its birds of prey.

Lady Spring-Rice, wife of the British Ambassador to the United States, and her children.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, British Ambassador to the United States.

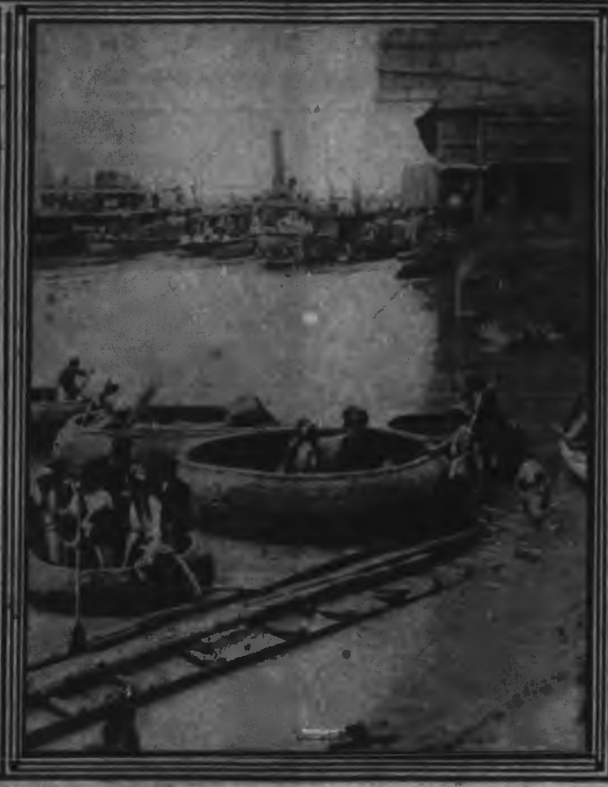
Mrs. Douglas Haig, wife of the British Commander. She was, before her marriage, Hon. Dorothy Vivian, daughter of the third Lord Vivian.

Lord Northcliffe, owner of the London Times and other papers, declared by many to be the most influential man in public life in Great Britain.

Cardinal Mercier, Prelate of Malines.

Count Von Czernin, the new Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, who will be a factor when the time comes to sign peace.

A Peep Into Bagdad - "The Enemy Trenches Were Entered by Our Patrols"



THE FALL OF BAGDAD—The country through which General Sir Stanley Maude has advanced has been cleared of Turkish troops and no trouble is expected with the Arabs. The centry is guarding a point near the Tigris, for, owing to geographical reasons, the army must keep in touch with the great river. (To the left.)

Since Bagdad has again come into the limelight a great many photographs are arriving from there giving one a good idea of the city. Here is one of the waterfront showing modern shipping in the background and very ancient craft in the front.

Here is another view of Bagdad, reminding one of Hall Caine's famous "Eternal City." The structures on the left are the Government buildings, and on the street one finds almost every nationality, Jews, Arabs, Persians and a scattering of Turks, who mostly hold official positions. The costumes are very attractive

For many weeks past the British troops on the Western Front have been making continual inroads into the German positions. This is a typical case of an enemy trench captured in a raid during the night, northeast of Bouchavesnes. A few prisoners were captured. The above photograph shows specially constructed bridges used for crossing trenches.

This is a picture from the front held by the Australians, depicting them clearing an artillery dugout and [illegible], using a front Line light railway truck.

The work of the Royal Flying Corps. An incident of "aerial activity" on the British front. Dismantling a German machine which was forced to land behind our lines.

A Little Bit of Everything From the War Regions

"Oh, I know that one, he lived at our house," a child exclaims as German prisoners pass. Some of these soldiers were billeted at these children's homes when they occupied French territory, and were captured when the Allies regained possession of the stricken region.

These are not the six sick Sikhs of the story, but four very healthy Sikhs fighting for the King "Somewhere in France." The Sikh is the most terrible fighter in England's native forces, with the possible exception of the Ghourkha, who is smaller, but a whirlwind in a fight.

Indian troops being transported up the Tigris to the fighting front by barge. The Tigris affords the main line of communication for the expedition with the base at Basra.

British Tommies greeting the hospital barge on its arrival with sick and wounded from the front. Only a few of the heterogeneous elements that made up the expedition are here shown.

"Tirailleurs Tunisiens" doing their family washing while at rest behind the lines. The faithful manner in which France's African colonies have responded is a marvel.

One of the buildings of the Lyon Exposition being used as a depot for the collection and distribution of nothing but shirts and underwear.

- Official Photographs of the Canadians' Visit to Limerick -

1.—Badge collecting at Limerick from the Canadian Irish. 2.—Few Canadian Irish officers left Limerick with their badges and buttons. Some of Limerick's fair ladies who collected, with hands full. 3.—A new recreation for our wounded soldiers in a London hospital. A large pond being frozen over at "Grovelands" Southgate Auxiliary War Hospital, the wounded and their nurses are enjoying themselves on the ice. 4.—A casualty on the ice. A nurse has a spill.

"I was preparing to shave a chap the other afternoon," says a head barber. "I had trimmed his hair, and from such talk as I had had with him I judged him to be an easy-going, uncuttable sort of fellow. But suddenly his manner changed. Out of the corner of his eye he had seen a man enter whose appearance upset him.

"Harry, George!" he muttered to me. "Lather to the eyes—quick, quick! Here comes my tailor!"—Tit-Bits.

A city lad from the densest tenement district was taken to the country by a farmer. A few days later he was called down to harness a mule. The lad was too lazy to light a lantern, and in the dark he didn't notice that one of the cows was in the stable with the mule. The farmer, impatient at the long delay, shouted from the house: "Billy! Billy! What are you doing?" "I can't get the collar over the mule's head," yelled back the boy. "His ears are frozen."

PERCY'S PUZZLED! WANTS Your Help!!

$510.00 in Cash Prizes to be Awarded

MARY'S letter is surely a puzzler. She has so mixed up the letters in the names of things she would like Percy to give her for her birthday gift that they spell something different entirely. Sometimes she has given words two or three words out of one name, as in number nine, which is undoubtedly "Diamond Ring."

Each of the names in Mary's letter represents a present that any girl would like to receive for her birthday. You know one of them; now try to solve the remaining names, and when you do, re-write Mary's letter, substituting what you consider the correct names and send your solution to us. In this interesting contest we will award

$510.00 in Cash Prizes

1st Prize	$150.00 in Cash	14th Prize	$5.00 in Cash

Fifty Cash Prizes of $1.00 each

PERCY'S PLAN WILL HELP YOU

THE first thing Percy did was to write down the names and make a list of all the things that would make nice presents for a girl, so that he could compare his lists with Mary's and see how many names would fit the puzzling words. He was surprised to find the number of nine letters ones he could get for a girl, the very next his list contained the following: Sewing set, umbrella, wrist watch, silk waist, manicure set, pearl comb, hat pieces, lace handkerchiefs, napkin ring, cut glass, silver chafing dish, diamond ring, candy, photo frame, parasol, bottle perfume, chinese rug, candy, dressing gown, jewelry, desk, tatting set, pictures, flowers, pair of vases, lace collar, etc., etc. These suggested presents may help you. Get a pencil and paper and try!

How to Send Your Answers

USE one side of the paper only in writing out Mary's letter and leave in the names in the numbered order of the puzzling ones. In the letter left blank, proper letters of the puzzling word you find correct. Write your name and address plainly, and when you are ready, send your solution to us. Write your answers on a postal card, not sealed, money, drawer or typewritten answers. A competitor may send as many as thirty sets of answers to the contest, but only one set will be considered in any family. Every letter received is held to all conditions of this Contest and is subject to the decision of the Judges, whose decision will be final. Entry to the contest is barred to all employees of this Company and their families.

DISTURBANCES IN GERMANY SPREADING

General Haig's Men Smash A Mile Closer to Cambrai

Capture of Gonnelieu After Fierce Fighting Announced This Morning---French Gain More Ground North of Rheims Inflicting Heavy Losses on the Army---Conditions in Germany are Becoming Serious---Food Riots and Munition Strike Spreading Everywhere.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, April 21.—Field Marshal Haig smashed another blow at Cambrai to-day, and advanced more than a mile toward that stronghold of the Hindenburg line. His capture of Gonnelieu was announced in an official statement to-day. Haig reported sharp fighting in this drive. He likewise detailed the repulse of a German attack delivered at Fauquissart, and considerable artillery firing at a number of places along the front.

With the capture of Gonnelieu, Haig's steel line paralleling the Cambrai-St. Quentin highway had been shoved one mile closer Cambrai, and a driving angle for a blow on that city formed reaching from Haveyncout and Villers Plouich to Gonnelieu on the north, to Villers Guislain and Epesy on the south. "During the night we captured Gonnelieu after sharp fighting, taking a number of prisoners," the report said. "An enemy party attempted to enter our trenches in the neighbourhood of Fauquissart, but were repulsed. Artillerying was active at a number of places during the night."

PARIS (French Official Communique), April 21. — More ground was gained by French attacks north of Rheims to-day, while General Nivelle's forces beat back German attacks upon the positions around Monte Haut, which was wrested from the enemy a few days ago. The French official statement, announcing these details of the past twenty-mour hours' fighting, declared heavy losses had been inflicted upon the Germans in the Monte-Haute repulse. Artillery was active during the night north of the Aisne in the region of Nanuil La Fosse and Hautebise. The statement said cannonading was particularly active east of Craonne and north of Rheims.

French forces gained ground in grenade fighting south of Juvincourt and east of Courcy. Juvincourt lies five miles due east of Craonne and about fifteen miles northwest of Rheims. Courcy is five miles northwest of Rheims.

A German attack on Monte-Haute was repulsed with losses to the enemy. French detachments raided the German lines west of Maison-de-Champagne, imprisoning forty Germans.

AMSTERDAM, April 21.—Bread strikes spreading, munition factories forced to suspend operations, soldiers clashing with the people, and general disorder and discontent, with exceedingly serious prospects. This is the summary of the news brought by newspapers and travellers from Germany this morning. According to reports troops were called out to restore order in several centres, and in clashes with the rioters had killed and wounded several. Dusseldorf and Madgeburg are said to be in a state of seige. A meeting of strike delegates in Berlin, it is said, rejected a proposition advanced by some of their leaders, demanding that the German Government immediately renounce any intention of annexation in the war, abolish compulsory service, and institute at once a general franchise system.

(By Perry Arnold.)

NEW YORK, April 21.—While official statements continue to relate the continued forward sweep of the Franco-British armies, interest centred to-day on unofficial reports indicating widespread unrest and grave disorders in Germany and Austro-Hungary.

Although German official statements denied any rioting, Copenhagen and Amsterdam, on the other hand, heard many reports of thousands of workmen joining in the strike, of disorders in various cities, and of desperate attempts by German military leaders to persuade a resumption of work on the ground that absence of men from munition plants might seriously hamper the soldiers now fighting against the tremendous Franco-British offensive.

Meanwhile various Dutch and Swiss cities heard rumours indicating the gradual crumbling of Germany's influence in Austria-Hungary—Rome even reporting a revolutionary outbreak so serious as to require the establishment of martial law in twenty-six cities in Hungary.

ROME, April 21.—A revolution is imminent in Hungary, according to Vatican advices to-day, as a result of various disturbances. The information here asserted Budapest and twenty-five other cities and towns had been proclaimed in a state of siege.

YMUIDEN, Holland, April 21. — Nineteen Americans and fifteen of other nationalities, composing the crew of the Norwegian sailing ship Kongala, a Belgian relief ship, were landed here to-day. They reported their vessel sunk by either a submarine or a mine last night.

COPENHAGEN, April 21.—Sixty thousand workmen in Berlin are still resisting all efforts of the Government to end the general strike, according to word received here to-day. Two days ago the Government let it be known through official news channels that the entire "strike was settled."

The German Government is conducting the most searching investigation to unearth hidden stores of food.

LONDON, April 21.—Winston Churchhill, former First Lord of the Admiralty, now himself in khaki, wants an American expeditionary force sent to France as soon as possible—simply for the effect the presence of the Americans would have on the Allied forces.

"Of course I can express only my personal opinion," he said to the United Presses to-day. "But it seems to me certain that presence of even a single American division on the battlefields of France or Flanders this year, would exercise influence and afford encouragement out of all proportion to the actual number of men employed."

TO THE LADIES OF PETERBOROUGH

Housecleaning time is with us again, and all careful housewives are considering how best to dispose of their accumulation of worn-out garments, scraps of cloth, old and new, scraps of paper, paper bags, etc., from the grovers; old metal.

You are urged to donate them to the Local Council of Women for the benefit of the "Supervised Playgrounds."

What would amount to but a trifle at the door can be disposed of by us for something worth while.

The collection will be made as far as possible through the children of the Public Schools, who are urged to do their best; a penny saved is a penny gained, even in the matter of gasoline.

If you have not children attending, or the bulk is too great to be carried, send your name and address to the Principal of the nearest Public School, or to 'phone 1368, 1214, or 1845, and we will send or call for them. To-day great things can be accomplished only through careful attention to small things; do not think any thing too little to send, as long as it is clean. The collection will be made next week if possible. Watch for further announcement.

CORP. HUBERT O'KEEFE, who is officially reported wounded. His home is at 79 Lansdowne street.

TRACTOR PLOW IS OFFERED FARMERS OF THIS COUNTY

Provincial Government Prepared to Send One Here Immediately If it Will be Fully Employed in This District

MR. GILLESPIE BEHIND IT

In a telephone communication this morning with Mr. C. F. Bailey, assistant Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Toronto, Mr. G. A. Gillespie was informed that the Department would immediately provide a tractor for plowing and cultivating purposes if the farmers wanted it. The only expense to the farmers will be the wages of the driver and the cost of whatever gasoline is used. These items combined present no formidable expense, and considering the amount of work that could be accomplished the cost should be decidedly less than the ordinary method of plowing.

Mr. Gillespie believes that it would be an easy matter to bring together a number of farmers whose fields are fairly level and get them to co-operate, assisting one another. With a motor tractor plowing and harrowing could be carried on during the night, if necessary, and a large acreage of ground turned up. Mr. Gillespie wants the farmers to take a local tractor and immediately put it into use in order that the spring work may be speeded up, and as much ground as possible prepared for seeding.

AN AT-HOME

St. Peter's T.A.S. will hold an At Home Monday evening; April 23rd, in St. Alphonsus Lyceum. The admission will be 50c.

PTE. VICTOR BULLIED — Mounted Rifles, who is officially reported wounded. This is the second time he has appeared in the casualty lists.

"LEST WE FORGET"

In the midst of our rejoicing over the splendid victory of the Canadians at Vimy Ridge, and our sorrow in the price in flesh and blood that has been paid for that success, let us not forget the immortal stand made by the First Canadian Division at Ypres, in April, 1915, of which the Manchester Guardian recently said: "Canada's name will surely be associated throughout all time with the stemming of the German advance at Ypres."

It was on the evening of April 22, two years ago to-morrow, that the Canadians were called upon to show they were worthy sons of Empire. The story of how the French Algerian troops overcome by the horrible German gas, bolted and left a wide gap in the line through which the German hordes commenced to pour, and how of the Canadian battalions who were holding the trenches to the south extended their lines and flung their left flank back to oppose a thin khaki line against the Huns' rush to Calais, will never be forgotten. The night march of the other Canadian battalions who were in reserve including the 2nd Battalion with the Peterborough boys forming the greater part of No. 1 Company, undauntedly tramping into the hell-hole that awaited them, meeting hordes of wildly frightened Turcos fleeing from the battle line, and then throwing themselves into the thick of the fray in the early hours of April 23rd, is still fresh in the minds of our people as is the terrible fighting of the next few days when the Canadians outnumbered ten to one refused to break and by "their bravery and determination saved the situation," to quote Sir John French's official report.

This is the second anniversary of the great battle, and it is expected that every person in Peterborough, who has a Union Jack will fly it to-morrow. The day will be commemorated by the Great War Veterans, who will attend divine service at Knox Presbyterian Church.

Up to a short time ago the Peterborough newspapers have been supplied with copies of casualty notices, so that when messages were received from Ottawa in regard to local soldiers, the news could be published on the same day. Henceforth this source of information will not be available, and the Examiner appeals to the relatives of Peterborough soldiers to inform this office if any official news is received. They should remember that the citizens generally are vitally concerned in the news of casualties among our boys at the front, and unless relatives will supply the particulars, such information will no longer be available for publication. Please telephone the Examiner if any news is received.

Capt. Harold F. Hill.

Capt. Harold F. Hill, a few days ago reported missing, is to-day officially reported killed in action. The sad news was received by his father, Mr. W. H. Hill, this morning, and will bring sorrow to a very large circle of friends. Capt. Hill, who was born here, was widely known and most popular. The bereaved family will have the sympathy of the community generally. He was a fine specimen of Canadian manhood, a splendid athlete, and a warm-hearted friend, who will be missed in many circles. The high regard in which he was held in his battalion is shown by the following letter received by his father:

38th Battalion, Canadians,
France, 25th Jan., 1917.

My dear Mr. Hill,—I was very pleased to receive your letter dated Dec. 15th regarding your son, who is with me.

I can quite understand the worry you undergo as regards his welfare, and I sincerely trust that he may be spared to return to you after this struggle has been brought to a satisfactory conclusion (from our point of view).

I think a great deal of Harold, and although he does not know of it, I try to give him every consideration possible. By this I do not mean that I spare him from hard work or from his share of what is going, at the expense of others, but I have him continually in the "back of my head" and never let a possible opportunity pass to assist him.

I have just been able to put him through for the acting rank of Captain, and am sending him away on leave to-morrow wearing three stars.

My attraction to him is due, firstly, that I consider him absolutely straight (a great thing these days). He is a splendid type of athlete, a splendid sport and lives a clean life.

In the two years he has been with me I have never had occasion to find fault or criticize him.

I honestly congratulate you on having such a son.

I will advise you immediately should occasion necessitate, but I sincerely trust this may never be necessary.—Sincerely yours,

C. M. Edwards.

Sergt. Arthur A. Ringer.

Mrs. Arthur Ringer, 478 Aylmer St., received official word this morning that her husband, Pte. Arthur A. Ringer, who were overseas with the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported admitted to No. 13 General Hospital, Boulogne, on April 13th, wounded severely in the head and abdomen. Sergt. Ringer was for many years a member of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers, and enlisted with the 93rd Battalion in the winter of 1915-16. He went overseas with the 93rd, and was transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front, where he was serving with the Lewis Machine Gun Section.

Lieut. J. M. Watt.

Lieut. J. M. Watt, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was one of the many Canadian officers wounded at Vimy Ridge. News has been received that Lieut. Watt is now in hospital at Bristol, England, wounded in the foot. Lieut. Watt, who is a son of Mr. John Watt, Peterborough, and a brother of Capt. R. P. Watt, of the 57th Regiment, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, enlisted in the 93rd Battalion last spring, and when the bat-

WAR VETERANS' TAG DAY GREAT SUCCESS

PTE. GEO. MELTON, formerly of 93rd Battalion, who is reported ill from trench fever.

In Spite of the Weather, Tags Sold Freely and Results Should Break Record—War Veterans to Attend Service at Knox Church To-morrow.

YPRES ANNIVERSARY

In spite of threatening weather, the tag day of the Great War Veterans today promises to be a splendid success. A small army of "taggers," consisting of the returned soldiers themselves, the members of the Daughters of the Empire and other organizations, and a number of other patriotic women, was at work early, and the tags sold freely, so freely indeed that at half past ten the 10,000 felt tags secured had practically all been disposed of and a rush order had to be given for 5,000 more card board tags to supply the demand. In some parts of the city the tags were sold from door to door with gratifying results, while the factories yielded abundantly to the visit of the taggers.

Yesterday the schools were visited, and the result was the splendid total of $147.67. The ladies who were in charge of the school collection, and the amounts secured were as follows:

Mrs. Hall, King Edward school, $14.45
Mrs. McDermid, Queen Mary school 16.11
Mrs. Brewer, Central school .. 18.12
Mrs. Spence, Separate school ... 20.56
Miss Archer, South Central school 18.00
Mrs. Boaz, Collegiate 20.00
Mrs. Parsons, King George school 10.26
Mrs. Coulthard, Normal school, 15.73
Convent school 5.95

The canvassers all report that the people were most anxious to assist in the work of the War Veterans and bought the tags readily. The campaign will be kept up until 9 o'clock this evening to give every one a chance to contribute.

The Church Parade.

To-morrow the Great War Veterans will observe the anniversary of Ypres by attending church service at Knox Presbyterian church. All returned officers and men in the city are urged to attend this service, whether members of the War Veterans or not. The parade will fall in at the armouries at 10.30 o'clock and motor cars will be provided for the soldiers who are unable to march. An invitation is extended by Knox church for the friends of the returned men to attend.

DEATH OF A WELL KNOWN PETERBOROUGH MAN

The Late Edwin R. Rogers was Inspector of Public Charities and Prominent as as a Mason

BORN IN PETERBOROUGH

TORONTO, April 21.—Edwin R. Rogers, Inspector of Public Charities, died last night at the residence 102 Wells Hill Avenue. Mr. Rogers had been ill for about one year, and had been confined to his bed during the past six weeks.

The late Mr. Rogers was born in Peterborough 57 years ago and came to Toronto as a young man and was in the employ of several large mercantile establishments here. Some years later he went to Winnipeg, where he engaged in the hardware business with the J. H. Ashdown Company. From Winnipeg he went to Calgary, where he opened a large retail and wholesale hardware business. Some time later he was appointed clerk of the Supreme Court in Calgary, and he held that position for ten years, then resigning and returning east to engage in the hardware business at Toronto Junction. He was for some time president of the Retail Hardware Merchants' Association of Toronto. Seven years ago he was appointed inspector of public charities, and he held that position at the time of his death.

Mr. Rogers was prominent in Masonic circles and was a member of the Anglican Church. He was twice married first to Miss I. M. Clark of Winnipeg, who bore him two children, the late Capt. Alan Rogers, who was killed in action at the Dardanelles, and Miss Bessie Rogers, of Estevan, Sask., and at present in Toronto. In 1895 Mr. Rogers married Miss Emily Pellatt of Toronto, who with her only daughter, Miss Rita Rogers, survives him. Deceased is also survived by two brothers, Richard Birdsall Rogers of Peterborough, and Alfred D. Rogers of Calgary.

The funeral will take place in Peterborough on Tuesday afternoon from St. Luke's Church to Little Lake cemetery.

Will Lay Water Main on Parnell St. For Hydrant

The Utilities Comission last night decided to lay a water main on Parnell street on the condition that the city give the Commission a contract for one hydrant on that street. It was stated that a hydrant would bring the estimated revenue up to the required amount. The city put a sewer on Parnell street last year, and the water main is essential to its service.

THE WEATHER

Yesterday's temperature was up to 71 degrees in the shade; quite high for so early in the season. A thunderstorm last night, with a rainfall of .37 of an inch, brought a hot and sultry day to a close. Rainfall of the previous night, .49 of an inch. This brings the precipitation for April already over three inches.—W. P.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, MARCH 21, 1917

STAND BY OUR OWN.

The Ottawa Journal in commenting upon the praise bestowed upon Canadians for their work at Vimy Ridge, while fully admitting its justification, reminds Canadians that they "must not forget that equally gallant successes are being made by troops from another part of the Empire." This is true, and we glory in its truth; but we in Canada are justified in giving special importance to conspicuously gallant achievements of Canadians—they are our own, and we are looked to to give special recognition. A mother can think her own boy the best without disparaging those of other mothers. It is due to ourselves, to our own self-respect, that we make the most of our own. The boys that we sent to the front, or, rather, that sent themselves to the front, from the shop, the plough-tail, the bench and the desk, have held their own with seasoned soldiers of our own Empire, and of the Allies—not only held their own, but in some ways, in the way of resourcefulness and adaptability, have showed the way to veterans.

In the conjuncture of these war times, we should concentrate a good deal of praise upon our soldiers for the glory and renown brought to Canada by their splendid work. Our statesmen and our leaders, and some elements of our population, have not shown conspicuous accomplishment or a creditable spirit of service, that we can lawfully boast about, or that reflects national credit in the circumstances; therefore, we are compelled to make more of the splendid work of our gallant soldiers.

VICE ROYALTY AND ROADS.

His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire, Governor-General of Canada, speaks plainly and to the point. In formally opening the fourth annual Dominion Good Roads Congress, he said:

"I have not had very much opportunity to see many roads in Canada; but those I have seen have filled me with admiration—not for the roads but for the skill of the driver and the strength of the vehicle."

With greatly amplified experience the Governor could have truthfully adhered to the tone of ducal irony he applied to the roads he has seen—he would have found that as a rule they were a type of the general class of roads we assume to make in Canada. Take the roads of the country generally, they are, to vary the Duke's ironical characterization of Canadian roads, precious possessions—they are gold mines, in that there is sunk in them collectively millions of dollars of money; they are an embodiment of good money and bad results.

In the province of Ontario, especially, we are behind. The Honorary President of the Ontario Good Roads Association, equalled the Duke in frankness. He pointed out that Ontario was a province of the Dominion, first in population, first in agriculture, first in manufacturing, first in wealth, and first in good roads possibilities; but, unfortunately, "not first in good roads practice." "We hope soon, however," he said, "to lead the province of Quebec, instead of being second to her as now."

Quebec leads in roads because the government took a policy that brought about complete accord between the government and the municipalities. Money was borrowed by millions and loaned to municipalities at 2 or 3 per cent. without sinking fund, and a policy applied that brought about general recognition of the fact that good roads were as important as any public work, not excepting railways. By enlisting cooperation and by judicious help, a new popular attitude to good roads in Quebec has been created; wasteful statute labour nearly done away with, and a new spirit has been created that will "no longer suffer trails to be called roads."

To "catch up" with Quebec in the matter of good highways and the development of the good roads spirit, Ontario should begin at once for she has a rather long way to travel, and, of course, the roads are bad. The Ontario Good Roads Department is a good one theoretically, and no doubt capable of effective work. Its most important work is to develop in the people of the country the good roads spirit, a popular sense of the supreme importance of a general system of good roads, government assumption of greater responsibility in respect of roads, liberal provision of money, and to see that it is well spent, and not wasted. The Treasurer of Quebec, Hon. W. C. Mitchell, at the Good Roads Congress, said that the 20 million dollars set aside by Quebec for good roads, is insufficient to meet the demands. We need to spend more money in Ontario and to spend it systematically and wisely — preferably by some generally responsible and central authority associated with the government. Our roads are a gauge of the size and quality of our civilization.

BRITAIN TIGHTENING THE BELT.

Ian Malcom, M. P., in his foreword to a book of reproductions of "Scraps of paper"—German proclamations posted on the walls of Belgian houses, halls and markets—"inhuman documents"—says we would not be inclined to repeat the question, "Would it much matter of we were under German rule" if we understand perfectly the meaning of these threatening and brutal proclamations. And while we live here in Canada, in the midst of plenty—even if prices are high—we would not be inclined to repeat the question, "Are economy and saving, and production necessary?" if we appreciate the food conditions in the Mother Country. We get some faint idea of these conditions when the despatches tell us that Lord Davenport, Food Controller, has issued an order prohibiting the sale of "cakes, muffins, crumpets and tea cakes." This means that the popular diet must be cut down to absolute necessities—that luxuries containing the materials of necessaries, must be eleminated.

We have not come to such a pass in Canada as that; but we don't know what is before us; and if not for our own sakes, we should, for the sake of those suffering in a common cause, practice rigid economy, avoid waste, and, besides, what is more important, produce more. Now we can go out and shop at any time and purchase what food we require ,or at least, desire. But that can't be done in Merrie England or France, or blighted Belgium. We are not compelled by food conditions here to economise, and deny ourselves so far; but is it not the part of real patriotism, not to speak of humanity, that we should economise and deny ourselves for the sake of sending more to our fellow-subjects in the Mother Country, so that they may be fully fed?

To this consideration is to be added the idea of feeding our soldiers in the field and in the factory—those who are fighting by making munitions. We are a thoughtless, wasteful people, if we are to judge by the standards that necessity and food shortage have set up in the Mother Country. In every home there is necessarily some waste. In thousands of homes there is waste unnecessarily, extravagance and wasteful and unnecessarily luxurious provision and profusion of food. If every dollar of saving that could be practiced, even consistent with good decent living, were saved in every home in Canada, we should have in the aggregate in course of the year, millions of dollars of money, or its equivalent in food, to send or sell to the people of the Mother Country, who are so hard pressed that they have to forego even the innocent and cheap "tea cake," and the modest "muffin."

We in Canada, and even right here in Peterborough, don't know what it is to economize or save, that is, as a people, but we shall have to think about it before long if prices of food continue to rise, and if production is not almost infinitely increased. A little voluntary economy and saving practised with willing hearts, will be better than enforced saving and economy—or doing without—that may yet come upon us.

FORMER BOER GENERAL TELLS THE BRITISH SOME PLAIN TRUTHS

Two men who have greatly distinguished themselves in the war are Generals Botha and Smuts, the soldier-statesmen of South Africa. Thanks to the devoted patriotic service of these men, the Germans have been driven from a large part of their African territory, and the British flag raised where formerly the Kaiser's colours waved. Instead of getting the larger "place in the sun" for which the German Emperor sighed, he has lost much of his former possessions. The military operations in that region being largely over, Generals Botha and Smuts are free to give their time to political work. It is in connection with this that General Smuts as a substitute for Premier Botha, has gone to the Imperial Conference in England. Honoured the other day, along with other overseas representatives, with the freedom of the city of Edinburgh, General Smuts made a speech that must have grated on the nerves of some good English folk. After expressing the wish that the union that had taken place in South Africa might be like the Anglo-Scottish rather than like the Anglo-Irish union, General Smuts continued:

"The lord provost has reminded you that I was fighting against the British Empire fifteen years ago. There has been no change in me. The cause for which I then fought is the cause for which I am fighting to-day. (Cheers). I fought for freedom and liberty. I am fighting for that now. You are a large-hearted people, and will forgive me the expression of my view that fifteen or eighteen years ago you were very much in the wrong.—(Laughter.) I am sometimes proud to think that since then we have, according to the old Christian injunction, heaped coals of fire on your heads. You came back to wiser counsels in handing us back the liberty which we had thought would be jeopardised under the British flag. You made us free and in so doing laid the foundation of a large state. —(Cheers). As a result of the policy you adopted after the Boer war, a small nation that fought against you not many years ago, and with a vigour and persistency seldom seen in the history of the world, is to-day fighting in a common cause with you.—(Renewed cheers.) That result has been brought about by your reversion to the old idea of liberty which has been the guiding principle of British history; and I am sure that when you see the great changes that are to follow the categlysm you will find that spirit is the only sure foundation on which to build in the future."

General Smuts' insistence that the Boers were right in the South African war will be regarded as courageous, if not altogether acceptable to British public opinion. The average Englishman is hardly prepared to admit that the nation was wrong in the South African war. Perhaps the present Prime Minister of Great Britain, however, was able to smile when he read the General's speech, for Mr. Lloyd George was one of those who strongly disapproved of Britain's action in the conflict with the Boers, and his attitude towards that war brought him much unpopularity. The contrast between his reception by British audiences of that time and his reception to-day is one of the most striking illustrations of the mutability of public opinion.—Journal of Commerce.

Mayor Duffus, Aldermen McIntyre and Weir, and City Solicitor Gordon left this afternoon for Chicago, where they will meet the officers of the Quaker Oats Company on Monday morning, in regard to details of the agreement between the city and company. There are one or two other items of interest to the city that will be considered on the way home.

That Tickling In The Throat

Can Be Quickly Cured by

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

This trouble is most distressing and is caused by a cold settling in the throat. The hard dry cough causes that nasty, tickling, irritating sensation and keeps you from enjoying your night's rest. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs and barks combined with the lung healing virtues of the world-famous Norway pine tree, will give almost instant relief in all cases of this nature.

Mrs. Alex. Durward, Athelstan, Que., writes: "I have used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for a number of years, and find it the only thing that will help me when I have a severe cold. It helps the soreness, and stops the tickling sensation in my throat, which is so irritating. I always use it for both myself and the children, and would not be without it in the house."

The thousands of testimonials we have received during the past twenty five years prove that Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is an excellent remedy for all coughs and colds, so see that you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it.

It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c. and 50c. at all dealers.

No One At Home To Play The Piano

The Young Folks Have Left The Old Home and The Piano is Silent

There is no reason why your home should be without music. There are hundreds of good pianos in Peterborough that are not being used, principally because the members of the family who used to do the playing have either left the old home or become married. As a result, the family piano has remained silent, and is now regarded "more for ornament than use."

Mr. H. B. Britton, the local manager of Heintzman & Co.'s Peterborough branch store, George street, desires to announce that he is prepared to take the old pianoforte in exchange for a new piano player. There are at present in stock two new piano players, 68 note, that can be purchased at greatly reduced prices, prior to removing to the handsome new piano warerooms now being fitted up in the Royal Bank Buildings, Hunter street. Your old piano will be taken in exchange.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural colour and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

He Is Well Armed Who Has True Courage!

Courage is a quality of mind and soul which guides in action, promotes ability and increases efficiency.

To have the courage of your convictions is heralded as a great virtue, but to have a conviction that is worth working for, and if need be, fighting for, is an even greater essential.

"Courage consists, not in blindly overlooking danger, but in seeing and conquering it. The truest courage is always mixed with circumspection; this being the quality that distinguishes the courage of the wise from the hardiness of the rash and foolish."

The one thing that will save the world is the Christ spirit put into practice—doing what you believe and believing only in the Dominion of Good—exemplifying Good in every act.

There logically devolves upon the Christian Churches the duty and the privileges of entering, ever more fully, this understanding of Christ in the World.

Perhaps all the Christ spirit is not found in the churches, but the spirit of the church reflects the spirit of doing good to all, and of promoting a higher quality of Christian character.

This is an immensely practical question; this matter of doing good work for the good of those about us here and now.

There was a time, perhaps, when church affiliation may have been ridiculed, sometimes discouraging the unwise and the unthinking.

But now the church has taken a great hold upon the big policy of doing good to all, helping lift the load others have to carry, of strengthening and promoting the spirit of love and good will.

The man who has gotten the spirit of real Christianity does not seek in vain for opportunity to do good; it is ever at his door and always he will be found working for it.

The church is the natural "hub" of good work, since it is the organization of people seeking to save that which is more precious than time, or money, or real estate—The Souls of Men.

The question of church affiliation, therefore, becomes one of the prime needs of every human being.

It is a privilege to "fight the good fight;" to take hold with vim and courage; to know our ground, then do the best we can!

Every city has its special needs; this city has many needs and the churches are striving to see those needs and fill them.

If you have an uplifting thought, or helpful idea, take it into one of the churches and let them help you work it out.

You are the one who can help in courageous effort! Will you?

"And follow after Righteousness, Godliness, Faith, Love, Patience, Meekness. Fight the Good Fight of Faith, Lay Hold on Eternal Life"

Presentation to Retiring Springville Organist

On Thursday night at Springville, the departing organist of the Presbyterian church, Miss Helen White was handsomely remembered on the occasion of her retirement, due to her having entered the matrimonial state and becoming Mrs. Ira Robson.

At the close of the "Endeavour" meeting, Mr. John McIntosh was called to the chair. After a short musical programme, presented by Miss Baird, Miss and Mrs. Graw, Mr. Clarence Laing and others, the chairman called upon Mr. J. H. Sanderson to read the following address:

To (Mrs. Ira Robson:

Dear Friend,—On this the happy occasion of your marriage, we the Springville congregaton beg leave to acknowledge our appreciaton of your work as organist in our church during the past three and one half years.

We recognize the fact that you have very often greatly inconvenienced yourself to attend to these duties, and the cheerful manner you have always displayed, has endeared you to the hearts of the Springville people.

Many times you must have felt discouraged when you had difficulties to surmount, as all organists are sure to have.

Your regularity and efficiency in the discharge of your duties have been very notice able, and your work as organist has been a great benefit to the Springville congregation.

We would ask you to accept this cabinet of silver, not as a reward for what you have done, but as a slight tangible token of our appreciation of your services.

The congregation join in wishing you and your estimable husband many, many years of prosperity and happiness. (Signed.)

John McIntosh.
A. E. Sanderson.
W. E. Ball.

The presentation of the beautiful cabinet of silver was made on behalf of the congregation by Mr. E. Ball.

The sentiments of the address were confirmed in short remarks by members of the congregation who had had pleasant experience and have pleasant recollections of the fidelity and excellence of Miss White's work.

Mrs. Robson replied in a very graceful and grateful manner to the address, and Mr. Robson also expressed his appreciation.

Refreshments and social intercourse brought a delightful evening to a close.

EAT LESS MEAT AND TAKE SALTS IF KIDNEYS ACHE OR BACK HURTS

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their effort to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Sunday Services George Street Methodist Church

The services on Sunday at George street Methodist church will be of a very interesting character.

At the morning services, the 2nd anniversary of Ypres will be referred to, in the light of the present duty of the Christian people of this land.

The very interesting theme, of the "Influence, Dignity and Responsibility of Young Womanhood will be discussed at the evening service. Appropriate music will be rendered.

MAY ROBSON

Coming Next Saturday—New Play, New Production

The best-liked of the eccentric comediennes of our stage, May Robson, comes to "The Grand" next Saturday, April 28th, for two performances in a noteworthy production of her greatest success, "The Making Over of Mrs. Matt," a play by James Forbes, that places her in the front rank of American comediennes. The presence of Miss Robson in any play carries with it the assurance of a laughing treat, but in the case of "Mrs. Matt" there is no question but that the promise will be positively fulfilled. It is one of those impersonations that sets one laughing as heartily, when once the innumerable ludicrously farcical incidents and uproariously funny lines begin to roll off. In a word, "Mrs. Matt" is all right, and if you want to laugh until you cast dignity to the winds, go and see May Robson. Miss Robson has gathered together a cast whose names mean much in the presentation of comedy, while the production is new and elaborate in every detail.

Benefit for the Band

No. 2 Corps Salvation Army To Be Opened

The opening of No. 2 Corps of the Peterborough Salvation Army will take place Saturday, Sunday and Monday, April 28, 29, and 30.

Development in the Salvation Army work has so extended in Peterborough that this move has been made necessary, and Headquarters have decided that Captain Hargraves, daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. Hargraves of Toronto, and Lieutenant Lent will be the commanding officers. There is already a splendid Sunday School at Byerswille, with Scouts and Guides attached and a number of senior soldiers ready to transfer from the Simcoe Street roll to assist the incoming officers, which will give them a good start.

Quarters will have to be provided for the officers and furnished, but Adjt. and Mrs. McElhiney and Mr. R. C. Braund, who is Superintendent of all the young people's work of the district surrounding Peterborough, are confident that the good friends of the Army will assist in every way possible to make the girls, who have left good homes, comfortable in Peterborough. The new officers will arrive early next week and a good reception will be tendered them.

Adjutant Burton of Montreal will conduct the opening ceremonies.

Open-air service to-morrow morning, will be held at the corner of Rubidge and Sherbrooke streets, for the benefit of some sick folk who live in that district.

"I Owe My Life To Gin Pills"

Every one who has trouble from kidney and bladder trouble should read this letter from a gentleman in New Mexico:

"I was once a terrible sufferer with Kidney and Bladder troubles and it often got so bad that I would take the use of my legs. I could not go away from home without remedies with me. My son advised me to take Gin Pills and after taking the first two or three doses I felt relief. I continued to take them until I was entirely well. I owe my life to Gin Pills."

Yours very truly,

Good Results to Federal Policy Holders

The Transfer to Sun was evidently a good deal for them

The Sun Life annual report just to hand contains the following par:—

"It is most gratifying to report that the agreement under which this company reassured the Federal Life Assurance Company of Canada in 1915 has worked out so satisfactorily that we are already enabled to raise the apportionment of future profits to holders of participating policies in that Company to the scale used for holders of corresponding Sun Life policies. The advantages which have accrued to Federal Life policy holders from the reassurance of that Company have thus been marked and substantial."

This emphasizes what we have often said, that the Sun Life is so fortunately situated financially that astonishing results to policy holders are to be expected.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

WASHINGTON, April 21.—Predicting serious "draft riots" if conscription goes into effect, a score of anti-conscriptionists appeared before the Senate Military Affairs Committee to-day. Joseph Cannon, Labour leader and organizer, said "there will be strikes, prices will be raised from war exploitation and blood is going to flow in the streets. We are going into the war to establish democracy in Germany, and in doing so we are establishing autocracy in the United States." Grant Hamilton, representing the A.F. of L., declared that American labour stands solidly against conscription, and read a statement of Samuel Gompers against the draft.

BUENOS AIRES, April 21.—Argentine has made a formal demand on Germany for a satisfactory reply for the sinking of the Argentine steamer Monte Protegido by a German U-boat. If Germany's reply is unsatisfactory, President Irigoyen will not only break relations, but immediately declare war, say the press.

LISBON, April 21.—The Portuguese Cabinet has resigned, it was announced to-day, because the Chamber rejected its decree instituting a Nationals Economic Council.

RIO DE JANEIRO, April 21.—Brazil formally announced to-day she will co-operate with the United States in sending munitions and supplies to the Allies.

St. George's Day

To-morrow evening, being the eve of St. George's Day, the service at St. George's Church, Brakwood Ave., will be of a national character. The sermon will be preached by Canon Cornish, and the lessons read by Mr. W. F. Johnston and Mr. Scadding.

A similar service will be held at St. John's Church on Monday, being St. George's Day, at 8 p.m. The sermon will be preached by Ven. Archdeacon Cody, of Toronto, one of the ablest and most eloquent preachers in Canada. The lessons will be read by Col. Mills and Col. Walker.

All the patriotic societies of the city are most cordially invited to attend this great national service. It is announced that a similar service will be held at St. Paul's Church, Toronto (Archdeacon Cody's church) to-morrow afternoon. The Mayor and city officials will officially attend the service.

And in Ottawa, the Boys' Brigade will march to the special national church service [illegible] Peterborough will be in good company as far as St. George's Day services go. The red roses that were offered for sale in the street on former St. George's Festival, were not offered for sale to-day, so as not to interfere with the "Soldiers' Tag Day. They will be offered for sale in the streets on Monday next, instead of to-day.

Considering the present state of the world from the war point of view, it would be very inspiring to see all the city people decorated with the red rose next Monday, "Red" being the Empire's colour.

An Eastern Love Story

Such was the subject spoken upon in Gospel Hall last evening by Evangelist Harold M. Harper. Taking his text from Genesis, chap. 24, the speaker used the story of Isaac and Rebecca as a basis for showing the way that God was seeking to win and woo lost sinners that they might become part of the church —the bride of Jesus Christ our Lord.

On Sunday evening at 7 p.m., in the above hall, cor. George and Brock streets, Mr. Harper will begin a series of three (3) addresses on the second coming of Christ, a subject of vital interest to every thinking man and woman these days. The special subject for Sunday evening is, 'The Coming of Christ—is it Imminent?'

There will be a good bright service in song preceding the address. The people of Peterborough are cordially invited to attend.

A MESSAGE FROM THE PAST

Ald. Weir Unearthed an Interesting Epistle at Last Night's Meeting of the Board of Works

While browsing over the archives at a meeting of the Board of Works Committee, held last evening, Ald. Weir, Chairman of the Committee, unearthed the appended communication, received some time ago from Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, Chief Officer of Health for Ontario. The letter is self explanatory:

February 22, 1917.

Sir,—I have the honour to call the attention of the Council of the Corporation of the city of Peterborough to the matter of the disposal of the sewerage of the city.

This question has been the subject of controversy between the city and the township adjacent to the River Otonabee, into which the raw sewer- the townships adjacent to the River

As far back as 1911 the city received notification from the Board to cease this illegal practice, and since that time various steps have been taken with this end in view. The Board has tried in every legal way to meet the wishes of the Council, and assist in a solution of the difficulty; the Board's latest action in this direction being to give formal approval on September 6th, last, of the Council's application in reference to certain lands to be used for sewerage purposes in the township of Monaghan.

I am informed that since that time nothing further has been done; the land has not been secured and no plans have been prepared for the proposed plant. The townships, very properly, I think, are again beginning to push the matter and I am of the opinion that unless the Council will at once show some activity on their part, they are likely to meet litigation at an early date.

I should be obliged if you will have this taken up by the Council forthwith and advise me what they intend to do in the matter.

J. W. S. McCULLOUGH,
Chief Officer of Health for Ontario.

CYCLE RUN WAS A HUGE SUCCESS

Sixty-Five Riders Started From Banks' Garage for the Initial Run of The Season— More to Follow

Last night's 'cycle run, which started from Banks' garage, was attended by sixty-five riders. This was the first evening run of the season, and it is to be hoped that weekly runs will be held throughout the riding season. To gather sixty-five riders in a few hours' notice proves that the popular sport of 'cycling has come back. The run last night was over a course of six miles. A stop was made at Monaghan Road, where Mr. Ford St. Onge, who led the run, gave the boys a talk on the benefits derived from 'cycling. All the boys were pleased and tendered Mr. St. Onge a vote of thanks for the enthusiasm he created among them. Peterborough 'cyclists are very fortunate to have the assistance of such a noted 'cyclist. Mr. St. Onge has been a 'cyclist for 29 years, and has travelled all over the world, appearing for nineteen years in the leading vaudeville houses. St. Onge has a mark of 1 minute and 51 seconds for a mile, and at present holds the record for backward riding, having ridden a 'cycle, man and bicycle backwards, one-half mile in 1 minute and 37 seconds. St. Onge also has the distinction of teaching the most wonderful woman in the world (Miss Helen Keller, the deaf, dumb and blind marvel) to ride a bicycle.

St. Onge predicts that over 70,000 bicycles will be sold in the Dominion this year.

Mr. St. Onge is returning to the city for the Motor Show and will have charge of the Banks' Bicycle Exhibit.

A NEW DRUG WORTH $1,000,000

Will Pick Up a Run-down, Weak, Nervous System in 5 to 10 Days

This new drug is a combination of iron and phosphorus discovered by a Toronto chemist, who is making a fortune out of it. Doctors, hospitals and the public are using it with wonderful success. The iron combines with the phosphorus, forming a new drug called Ionized Phosphorus with iron. Doctor Hutyrias says that just as soon as Ionized Phosphorus with iron is taken the iron is almost immediately taken up by the blood, while the phosphorus is absorbed by the nerves. He also says he can take a person who is all run-down, tired, nervous, weak, and build their system up to normal strength in 5 to 10 days, by giving one to three of these tablets after meals and at bedtime. It has of late been discovered that 95 per cent. of all ailments susceptible to the human race can be traced to impurities in the blood and weak, broken-down nerves. To not be taking all sorts of laxatives and poisonous tonics, which only ruin your system, go to the root of all this trouble and strengthen your blood, restore your nerves and your digestion by taking this new drug, Ionized Phosphorus with iron in Gyrozone, 60 cent druggists in each city. F. C. Webber is the agent for Peterborough.

Benefit For The Band That Benefits Us

One of the best amateur events ever put on in Peterborough is "H.M.S. Pinafore," or the Lass that Loved a Sailor, booked for presentation in the Grand Opera House, May 15th and 16th, for the benefit of the funds of the 57th Band. The beautiful music has been under rehearsal by the Conservatory Orchestra and a splendid chorus, under the direction of Bandmaster Gliddon. A strong and capable cast, comprising the best vocalists in the city, an adequate ballet, with picturesque dances. Historic Coach and Stage Director Stanley Adams, Toronto, and scenery from Royal Alexandra, combine to insure a splendid production. See window cards for further particulars.

COLLECTION WAS VERY SUCCESSFUL

The Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham wish to thank those who so generously contributed papers, etc., towards the collection made by the League last Thursday. This was largely due to the co-operation of contributors who so thoughtfully had their parcels ready and tied in bundles for the collectors. The collection was the most successful of any yet made.

The contributions of papers in all parts of the city was the most gratifying and showed an appreciation of the needs of the Red Cross work. It also shows that the people of the city are realizing more than ever before the necessity for conservation.

The ladies of the League also wish to thank those who so kindly put their cars and motor trucks at the disposal of the League and those who volunteered their services in packing the car.

Amazing Power of Bon-Opto To Make Weak Eyes Strong

Doctor Says It Strengthens Eyesight 50 per cent in One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses and those who wear glasses, will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable prescription and many who once wore glasses say they have thrown them away. One man says, after using it: "I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses, and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eye strain caused by overworked, tired eyes, which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years, both for distance and work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now and have discarded my long distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of this prescription at home. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start, and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or wind glasses. I can highly recommend it in case of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision or for eyes inflamed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto, referred to above, is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is sold in this city by Warne Drug Co. and Other Druggists.

Board of Works Consider Street Cleaning Proposal By Dustless Sweeper Co.

Company Agree to do The Work at Forty Dollars a Day Which is Considerably in Excess of the Appropriation—Matter Will Come up For Further Consideration—Repairs to Olive Avenue—New Car For The Street Commissioner

TENDERS FOR CEMENT

A proposal to abolish the "white wings" in favour of the vacuum street cleaning machine supplied by the Dominion Dustless Sweeper Company of this city, was considered last evening at a meeting of the Board of Works committee of the City Council. A deputation consisting of Mr. W. Buller, Mr. P. Laing, Mr. W. H. Hamilton and Mr. Blaney waited upon the committee with a proposal to take the contract of cleaning the paved streets of the city for the season at a cost of forty dollars a day. The appropriation for this work is in the neighbourhood of four thousand dollars, including the street watering on the paved sections. Forty dollars a day for the entire season amounts to over seven thousand dollars. The committee agreed to pay four thousand dollars for the work, but this the deputation refused, claiming that it would pay better to keep the men on new construction in the factory rather than spend their time in operating a sweeper on the streets. It was finally agreed to allow the matter to stand over and an effort will be made to reach a decision by the first of May.

Olive Avenue.

The City Engineer's output respecting Olive avenue discouraged any action by the city. City Engineer Parsons reported that no street existed legally. He characterised it as a "lane dead-ending between Rink and Perry streets."

Ald. Duncan and Ald. McIntyre were of the opinion that Olive avenue should be taken over and opened out to Rink street and improved. There are seven houses on the street.

The matter was left with the City Engineer and the City Solicitor to bring in a definite report concerning the advisability of eliminating the dead-end and making a permanent thoroughfare of the property.

Will Purchase a Car.

The Board decided to again assume responsibility for the maintenance of the City Engineer's car.

Ald. Duncan was of the opinion that the Board should purchase a car for the use of Street Commissioner Evans.

Ald Weir was afraid that with a car the Street Commissioner would not see very much as he would be too occupied with the control of the car.

Street Commissioner Evans said he could visit a place several times a day, whereas now he can only make one visit. It would also be an economical way of moving men. At present it costs the city upwards of $250 a year for general cartage work in the Street Commissioner's department.

"You would save more than the price of the car in time," said City Engineer Parsons. It was moved by Ald. Smith and Ald. Taylor, that a car be purchased.

Ald. Stratton suggested that the Board procure an extra box for the car so that the Commissioner could ride to church on Sunday.

Permission Granted.

Permission was granted to the Dominion Dustless Sweeper Company to erect an iron garage either at the corner of Brock and Water streets or on the west side of Aylmer street, between Hunter and Simcoe streets. The work is to be done under the supervision of the City Engineer.

Will Make Repairs.

Mr. W. L. Jeffreys, 172 Wescott street, complained of the condition of the roadway in front of his house. It was left to the City Engineer to have the matter remedied so as to facilitate the passage of a car.

Horses Killed.

Mr. R. H. Parsons reported that on Good Friday last a horse belonging to D. McMillan, snow plough contractor, was killed by an electric current while working on the south side of Weller street, near the Monaghan road. The matter was referred to the Utilities Commisson.

Sewer Foreman.

Martin Neary made application for the position of foreman on sewer construction. It was moved that the matter be left in the hands of Ald. Weir, chairman of the committee.

Ald. Smith moved in amendment, that the committee advertise for a foreman. This as seconded by Ald. Duncan. The original motion carried.

Cement Tenders.

Tenders for the season's supply of cement were as follows:

Peterborough Hardware Company, two dollars per barrel, storage included.

H. B. Taylor and Sons, two dollars a barrel. No storage.

R. Hicks and Co., one dollar and ninety-eights a barrel. No storage.

The contract was awarded to the Peterborough Hardware Company, which included storage in their tender.

"No Funds."

The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario in a letter to the committee, declined to make any contribution towards the construction of the overhead bridge on Hunter street, claiming that they had no funds to cover such work, and no means of charging it to any work.

The matter was referred to the Railway committee.

The Foot Bridge.

The City Engineer was instructed to write the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and inquire into the cause of the delay concerning the construction of the foot bridge over the Otonabee river.

The sale of an old road grader was left with the chairman to dispose of. An offer for forty cents was made, but Ald Smith said the city should get at least one cent a pound for the metal.

Road Repairs.

The matter of improving the route over which the Governor-General will travel on the occasion of his official visit to Peterborough on May 25th, was left in the hands of the chairman and City Engineer Parsons with power to act.

The road in front of the court house will be treated to a coat of road oil.

Trees Removed.

"At his own risk and expense," are the terms upon which Mr. M. T. Butcher will be allowed to remove a number of trees at the corner of Stewart and Smith streets.

The following sewer extensions were recommended by the committee: Romaine, from Aylmer to Park; on Princess, from Park to George; on Prince, from Park to George; and on George from Prince to Princess streets.

MAJOR "DICK" JONES KILLED IN ACTION

Well Known Officer of 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons Meets Death in Fraue

News was received from Bowmanville this afternoon that Major R. W. F. Jones, of that town, is officially reported killed in action in France. Major Jones, who was a member of the 3rd Prince of Wales' Dragoons and widely known in Peterborough, went overseas as transport officer of the 2nd Canadian Battalion. He was invalided home after the battle of Ypres, but on recovering his health, was appointed to the 19th (Pals) Battalion, with which he returned overseas. The news of his death will be a shock to many friends in Peterborough.

Large Market To-day Maple Syrup Plentiful

The market was very large this morning and a great deal of maple syrup came in, which sold at $1.75 a gallon, some at $2.00. The farmers have evidently become fed up on bringing in potatoes and finding no buyers at the high prices as very few came in to-day, these selling at 65c per peck. The inside market prices were slightly lower.

Butter—41c to 44c per pound.
Eggs—32c to 35c per dozen.
Duck Eggs—50c per dozen.
Chickens—75c to $1.25 each.
Turkeys—35c per pound, $3.75 each

Stop! Look! Listen!

The exceptional cast, the catchy tunes, of Irving Berlin, the famous New York beauty chorus, and the magnificent Dillingham production, all combine to make that new syncopated musical comedy, "Stop! Look! Listen!" which is the treat promised to Peterborough theatre-goers for one night at "The Grand" next Thursday, April 26. The hit of the season, "Stop! Look! Listen!" is a clean, quick-moving entertainment, admirably staged and mounted, it is good fun, good tunes and, above all, good dancing. There is already a big demand for seats and indications are there will be a record-breaking audience present to witness this latest of New York successes.

MUDDY, PIMPLY SKIN?

Many people with disfigured complexions never seem to think that they need an occasional cleansing inside as well as outside. Yet constant of this internal cleanliness shows itself in spotty and rubber complexions, as well as in dreadful headaches and biliousness. It's because the liver becomes clogged, and waste matter soon contains which Nature cannot remove without assistance. The best remedy is Chamberlain's Tablets, which stimulate the liver, gently cleanse the stomach and bowels and tone the whole digestive system. Sure, safe and reliable. Take one at night and your face will be bright and sunny in the morning. Your whole body becomes refreshed after a few doses. Your complexion depends on right and your blood pure. Get Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets to-day—all druggists sell them, or by mail from Chamberlain Medicine Company, Toronto.

HEALTHY COMPLEXION

An Army of Internal Bathers

Over half a million bright, keen, up-to-date Canadians and Americans have found that Internal Bathing is more essential to their well-being than External Baths.

Have found that, taken occasionally at night, they feel like different people the next morning. No more of that billious, tired, nervous condition—but, having by Nature's own cleanser, antiseptic warm water, removed all the poisonous waste from the Lower Intestine, they awake thoroughly refreshed by normal sleep, with all their functions acting in healthy accord, bright, happy, clear-headed and confident, eager and capable for the duties of the day.

WOMEN'S AILMENTS

Come From Heart and Nerves

Young girls budding into womanhood, who suffer from pains and headaches, and whose face is pale and blood watery, will find Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills build them up.

Women, between the ages of 40 and 50, who are nervous, subject to hot flushes, feeling of pins and needles, smothering feeling, shortness of the breath, palpitation of the heart, etc., are tided over this trying time of their lives by the use of this remedy.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have a wonderful effect on a woman's system, making pains and aches vanish, bringing color to the pale cheek, and sparkle to the eye.

The old, worn out, tired out, languid feelings give place to strength and vitality, and life again seems like living.

Mrs. Alfred Winter, Castor, Alta., writes: "I should like every woman who is suffering from nerves or heart trouble to know how much Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have helped me. For two years I kept a hired girl and was doctoring all the time. After having taken four boxes of your pills I am able to do all my own work. I would especially recommend them to women between 40 and 50, as at that time they are more liable to be far from well. One of my neighbors knows how they helped me, and she is now using them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c., or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FLOUR NOW $8.25.

Grocers are quoting flour to-day at $8.25 an increase of $1.25 during the past week. Those who postponed purchasing supplies when the price was $6.00 only a few days ago, it seems no more, are lamenting their indecision.

THE PRODUCTION OF "PINAFORE"

A Splendid Chorus Composed of the Best Vocalists in the City

"Pinafore" will be produced in the Grand Opera House on May 15th and 16th for the benefit of the 57th Band. The play has been under rehearsal for some time by the Conservatory of Music Orchestra. A splendid chorus has been organized under the leadership of Conductor Gliddon and composed of the best vocalists in the city. The stage directors will be assisted by Mr. Stanley Adams of Toronto, and a quantity of scenery has been secured from the Royal Alexander Theatre, Toronto, all of which should ensure a splendid production. See window cards for further information.

FELL IN A FAINT.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall on the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your valuable cured me when doctors had failed."

talion left here was transport sergeant. He qualified for a lieutenant's commission at Barriefield Camp, and accompanied the 93rd overseas as a subaltern. He was afterwards transferred to the 18th Battalion at the front. Lieut. Watt, who was formerly employed in the G.T.R. offices here, had been living for some years in Midland.

Lieut. B. N. Sexton.

In the list of wounded in to-day's casualty lists appears the name of another 93rd officer, Lieut. B. N. Sexton. Lieut. Sexton, whose home is in Windsor, N.S., was appointed to the 93rd Battalion early in 1916, and will be remembered by local fans as one of the stars of the 93rd Battalion hockey team. He is the first member of the 93rd Intermediate O.H.A. team to appear in the casualty lists. Lieut. Sexton went overseas as platoon commander of No. 1 Platoon, A Company, 93rd, and was transferred to another Canadian battalion.

Corp. Hubert O'Keefe.

Mr. Jas. O'Keefe, 79 Lansdowne St., received an official message from Ottawa this morning, stating that his son, Corp. Hubert O'Keefe, is officially reported admitted to No. 3 General Hospital, Bolougne, on April 12th, suffering from a bayonet wound in the buttocks. Corp. O'Keefe, who was born in Peterborough, was among the first to join the 93rd Battalion, and became a member of the Machine Gun Section. After the 93rd reached England, he was transferred in a draft to the 21st Battalion.

Pte. Robert Hendry.

Mr. Thos. Hendry received an official message this morning that his brother, Pte. Robert Hendry, was admitted to No. 1 General Hospital, Etaples on April 11, slightly wounded in the arm and face. Pte. Hendry, who before he enlisted was employed as a shipper with J. J. Turner and Sons, joined the 93rd Highlanders in Toronto, and on going overseas was transferred to the 95th Battalion. He is well known throughout the city as a comic singer and was a favourite at many concerts.

Pte. Geo. Melton.

Pte. Geo. Melton, who enlisted here and went overseas as a sergeant with the 93rd Battalion, and has been in France all winter with another Canadian battalion, has been admitted to hospital in England, suffering from trench fever, according to a private cable received from his aunt. Pte. Melton's parents reside at 534 Park street. The message states that Pte. Melton is doing well.

Pte. Victor Bullied.

Mrs. Silas Bullied, 231 Princess street, has received a telegram from Ottawa that her son, Pte. Victor Bullied, 113116, 4th C.M.R., was officially reported admitted to No. 2 Stationary Hospital, Boulogne, on April 11th, 1917, wounded in back and arm. This is twice Pte. Bullied has been wounded in twelve months. His many friends wish him a speedy recovery. Pte. Bullied enlisted here with the 8th C. M. R. His father, Pte. Silas Bullied, is with the Forestry Battalion, and his brother, Pte. Percy Bullied, went overseas with the 59th.

Pte. Russel Devall.

Word was received yesterday that Private Russell Devall had died of wounds in France. He enlisted in Toronto in the 134th Highlanders and left for overseas last July. He was born in Peterborough and lived here before going to Toronto. He leaves a wife and three children in Toronto, and one brother, Wesley Devall, of Ashburnham. He was a nephew of Mrs. Geo. Chambers, Simcoe street, city.

Writing to his sister, Mrs. W. H. Bolton, 675 Bethune street, city, Driver Percy Hamlin says:

Somewhere in France.
March 18, 1917

Dear Sister:—

How are you anyway? I sincerely hope this finds you and Will in the best of health, as it leaves Walter, Ernest and myself. First of all Maude please excuse me for not writing before than I have, but honestly we have been right in the midst of it lately, and haven't had the time. I guess I don't need to tell you how it is, for you will understand how difficult it is to write letters over here.

Before I go any further, Walter has just called me to come out and see the prisoners, about fifty in number and they were a tough looking bunch, whiskers about a foot long, and their clothes all torn, and looked as though they hadn't had a wash for a month, but they looked at us and smiled as much as to say we are glad to get away from your gun-fire. But that was nothing compared to the condition of them on the Somme last Fall. One could scarcely tell whether they were human beings or some kind of walking animals. That certainly was one awful place.

Well Maude, I suppose you remember a year ago yesterday?

We pulled out of old Halifax harbour and left the land of, dear old Canada. But we hope before another 24th of May rolls around to be back with our loved ones at home.

We have a lot of hard work to go up against this summer, But if God spares us, I think we are good for it, for we are feeling fine.

Well dear Sister give my best to Will and don't forget yourself. Will write again first opportunity.

Your loving Brother.

PERCY

Driver Percy Hamlin is one of three brothers with the First Section, 3rd D.A.C. France. They enlisted together and have been together in active service in France for nearly 9 months.

The graduating list for the degree of M.D.C.M. of Queen's University contains the name of Dr. J. Russel Patterson, 675 Water street. His many friends will be pleased to hear of his continued success in the field of medicine.

Dr. Patterson leaves on Monday morning for service overseas with the Army Medical Corps. His brother, Quartermaster Sergeant C. H. Patterson, who went overseas in September last has been ill in hospital since February and has been removed from France to a convalescent hospital in England.

Bandmaster Walter Hughes, of the 93rd Battalion Band, has been transferred from the 235th Battalion to the Canadian Army Medical Corps, and has been promoted to the rank of Sergeant - Major. Sergt. - Major Hughes is home for a few days on leave, and is anxious to secure a number of Peterborough recruits for the Medical Corps. Bright, young men, who are anxious to do their bit, will find an opportunity to do a great work in this unit. Sergt.-Major Hughes will be glad to give all the necessary particulars.

REPLENISH YOUR BLOOD IN THE SPRING

Just now you are feeling "out of sorts"—not your usual self. Quite exhausted at times and cannot devote real energy to your work. Sleep does not rest you and you wake up feeling "all tired out." Perhaps rheumatism is flying through your muscles and joints, or may be your skin is disfigured by rashes, boils or pimples. Headaches, twinges of neuralgia, fits of nervousness, irritability of temper and a disordered stomach often increase your discomfort in the spring.

The cause—winter has left its mark on you. These troubles are signs that your blood is poor and watery, that your nerves are exhausted. You must renew and enrich your blood at once, and restore tone to your tired nerves, or there may be a complete breakdown. The most powerful remedy for these spring ailments in men, women and children is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, because these Pills cleanse bad blood and strengthen weak nerves.

New, rich, red blood—your greatest need in spring—is plentifully created by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and with this new, pure blood in your veins you quickly regain health and increase your strength. Then your skin becomes clear, your eyes bright, your nerves strong, and you feel better, eat better, sleep better, and are able to do your work.

Begin your spring tonic treatment to-day for the blood and nerves with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—the Pills that strengthen.

These Pills are sold by most dealers, but do not be persuaded to take "something just the same." If you can't get the genuine Pills from your dealer they will be sent you by mail, post paid, at 60 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

You Can Always Sell A "Used" Ford

In the first place, a Ford touring car costs only $495—F.O.B. Ford, Ont. In the second place, there is always a demand for used Ford Cars at good Prices.

The average resale price of a Ford Car, after one season's use, is only $125 less than the price of a new car. Try to sell another make of a used car that cost $1,000 or less, and you will be lucky to find a buyer for it at $250 to $400 less.

A Ford certainly gives an owner $125 worth of service per year. No one will question that. So if you sell your Ford at the end of a year, you get your money out of it.

The Ford car is the one safe motor car investment on the market. It gives you the greatest value for your money.

FARMERS CAN HANDLE SEEDING BUT NEED HELP IN HARVEST

Hesitate to Sow all They Can Because of Fear That Help Will Not be Available When Crops Ripen

MR. GILLESPIE COMMITS CITY TO LEND EVERY AID

Farmers who attended a meeting at the Council chamber this afternoon stated that the major phase of the production problem as it concerned them was not the plowing and seeding, but the harvesting of the crop.

"We can get the seed in or most of it," said one man, "but what is worrying us is how we could get in the harvest. That is where the city people could really help. The most of the plowing was done last fall, and although we are short of help we can put in the crops by working a little longer than usual. But we must have help when grain is ripe or our efforts won't amount to much."

Mr. G. A. Gillespie strongly urged the farmer to put in as much seed as they could, and promised that the citizens would do their part even to the extreme measures of closing stores and shops during harvest time. It was stated that one man could plant as much as two or three could reap.

Warden Brown, of Asphodel, Reeve W. A. Anderson, of Otonabee, ex-Warden Scott, of Smith and other representative farmers to the number of a dozen or more attended the meeting.

Mr. G. L. Galley stated that he could provide a number of boys next week if the farmers wanted them.

Warden Brown referring to the help situation said that within four miles of his home there was only one hired man and he had tried to enlist three times.

Mr. John McIntosh, of Monaghan, stated that in his neighborhood in Monaghan there was only one hired man. And apparently this condition was general throughout the county and perhaps the province. Everything looked promising it was reported, but the real test will come when the crops of hay and grain and vegetables ripen.

DON'T FORGET THE MOTOR LUNCHEON MONDAY EVENING

The members of the Automobile Association are holding a dinner at the Oriental Hotel on Monday evening. This dinner has already been announced through the press, but the officers of the Association are anxious to keep the matter before the local members that not a single member shall be absent on Monday night. The hour is 6.45 p.m. and the price 50 cents per plate.

The coming season promises to be the most active yet in motor circles.

A great automobile parade is to be held on Thursday night to open the Automobile Show in the interest of the Red Cross. The members of the Auto Association will be formed into a committee of 125 to boom this parade, and interest will be stimulated by this meeting. While not forgetting that we have a war to win, this little diversion will inaugurate us for renewed patriotic efforts.

Ex-president Howland of the Ontario Motor League is expected to be present.

Every member must be at this dinner or send a doctor's certificate of disability.

EIGHT NORWEGIANS LOST ON STEAMER 'BERGENMUT'

FRECKLES

DON'T HIDE THEM WITH A VEIL —REMOVE THEM WITH THE OTHINE PRESCRIPTION

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by any druggist under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter of the freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT AGAIN.

Mr. Bickerdike brought up his old bill to abolish capital punishment, and the House spent the best part of the evening on it. Dr. Pugsley and Hon. Arthur Meighen favouring abolition and Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Burnham opposing.

"Does the honourable gentleman object to shooting?" asked Mr. J. H. Burnham, of West Peterborough.

"I do," replied Mr. Bickerdike.

"Then you object to the war?" said Mr. Burnham.

"I do," answered Mr. Bickerdike.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the member for West Peterborough.

The discussion was adjourned in-

SUFFERING CATS! GIVE THIS MAN THE GOLD MEDAL

Let folks step on your feet hereafter; wear shoes a size smaller if you like, for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you, according to this Cincinnati authority.

He says that a few drops of a drug called freezone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out.

This drug is a sticky ether compound but dries at once and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue.

It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce of freezone obtained at any drug store will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Cut this out, especially if you are a woman reader who wears high heels.

Four Million Rounds Opened General Haig's Offensive

Lord Curzon Makes Statement in Speech at Opening of Soldier's Canteens

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 21. —British artillery fired four million rounds of projectiles against the German lines at the opening of General Haig's offensive, which is now forcing the enemy steadily back, Lord Curzon, Lord President of the Council, stated to-day.

"But the military power of Germany is not yet sufficiently broken to induce her to accept terms which the allies might consider reasonable," Curzon said. "It is difficult to learn just what Germany's internal situation is." Commenting on the operations in France, Curzon said the British artillery had shown wonderful superiority over the enemy. His speech was made in connection with the opening of the soldiers' canteen.

We Should Stand By The Fifty-Seventh Band

The 57th band has, for a long time, been our most important civic, in fact, our only, civic musical organization; and in the excitement and demands of war work, its claims to popular support should not be forgotten.

It needs funds to help it maintain its efficiency for the credit of the city. It has in the past given splendid service and largely advertised the city by its appearances every year at the Toronto Exhibition, and its good work has been to the credit of the city. At annual camps it was the best band in the muster, selected to play at the officers' mess.

The band is needed now in the city more than ever to do the big share in keeping up the musical end of the war spirit and military enthusiasm.

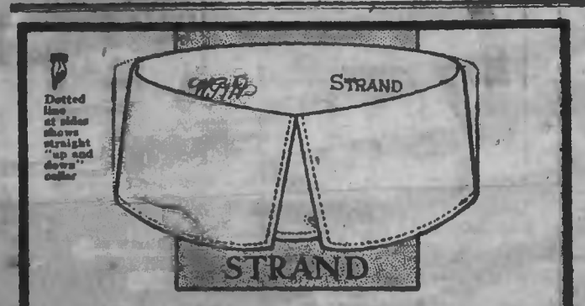
It is to play at the Church parade of the Returned War Veterans tomorrow, and for three days it will play at the patriotic motor show. It is needed as an inspiration for recruiting for the new 57th Regiment, C.F.D. It will be needed at the official welcome of the Duke of Devonshire, and at no time in our stirring civic history has there ever been greater necessity for a well-supported and, necessarily, efficient, civic band.

Amidst all our war work, the 57th band is an indispensable element—military music is a war-time necessity.

To be worthy of the city and the work it has to do, the band needs funds for music and other necessary things.

We cannot do without a civic band, and we must keep and have a good one; and to insure that financial support is necessary. The band has no source of income but a small civic grant—all it patriotic work is, of course, without fee.

"It is, therefore, the part of true patriotism to stand by our own, and we are big enough—twenty thousand of us—to not only do our share of patriotic work for the cause, but to also 'Keep the Home Fires Burning'"—a musical reminder of the importance of music in patriotic work, and a reminder that it is not fair to ask a band that responds to every patriotic appeal to struggle alone with the difficulties that public financial aid can remove.



The human neck tapers—so does a W. G. & R. collar

And there is no question that a W. G. & R. collar, therefore, looks smarter and fits neater than a straight "up and down" collar.

The W. G. & R. taper design is only one of the leading features of W. G. & R. collars. There's the W. G. & R. "Slip On" buttonhole, the ample tie space, the curved hook end.

Ask your haberdasher to explain these W. G. & R. features to you.

SEVEN YEARS TORTURE

Nothing Helped Him Until He Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

ALBERT VARNER

Buckingham, Que., May 3rd, 1915.

For seven years, I suffered terribly from Severe Headaches and Indigestion. I had belching gas from the stomach, bitter stuff would come up into my mouth after eating, while at times I had nausea and vomiting, and had chronic Constipation. I went to several doctors and wrote to a specialist in Boston but without benefit. I tried many remedies but nothing did me good. Finally, a friend advised "Fruit-a-tives". I took this grand fruit medicine and it made me well. I am grateful to "Fruit-a-tives", and to everyone who has miserable health with Constipation and Indigestion and Bad Stomach, I say take "Fruit-a-tives", and you will get well".

ARTHUR BALFOUR HAS ARRIVED IN WASHINGTON

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINTON, April 21.—Arthur J. Balfour, the British Foreign Minister, has landed safely, the State Department announced this afternoon.

BAVARIANS REPLACED BY PRUSSIANS IN FRONT OF CANADIANS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, April 21.—Stewart Lyon, representing the Canadian newspapers in Flanders, says: "This is an army of Mark Tapley's. Its cheerfulness is invincible. Though up to their eyes in mud during the last ten days, the Canadians and Imperial troops with whom they are associated in the operations at Vimy Ridge, laboured incessantly in making a way for their guns across the desert the guns themselves had created. The adverse weather but spurred the men to greater exertions.

As our own guns have now come up, the situation of the infantry has improved materially, and the men have begun to push out our front line to explore the enemy's positions, extending in irregular lines from Lens south through Mericourt, Acheville and Arleux. The Prussian Guard has been sent to this part of the front to take the place of the Bavarians. Since the Prussians came there has been several attempts to raid our posts at night, but all have been sorry failures. The German losses by shell fire have been very heavy since the semi-open warfare began. The enemy sorely misses his deep shelters on Vimy Ridge, prepared by the patient toil of so many months. Our men know now from experience that they can depend implicitly upon their guns when it comes to a show down, and that is why, as the guns go east, they sing in their trenches and shelters while the interminable rain makes everyone look like as clothed in caked mud.

Mr. W. J. Oke Rents Frank Brown Acres

The eighteen acre property of the Frank Brown estate which the Electrical workers were considering as a community effort in potato growing was rented about ten days ago to Mr. Walter Oke. This necessitates a change in that effort which hoped to attract one hundred men who would put in a potato crop. Mr. Oke has already completed his plans and will have a man in charge of the planting and cultivating throughout the summer.

ENEMY DESTROYERS LOST OFF DOVER

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, April 21.— Two German destroyers were sunk and one other was probably destroyed, when the enemy vessels attempted a raid on Dover, the Admiralty announced to-day. The raid on Dover was attempted last night, five German vessels participating. They were attacked by two British patrol boats. The fight that ensued lasted only five minutes. The British ships suffered no material damage and the casualties were slight. Ten German officers and ninety-five men rescued and made prisoners.

WEDDING BELLS

LYNCH—McCABE.

A quiet wedding took place in the St. Mary's Church, Weyburn, Sask., at 8 a.m., on April 17th. Miss Marion Irene McCabe, of Peterborough, Ont., was united in the bonds of matrimony to Joseph Lynch, of Hastings, Ont., by Rev. Father I. Morard, M.L.

EMMERSON—FOX.

A very quiet wedding took place in St. Stephen's Presbyterian church, Winnipeg, at noon on Easter Monday, when David George Emmerson and Edith Isabel Fox were united in marriage. The groom is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Emmerson, Otonabee, Ont., and the bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Fox, Valley, Truro, N.S. The Rev. Dr. Patterson, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony. The groom's present to the bride was a Gerhard Heintzman piano. The happy couple will make their future home at Kenlis, Sask., where Mr. Emmerson has been residing for the past thirteen years.

GILLESPIE—TELFORD.

At Toronto on Wednesday, April 18, a quiet but pretty wedding took place in Old St. Andrew's church, when Rev. Mr. Mitchell united in marriage Aggie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Telford, Peterborough, to Thomas J. Gillespie, of the same city. After a short trip the happy couple will return to Peterborough, where they will reside at 177 Dublin street.

Many beautiful presents were received, testifying the popularity of the young couple.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favourite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is musty and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Sweet oil on stovepipes when they are put away will prevent them from rusting.

Stocks of Grain Remaining in The Hands of Farmers

Results of Inquiries as to The Stocks of Wheat, Oats, Barley and Flax in Canada—Merchantable Quality of 1916 Crops

A GRAIN CENSUS

OTTAWA, April 23.—The Census and Statistics' Office has issued in summary form the results of inquiries as to (a) the stocks of wheat, oats, barley and flax in Canada on March 31; (b) the stocks of all agricultural produce remaining in farmers' hands on March 31; and (c) the proportion of the crops of 1916 that proved to be of merchantable quality.

STOCK OF GRAIN IN CANADA.

The compilation of returns collected from elevators, flour mills and railway companies shows that on March 31, 1917, the quantity of wheat and wheat flour expressed as wheat ,was 126 million bushels, as compared with 197 million bushels last year, and 79 million bushels on February 8, 1915. The total for 1917 includes 67 1-2 million bushels in the elevators, flour mills and in winter storage in vessels, 45,638,000 bushels in farmers' hands and 12,862,000 bushels in transit by rail. This year, for the first time, the inquiry was extended to oats, barley and flax. Of oats, including oat products expressed as oats, the total quantity in Canada on March 31 was about 184 million bushels, comprising 5? million bushels in elevators and flour mil's, 137 million bushels in farmers' hand and 10 million bushels in transit by rail. Of barley the total quantity in Canada on March 31 was about 15 million bushels, of which 3,620,000 bushels were in elevators, etc., 10 million bushels in farmers' hands and 680,000 bushels in transit by rail. Of flax seed the total quantity in Canada on March 31 was 5,662,000 bushels, including 3,931,000 bushels in elevators and mills, 318,000 bushels in transient and 1,413,000 bushels in farmers' hands.

STOCKS IN FARMERS' HANDS ON MARCH 31, 1917.

Out of the total estimated wheat production of 1916, 21 per cent. or 45,638,000 bushels remained in farmers' hands at the end of March. In 1916, at the corresponding date, the proportion was 23 per cent. in '915 it was 12 1-2 per cent. and in 1914 it was 16 1-2 per cent. Of the remaining field crops, the proportions and quantities estimated to be in farmers' hands at March 31 are as follows: Oats 35 p.c., or 136,179,000 bushels; barley 26 p.c., or 10,559,000 bushels; rye 28 p.c., or 813,500 bushels; buckwheat 18 p.c., or 1,103,000 bushels; corn for husking 13 p.c., or 814,000 bushels; flax 20 p.c., or 1,413,000 bushels; potatoes 26 p.c., or 15,969,000 bushels; turnips, etc., 14 p.c., or 5,843,000 bushels; hay and clover 32 p.c. or 4,802,000 tons. For corn the quantity on hand at the end of March is smaller and hay and clover it is larger than in any previous year on record. The stock of potatoes, viz, 15,969,000 bushels compares with 12,960,800 bushels at March 31, 1916, both years being lower than in any previous year since the record began in 1909.

MERCANTABLE QUALITY OF 1916 CROPS.

The returns received from crop correspondents show that of the total estimated wheat crop in 1916, viz, 290,367,000 bushels, 85 p.c., or 187,857,000 bushels, proved to be of merchantable quality. This loss of 15 p.c., is greater than in any previous year on record since 1909, and contrasts with last year's high proportion of 95 p.c., merchantable or only 5 p.c., loss. The proportions of the other crops of 1916 which proved to be of merchantable quality are as follows: Oats 89 p.c., (312,798,000 bushels out of 351,1-74,000 bushels); barley 84 p.c., (34,558,000 bushels out of 41,318,000 bushels); rye 92 p.c., (2,659,000 bushels out of 2,896,400 bushels); buckwheat 78 p.c., (4,606,000 bushels out of 5,976,000 bushels); corn for husking 58 p.c., (3,648,000 bushels out of 6,2-,000 bushels); flax seed 93 p.c., (6,506,000) bushels out of 7,122,900 bushels); potatoes 78 p.c., (47,814,000 bushels out of 61,128,000 bushels); turnips, etc., 75 p.c., (31,099,000 bushels out of 41,274,000 bushels); and hay and clover 90 p.c., (13,321,000 tons out of 14,799,000 tons).

BELGIANS LIVING IN PERPETUAL HUNGER

MONTREAL, April 20.—What life in Belgium is like at the present time may be gathered from the following extract from a letter received from a citizen of the ancient city of Ghent. "Over two years have passed since the time, when, hot from the doors of the city, the cannons thundered. The period that has intervened has brought us much unhappiness. I need not tell you. God alone has preserved the population while it has been under the German regime, which has been full of oppression, vexations, hunger and misery. Among us the tyranny has reached such a point that we are forbidden to go abroad to promenade, to sleep or to work, without permission. This tyranny has created a state of things the effect of which will be felt for many years. We are in want of many things. We are rationed, which means that we are condemned to continual hunger. Processions of the famishing people may be seen in the streets every now and again, although various punishments are inflicted for taking part in such demonstrations. Sad and hungry little family parties appear on the streets, all wearing sabots, for shoes have become articles of great luxury. When will the deliverance come?"

This is the kind of life that the whole Belgian people are living today. The whole nation knows perpetual hunger, and it is to give them relief and comfort that the Belgian Relief Commission is redoubling its efforts to increase the rations to meet the ever-increasing needs. Free-will offerings to the Commission's fund are earnestly solicited, and may be sent to the General Belgian Relief Committee, 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal, or to any local committee.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Is it right that any landlord in this city can put a soldier's wife and children into the street? A soldier's wife whose husband is serving in France got notice to leave her house on April 1st, by word of mouth only, as he wanted the house for himself. She has tried ever since to get a house, but can not, so she told the landlord she coudn't get a house, and he came down to-day and told her in a very insulting manner that she would have to get out as he would come in May 1st, and put her out, and that he had also heard to-day from a solicitor in town that he could raise her rent from $9 to $50, and collect it. Is there no protection for the soldier's wife and little ones?

Yours truly,
A CONSTANT READER.

Soissons, City Nearest Paris, Freed From Foe

Liberated From German Menace for First Time Since Battle of Marne—Vailly Salient is Now Cut off

French are Following up by Driving Against the Fortifications of Laon

With the Soissons Army, April 23.—Soissons, the city nearest Paris, which has been under German guns, since the battle of the Marne, is now freed of this menace for the first time since the enemy was turned back from the French capital in 1914.

By cutting off the salient from the Vailly bridgehead to Fort Sonde the French forced the Germans back such a distance that Soissons is now liberated.

Fort Conde is one of the outer circle of the fortifications of Laon, which the victorious French army in this region is pressing as its next objective.

A New Tongue is Growing Up in Old France

British Soldier and French People are Developing It—Some Examples of the "Entente"—Amusing Incidents Which Have Taken Place During War

"George A. Birmingham," who is in private life the Very Rev. Canon Hannay, writes in the London Daily News:

I have always disliked artificial languages. The more perfect they are the more useful they claim to be, the colder they leave me. Esperanto, I suppose, the best of the crop which the aspirators of international sentiment produced in the days before the war. There is no sap in the thing. Its appalling regularity induces a wild desire to hack at it with an axe. It is like the imitation shrubs planted in imitation earth and set in ornamental pots with which some people adorn their windows. It is obviously a manufactured article. A language, like a shrub, must grow if it is to gain the affection of men.

It cannot be denied that the language now very widely spoken in the North of France has grown and is vital. It lacks a name, and I have ventured to call it the Entente language. "Entente" is no longer wanted to describe the relation between the French and English people. They are Allies now, bound by ties far closer and more enduring than the old sentiments which we called entente. But it is a pity to let that word get lost. It is a good word, with all sorts of excellent associations. It may very well be used as the name of a language which is neither French nor English, which has grown in an atmosphere of good humour out of a sincere desire for mutual understanding. It is far from being a perfect language yet, but if the war lasts much longer it will, no doubt, take formal rank among the languages that are taught in schools.

SOME AMUSING EXAMPLES.

Sergt. Jenkins, arranging for the accommodation of his platoon commander in a French village—an officer unaccountably forgotten by the billeting authority—felt the need of a language. He could not speak French. The villagers could not understand English. He knocked at the door of a house, saluted with military precision the lady who opened it, and said: "Lit pour officier?" He was speaking Entente, and the good lady understood him at once. The officer slept that night in a billowy feather bed.

Major A. was not for fortunate. But that was not his fault. He spoke Entente fluently, but his lady misunderstood him, deliberately I think. He was dining at a restaurant, and intended to dine well. He wished for a glass of sherry with his soup. He did not know the French for sherry. Very few people do. He tried the Entente. Beckoning to the waitress, a demure but attractive-looking girl, he said, "Cherie." She brindled with delight, and awaited further advances with a smirk. Major A., a churchwarden somewhere in England, chased her away by scowling, and did without his sherry.

Captain B. spoke Entente well and competently. He did all the shopping for the mess, and bought the most unusual things without difficulty. His system was simple. He went into the largest shop he could find, a provincial Harrods, where such a thing existed, ignoring all offers of help from the shop assistants, he stalked from counter until he saw the thing he wanted. When he say it he pointed to it with his forefinger, and said "Ashtay." If the article required was not displayed in that shop, he walked out again without a word and tried another shop. I only once saw him beaten. He wanted turpentine, a thing seldom on show.

A STORY ABOUT STARCH.

As a rule the men speak Entente better than the officers. Captain C. lived for nearly six weeks in a French house, but he held no direct intercourse with his landlady. He communicated with her through his servant, an intelligent Londoner. "Smith," he said, "tell Madame that I don't like starch put in my pocket handkerchiefs. Tell her before she washes the next lot."

Afterwards Captain C., dressing beside the open window, heard Smith making the matter plain in the courtyard below.

Smith—"Madame."

Madame—"Bonjour, monsieur."

Smith—"The captain says 'e don't want no more starch in his pocket 'andkerchiefs, compris?"

Madame—"Encore de l'eau chaud pour M. le Captaine?" Madames's experience of captains was large. Seven of them, one after another, had lived in her house. They all demanded unreasonable quantities of hot water.

Smith—"'Es got his eau chaud; what I'm talking about is his pocket 'andkerchiefs—mooshwaws. You must be able to compris that." Madame did. "Les mouchoirs de M. le Captaine?"

Smith—"That's it. 'Is mooshwaws, 'E don't want no starch in them. Starch in mooshwaws pas bon."

Smith—"Starch. What you stiffens collars with. Just you na poo it when you're ironing out the 'andkerchiefs or else the captain will get someone else to do his washing. Mooshwaws aren't collars, you know, not in Blighty, anyhow."

Captain C. peeped from the window. Smith was fastening an imaginary collar round his neck. 'Compris?' he said when he finished the pantomime. The amusing thing is that Madame did. Smith had conveyed the idea of a collar to her. That probably suggested starch to her mind. Something was evidently wrong with the captain's handkerchiefs. She tried the experiment of not starching them. Smith's Entente had proved its value.

Nothing is more unwise than trying to help out an Entente speaker by giving him a few words of French. There was an officer who wanted a box of drawing pins, and sent his servant out to buy them. Left to himself, and relying on his proper Entente that servant would certainly have returned with the drawing-pins. But the officer, who spoke French fluently, thought he would facilitate the shopping by telling the servant beforehand that punaises is the French for drawing-pins. The servant returned with a box of insect powder. Punise is also the French for a bug, and as the shopman could not believe the man was trying to buy the actual insect, he sold him what it seemed reasonable to suppose he wanted.

A SOLDIERS COURTSHIP

There is a story told of an English soldier who wished to marry a French girl. It seems a wild kind of a story, but it will be credible to anyone who knows the extraordinary range and capacity of the Entente language. "I suppose," said the officer whom the man consulted, "that since you've got engaged to be married to the girl you speak French." "Oh, pretty well, sir," said the man. "Quite well enough to get on. I know 'pas bon,' and 'na pu' and a few sentences like that." It seemed insufficient for the intricacies of courtship. "The girl knows English then?" said the officer. "Pretty well, sir. Quite enough to get on with. She knows 'Good afternoon,'" and 'Come for a walk,' and a few more words like that." 'What about the question of religion?' said the officer. 'She'sa Roman Catholic, I suppose.' 'She was, sir,' said the man; 'but I explained all that to her, and she's Church of England now.'" After all, most religious controversy boils down into "pas bon," said repeatedly, with emphasis, and all that is really necessary in the renunciation of forsaken faith may be summed up in the words "Na pu."

Newray, the next Big Mine of the Porcupine Camp

THE PROPERTY comprises 321 acres in the famous Hollinger-McIntyre-Newray area, in the heart of Porcupine's richest belt, which contains five of the seven producing mines and three of the four dividend payers.

THE COMPANY is conservatively capitalised, well financed and efficiently managed. The issued capital is only a little over $1,000,000, being — acreage considered — the lowest of any of the important mines.

THE MINE has been proven by drifting, crosscutting and diamond drilling, and is looming up as the feature property this year.

THE MILL will be operated within the next few weeks—and the attainment of the production era will prove a factor of the utmost importance in the working out of the company's destiny.

NEWRAY is now coming into its own — it is about to take its appointed place among the big mines of the camp. NEWRAY stock offers the same opportunities that Hollinger and McIntyre did in the early stages of their development.

We advise the purchase of NEWRAY now!

SUBMARINES DANGEROUS ONLY NEAR A HOME BASE

Park Benjamin, one of the best authorities on naval matters in the United States, in an article in the New York Independent, shows how baseless is the fear of serious submarine attacks on the United States by an enemy acting from a base thousands of miles away. Submarines, he pointed out, require a depth of not less than 50 feet to dive in and not many American harbors are that deep. They will also fear to enter channels and bays which can be protected with nets. Furthermore, the supply of oil or fuel is limited on a submarine, as well as the space for torpedoes, and submarines to be effective must when operating far from home, be attended by a "mother ship," travelling on the surface, to carry supplies and such a mother ship would be an easy victim for a cruiser. Besides, every time the submarine came to the surface she would be liable to attack by one of a host of submarine chasers on the look out for her, and these chasers moving at 40 or 50 miles an hour, would prove a poor target for her guns and would be wholly immune to torpedo attack, because torpedoes must travel below the surface at a greater depth than the draft of the chasers.

LITTLE ONES IMPRACTICABLE.

To meet these difficulties on the part of the submarines some people have suggested that an innocent looking tramp steamer flying a neutral flag might bring over several small submarines on her decks and launch them at appropriate places. But France tried out that plan in an experimental way, long before the war began. These small French submarines were of 40 tons' displacement, known as the "Guepe class." They were found entirely too weak, enormously expensive in upkeep, useless even in a moderately smooth sea, unbearable to live in, and impossible to launch safely in choppy waves.

NET DEFENCES AGAINST SUBMARINES.

Speaking of net defences against submarines, Mr. Benjamin says:—"Great Britain has been using such nets with notable success. Sometimes they are of chain, sometimes of wire, sometimes of wrought iron frames linked together—with meshes from 10 to 15 feet square. They make the lane across Dover Straits, through which millions of men and millions of tons of munitions have been safely ferried. They are laid across roadstead and harbor entrances and in all sorts of places throughout the danger zone. Off the coast of Britain one may see long strings of boats, with the fast motor boats running constantly up and down the lines. If a float disappears the first boat noting the fact circles around the spot with her gun trained and ready. If the submarine comes up she is instantly sunk. If not, because entangled, the watcher grimly waits for five days to make certain that no life remains, and then tells a destroyer which raises the victim and tows her into port. But even more dramatic is submarine catching by a couple of motor boats, a net and an aeroplane, working together. The aeroplane assumes the role of a hawk, and sees the submerged submarine as a hawk sees a fish or else if the U-boat be too deeply submerged, recognises the lines of regular waves which the latter always makes on the surface. A puff of black smoke trailing from the aeroplane or a wireless signal warns the boats who rush head of the submarine and spread the net across her path. The victim's captain seeing nothing, steering by compass, goes blindly on, only to find suddenly that something is wrong. The bow of his boat wants to go down, her rudder refuses to obey the helm; her screws may stop turning. He does not know what the matter is down there in the dark. He may, shudderingly, suspect the great net in which he is enmeshed. If he cannot move, he knows that his buoyancy is only due to what air there is in his air tanks. He must go up or else go down, and stay there. Human nature prevails, and he goes up for daylight, and then the shot rings out. And after that nothing but some bubbles and a long slick of oil on the restless sea."

EVEN ARMED MERCHANTMEN HAVE AN ADVANTAGE.

Even armed merchantmen have an advantage over the submarine. She can carry bigger guns, because her spar-deck being much higher out of the water than the submarine periscope, a greater range of vision is possible, so that the U-boat may find herself sunk by an enemy which she cannot see, but which can see her. A submarine on the surface is a much less steady, gun platform than the deck of a steamer, and hence guns on the latter can be more accurately aimed. A six pounder quick fire gun can deliver twenty-two aimed shots per minute, which will penetrate the thin hull of a submarine over two miles distant as if it were of pasteboard. Larger projectiles, like four and six inch shells burst into many pieces, any one of which may end a U-boat. It is reported from the British Admiralty that the very large majority of surface attacks on armed merchant vessels have failed. The actual figures show that unarmed merchantmen have escaped in but twenty-four per cent. of the gun fire attacks, while armed merchantmen have escaped in the ratio of seventy per cent.

PAINS IN SIDE AND BACK

How Mrs. Kelly Suffered and How She was Cured.

Burlington, Wis.—"I was very irregular, and had pains in my side and back, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and using two bottles of the Sanative Wash I am fully convinced that I am entirely cured of these troubles, and feel better all over. I know your remedies have done me worlds of good and I hope every suffering woman will give them a trial."—Mrs. ANNA KELLY, 720 Chestnut Street, Burlington, Wis.

The many convincing testimonials constantly published in the newspapers ought to be proof enough to women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine they need.

This good old root and herb remedy has proved unequalled for these dreadful ills; it contains what is needed to restore woman's health and strength.

If there is any peculiarity in your case requiring special advice, write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for free advice.

Sugar Prices Are Higher

Weekly Market Report Records Number of Advances

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in the Canadian Grocer this week:

Flour and wheat have been in the limelight during the past week owing to the spectacular advances that have been recorded in wheat and the rapidity with which flour followed wheat upward. An advance of $1.40 per barrel in flour was recorded with a firm situation even at the higher levels. The big advances in wheat were caused by the announcement that during last week the available stock of wheat in sight in the United States had dwindled by some 3,221,000 bushels through the export trade. The effect of the removal of the duty on Canadian wheat going into the United States has been to increase the price of Ontario flour and the price of Canadian wheat to the extent of the former duty.

SUGAR FIRM.

Sugar has been in a firm position throughout the week as the result of higher freight rates and marine insurance from Cuba and Porto Rico, and also because of the recognitoin of the fact that the Cuban crop will be much less than expected at the first of the season. The voluntary reduction of consumption in Great Britain from three-quarters of a pound per capita per week to one-half a pound may reduce the consumption there by some 300,000 tons and so affect the situation in raws toward easier prices. An advance of 25c per hundred was recorded on Wednesday.

CORN SYRUP UP.

Eggs alone have shown a disposition toward lower prices during the week. Provision prices are all firm, with advances recorded in live hogs, pure lard, compound lard and some lines of cooked and smoked meats. Maple syrup is not reaching the market in very large quantities. Further advances have been recorded in canned meats, soups, macaroni and vermicelli. Corn syrup had advanced 50c per case and cornstarches and laundry starches are all higher in sympathy with the higher market for corn. Importers of American peel have advanced their prices from the opening quotations of two weeks ago. The tea situation shows no improvement, there being less prospect of getting direct shipments via the Pacific because of the requisitioning of all the direct lines of steamers by the British government. Potatoes have also advanced slightly. Business in grocery lines has been good during the week.

ECZEMA ON FACE

WAS SO BAD HAD TO STAY IN HOUSE

All skin diseases such as eczema or salt rheum, itching or burning rashes, eruptions, ulcers, boils, pimples, etc., are all caused by bad blood, and while not usually attended with any fatal results, may sooner or later develop into some serious blood trouble and the entire system become affected.

Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and well-known remedy, will cleanse the blood of all its impurities, and by this means cure all skin diseases and other blood troubles.

Mrs. Ernest Andrews, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "My face was covered with eczema and was so terribly bad I had to stay in the house. I had ten different doctors but got so tired of their treatment that I went and bought a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it helped me, so I kept on taking it. Now I am cured, and have a lovely skin.

"People who used to see me when I was so bad and see me now will not believe it, but I always tell them that nothing cured me but Burdock Blood Bitters."

Haig Prepares For New Drive

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, April 23.—Haig prepares for a new drive in Flanders. Big smash likely this week. Germans heavily reinforced.

NO ARISTOCRACY FOR CANADA.

LONDON, April 21. — Mr. Martin, in the Commons, has given notice of the following resolution: "This House regrets that in the time of a great fight for world democracy against autocracy, the government has become responsible for the appointment of resident Peers in Canada, thus introducing the thin edge of aristocracy in a purely democratic country."

Loss of profits on the sale of guide books by the Warden of the Regalia, Edinburgh Castle, amounted to more than $1,000. The loss was sustained owing to the few visitors since the beginning of the war.

Lured German Destroyers And Sank 6 of Them

NEW YORK, April 20.—Six German destroyers sunk through the cleverness of the commander of a British disabled submarine, is the story told to the New York Herald by a British officer on a vessel just arrived at this port.

The British submarine became disabled off the mouth of the Weser, while upon a tour of observation, and was forced to submerge. A German mine-layer loomed up in the darkness and the English submarine commander boldly hailed the enemy vessel in German, saying he was the U-29, in need of assistance. A boat had been launched from the submarine to work around to the other side of the trawler, and at the right moment the Teuton captain was surprised to find his craft boarded from both sides and captured, two of the crew being shot and the rest locked in the forecastle.

SOWING TROUBLE FOR HUNS

The disabled submarine was towed to a safer zone and repaired, and in the meantime the German mines on the trawler were sowed where they would do the most good to Britain and the most harm to Germany. A fake wireless call was then arranged from the Hun code book found in the cabin, the trawler was abandoned and the submarine submerged.

A flotilla of German destroyers answered the radio call, and what happened is best told by the officer who took part in the affair:

LURED TO DEATH.

"We didn't have long to wait. The down was just breaking when up front the east came four destroyers in column. We had hardly sighted them when they saw the trawler and spread out fan-wise. As they shot into the mine field the leading destroyer went leaping out of the water with her bow torn off. The others sheered, and the second and third, thus running up the mine trail, both struck, each one being fairly torn to pieces. The fourth destroyer, her engines reversing at top speed, and hauling her back on her haunches, took a pot shot at the trawler for luck, realizing that they had run into a trap. As she was firing we crept slowly up and let her have a torpedo amidships.

A FEARFUL HARVEST.

"The roar of the explosion had hardly died away when another detonation shook us and we found that two more destroyers had come up from the southward and had fallen afoul of the mines. The leading one was untouched, but the second had struck another mine. As the one remaining destroyer turned to run we made for her at an angle, and got her. She went up with an appaling roar.

TAUBES CHASE SUB.

"We had no chance to breathe, however, for something dropped into the sea close by and exploded. Swinging our periscope upward we found three Taubes circling above us. We turned and out for home, with the trio hanging over us for more than half an hour, dropping bombs all around us But, as luck would have it, they missed, and after running with the fear of death in our hearts for more than an hour, we got within our cruising area, and the Taubes were driven away by a couple of our own seaplanes.

"The lieutenant got the Victoria Cross for his work, and we all got the Military Cross."

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I only use my own because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

CAN ONLY RETIRE, SAYS FOE EXPERT.

COPENHAGEN, April 21. — In an article in The Berlin Vossische Zeitung, Captain Salzmann, military correspondent of the newspaper, characterizes the fighting raging on the Western front in France as a "competitive struggle of strength in war materials."

"As long as the Entente allies have superiority in these," says Captain Salzmann, "Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's strategy is the only remedy—namely, the speedy evacuation of any front lines. Against superiority in materials no heroism can avail."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY [illegible] S. [illegible]OUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

MENSTRUATION PREPARATION.

THE FOLLOWING REMARKS concerning an important natural function of women is published by Dr. Effie Lobdell in The Chicago Tribune. Their value, if the suggestions are carried out, will be so great that no apology is offered for their publication.

Functioning Without Discomfort.

About three years ago I chanced to pick up a copy of the magazine, "Physical Culture," and read an article written by a business woman who claimed to have trained herself into health befitting her duties, and out of the physical infirmatives so common to women in all phases of life during their most efficient years.

These infirmities are so common as to be accepted as a traditional necessity. They are used as one of the most common arguments showing why women can never compete wholly with men in work or business, and therefore can never be estimated by the same wage or salary scale.

I decided to work out a plan I could recommend to any woman patient to carry through these physical phases with the least possible evidence to others and discomfort to themselves. In the three years of observation I am able to state that with the intelligent woman who will co-operate with me I have had astounding results.

My observations cover the girls and women employed in stores and factories, the office women in positions where the tension on nerves is more marked because of greater responsibilities, and the women in professional life or in business for themselves where the nerve tension is greater still.

The greatest number incapacitated by the simple function, menstruation, is among the girls of large stores and factories where the manifestations of dysmenorrhoea become almost epidemic at times. This shows the large element of "letting go" which enters into it. I am told that the same thing happens in high schools, especially where elaborate preparations are made for their care.

I would not discount the necessity nor value of the modern accommodation made for the girls in up-to-date schools and factories and stores, but I believe the girls are doing an unconscious injustice to themselves and to all the sex by letting the weak side of their physical life play so prominent a part in their occupation.

This is exactly where and when the first training in personal hygiene of the woman should begin. Institutions might find it less expensive to make this a part of their regime, even by using a kind of disciplinary demand for health or a premium for health. Their present arrangement founded on leniency is not wise or economical.

Dr. Kristine Mann of New York, writing for the American Journal of Public Health, May 1916, under the title "The Health of Repugnant Stage Women in New York," states that of 100 stage women, average age 22, examined by her as to symptoms, 40 per cent. had menstrual troubles." (I believe a younger set would yield even a higher percentage.) The total number who would be benefited by medical advice was 80 per cent., yet only four per cent. were under a doctor's care.

The office woman has more need of concealing her feelings, as her position is raised to more of an equality with her fellow male workers. Personal hygiene is more carefully observed by her accordingly, and she trains herself to regulate personal feelings to the background. Nurses in the hospitals and on private duty train themselves to pass through menstruation with little deviation from the usual in duty. It is almost an unknown thing for a nurse to be put to bed for dysmenorrhoea although they are the most strenuous of all workers, having long hours, walking many miles a day while on duty, and with great responsibility through it all. They are careful that no special attention shall be directed to them at menstrual time. About the only difference in their daily routine is that they use their period off duty for rest instead of for recreation.

The professional woman and the woman in business for herself has a definite value for her time and talent. Her emotions and personal feelings she subjugates to her ambitions and her self-discipline. She refuses to let a physical disadvantage check or limit her. She is the first to voluntarily find out her true state of health, and then train herself accordingly.

Enemy To March On Petrograd

PETROGRAD, April 21. — German preparations to attack the northern front, supported by the German fleet, reports of which appear to be well founded, bear out the War Office warning recently issued that the enemy means to march on Petrograd. The preparations consist of the massing of troops on the Dvinsk-Riga front and the concentration of transports, warships and shallow draft ships in Baltic Sea ports. A portion of the German fleet is reported to have moved from Kiel to Libau.

It is regarded here as extremely probable that the plan is to cut off Petrograd from the active army. The German efforts to spread discontent in the Russian army have developed an ingenious device of loading shells with copies of Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg's Reichstag speech of March 29 and firing them into the Russian lines.

WEAKEN ROUMANIAN LINE.

London, April 21.—Reuter's Petrograd correspondent says the information concerning the preparations being made by the Germans for an attack on the Russian northern front, was made public by the Russian General Staff.

"The opinion is," says the correspondent, "that the Germans contemplate a descent into the rear of the Russian right flank, either at Pernau or Reval, or elsewhere on the Gulf of Finland. In connection with these preparations the military authorities note the recent withdrawal of German troops from some of the southern fronts, notably the line in Roumania."

WOMEN'S SPRING CLOTHES

LONDON, April 19.— "Women are dressing with admirable good sense this spring," declares a London doctor, "and if they keep it up there will be fewer ailing women. In a walk through Oxford street, Regent street and Piccadilly to-day I found many women were wearing long, warm cloaks, just the thing for the time of year. Very few carried umbrellas, in proof that nothing is worn that can be spotted.

"But the thick fur worn by most women around the neck, and in many cases up to the chin, is not a healthy fashion. These furs weaken the throat, and one sunny day, when they are suddenly left off, there will be many sore throats. The neck is well supported with warm blood and does not need coddling."

Worry and Trouble Broke Down the Nerves

At a Time in Life When the System Could Not Stand the Strain—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Came to the Rescue

PETERBOROUGH, Ont., March 16. —There is a special message in this letter for every woman reader of this paper. It refers to the critical time in every woman's life when the strain on the nervous system is unusually severe and when she is most likely to develop nervous prostration or some form of nervous trouble.

Because it helps over this trying time and leaves the nervous system strong and healthy, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is most highly esteemed by all women who have tested its value.

Mrs. Esther Vass, 9 Brown street, Browntown P.O., Ont., writes: "At the age of forty I was not feeling well, and suffered from sleeplessness, nervousness, headaches, and was in a generally run-down condition. I had gone through a lot of trouble, having lost my husband previously, leaving me with quite a large family. Just about this time I was troubled with the change of life. I had tried doctors' medicine, but it did not seem to help me. I read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so decided to try it. I got some and took it, and found they did me a great deal of good. I took them regularly, according to directions, for four years, with splendid success. At that time I felt like a new woman—this medicine had carried me over this critical period, relieved me of nervousness, helped me to sleep well and gave me a splendid appetite. Now I am 61 years of age and feeling fine. If at any time I feel that I need a tonic I take a box or two of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, with splendid results. I might mention that I have also found this treatment good for relieving palpitation of the heart."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates, & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Ballarat Sam

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The day I arrived in Adelaide, Australia, I was twenty years old and my pocket contained a dollar for every year I had lived. I had exactly £4 to begin life on in this colony, but was a healthy youngster, with no fear of the future. Luck was with me from the start. On the second day after landing from the steamer I hired out to a sheep raiser, who had a ranch on the Murray river, near its junction with the Darling, and on the third we started off up the country.

One evening I was building a fire to cook supper by, while McCall, the overseer, went to secure a lever with which to raise a wagon off its wheels. I was thus alone for a few moments. Suddenly a man burst out of the thicket and came running up to me.

"For God's sake, young feller, give me a bite to eat!" he said as he stood before me. "Don't be afraid of me. I'm a sheep herder who has been lost in the bush for three days and a half."

I stepped to the wagon and handed him a piece of bacon, some hard crackers and a handful of tea, and after he had placed them in his pockets he continued:

"Young feller, do me a greater favor still. Lend me your pistol and knife until tomorrow, when you will pass my station, and, furthermore, do not mention to any one that I was here. Do this and you will never regret it." Then he hurried away.

Just as McCall came back with the lever there was a clatter of hoofs, and I looked up to see five mounted men ride into camp. They were in the uniform of the patrol, and the appearance of the men and horses showed that they had had a long ride of it.

"Well, Captain White, what is it?" asked McCall, who seemed to know every one of the five.

"Been after Ballarat Sam again," was the reply as the captain dismounted.

"And lost him, eh?"

"Yes, curse the luck! We struck his trail near Dobney's yesterday morning, and he led us a chase of fifty miles during the day. We killed his horse about dusk last night and had him surrounded in the scrub. He got out, however, and we did not get his track until about noon today. We followed to the creek two miles above and there lost it."

We continued on up the country and finally arrived at the ranch, and for the next six months I was hard at work as a sheep herder and neither saw nor heard much of the outside world. Then one day I was called to report at headquarters and upon my arrival found a couple of visitors there—two gentlemen who had lately arrived from England. They had come out to Australia to go into the sheep business, but would leave it in care of an agent. They hired me and a number of others, and we began work with them.

One evening we had finished supper and were grouped about the campfire when one of the dogs barked and we looked up to find ourselves covered by five rifles.

"Hands up or you are dead men!" shouted a voice, and every one of us quickly obeyed the command.

The five advanced, each keeping his rifle leveled, and when I could see the man who had spoken I at once identified him as Ballarat Sam, the man whom I had befriended months before. He recognized me almost as quickly and, taking a step forward, he said:

"Well, boy, you did me a good turn that day and I'll not forget it. Move over to the left. Now, then, gents, who are you?"

All our arms were in the wagon, and we were helpless to offer any resistance. The first thing they did was to despoil their captives. After they had robbed the two gentlemen of everything they had of value and helped themselves liberally to our stores in the wagons Ballarat Sam shook hands with me and said:

"So you didn't inform the police you had seen me that day?"

"No, sir."

"Well, you were mighty kind to me, and I am going to return the favor. Take this hundred pound note and save it for a rainy day, and here's the finest pistol and knife in Australia. Probably some day you will see me hanged, but whatever is said of me you can vouch for the fact that Ballarat Sam never forgot a favor or failed to get even with an enemy."

Columns of matter were printed in the Australian newspapers concerning Ballarat Sam and his crew of outlaws during the next year, and his picture was posted everywhere and a large reward offered for his capture dead or alive. The authorities were bound to get him, but he seemed to bear a charmed life for awhile, and, although arrested several times, he always managed to escape by some ruse or other. Finally he was surrounded by a patrol numbering forty policemen and taken prisoner, and when brought handcuffed to Adelaide the entire population of the town turned out to view the famous bushranger. I happened to be in the city at the time and witnessed the hanging, and probably I was the only one in the vast crowd that felt a pang of regret. He went to his doom with a smile, and after it was over the whole town in Australia breathed a sigh of relief.

Ballarat Sam was a bad man, but he had played fair with me.

Metchnikoff's Dream.

Dr. Elie Metchnikoff, the great Russian medical scientist, who for many years made his home in Paris, was the son of an officer of the Russian guard. He had the figure of a moujik, an abundant, uncultivated beard, long hair and big, dreamy eyes. This savant had much of the simplicity of the visionary. Possessed by the problems of disease and sorrow, he was convinced that all would be for the best if man could recover the primitive purity of his organs. In this paradise which he would restore and that science might realise he held that man should never suffer and that at the end of approximately 160 years he would die with the same ease that one falls asleep in the evening. In the world that Dr. Metchnikoff has left he had explained that the body was a very imperfect machine and that there were 105 organs or remains of organs that were superfluous, useless and even dangerous.—Cri de Paris.

Measuring a Rainfall.

The depth of the sheet of water that would lie on level ground if none of the water were lost by evaporation or soaking into the soil represents the amount of rainfall of a given storm and is measured by a rain gauge. The standard rain gauge of the weather bureau consists of a funnel shaped receiver eight inches in diameter at the top, surmounted by a cylinder of one and one-half inches in height and eight inches in diameter. The funnel is placed in a cylindrical reservoir, 3.53 inches in diameter and twenty inches in height. The area of the cross section of the reservoir is to that of the receiver as one to ten, or one inch of rain falling in the receiver corresponds with ten inches of water in the gauge, being magnified ten times for the convenience and accuracy of measurement.

Ancient Chinese Ingenuity.

We are assured that the taxicab is no new thing, being in its general principles a thing known to the ancient Romans. But now an orientalist goes even further and asserts that mechanical carts capable of registering distances traveled by counting and recording the revolutions of very large cartwheels, connected by cogs with other concentric or eccentric horizontal and perpendicular wheels of proportionate diameters, have been well known to the Chinese for 1,700 or 1,800 years. On the top of the cart was the figure of a man holding a drum, which he beat when one li, a third of a mile, was traveled. Some carts had in addition a figure holding a cymbal, which was struck when the drum had been beaten ten times.

Use of Maps.

A board inspector, having a few minutes to spare after examining the school, put a few questions to the lower form boys on the common objects in the schoolroom.

"What is the use of the map?" he asked, pointing to one stretched across the corner of the room, and half a dozen shrill voices answered in measured articulations:

"Please, sir, it's to hide master's bicycle."—London Tit-Bits.

KINGSTON PLOUGHS LAND

Setting Good Example in Matter of Helping Increased Production.

TORONTO, April 19.—The city of Kingston is doing all it can to help increased production and every person there is setting out this summer to do all they can in this way. The people have become enthused over the matter and soon Kingston's vacant lots will be the scenes of several small market gardens.

"The city council of Kingston," said Mr. Rankin, M.P.P., "have set aside a sum of money to plough all the vacant land in the city. When this is done the people will be allowed to cultivate it for their own use.

"This land has been handed over to the committee by the owners, but the work of laying out the land is to be handled properly. We have the district representative there, who will decide on what land can grow stuff, and that will be ploughed up by the city. Land that will not grow anything will not be ploughed, so that neither time nor money will be wasted.

"Then the people who want to work a little extra land for themselves will apply to the committee who will see that none of the applicants will get more land than he can properly handle. If a man can handle a quarter acre extra he can get it. If he can only work less he will get a smaller piece.

"Another good thing is that the land will not cost the man that works it anything. He can have it for his own use for the summer for nothing and the city does the ploughing. We have got the people very enthusiastic over this and it is quite likely that even afterwards when it will not be so necessary to work every vacant plot, this work will be continued."

EGG AND CABBAGE SALAD.

Cut the whites of three hard boiled eggs in small pieces, crumple the yolks with a fork or by pressing through a sieve. Have ready one and one-half cups cabbage, finely chopped, sprinkle with salt, pepper and one teaspoon celery seed or salt. Mix the cabbage lightly with the eggs, add the dressing, tossing until well mixed. Arrange on beds of lettuce or serve in small cup-shaped cabbage leaves.

GREATGRANDMOTHER'S RAISED FRIED CAKES.

These have but little sugar in them and were used as a hot bread fro the breakfast. They were set at night required for breakfast. Heat one pint of sweet milk until lukewarm, ad to it one level teaspoonful of salt, one heaping tablespoonful of yeast (we use one half a yeast cake, dissolved in one-fourth cupful of warm water), and flour enough to make a dough that can be handled. Make as soft as it is possible to knead it, and knead well. Put into a greased bowl and rub over the top with melted lard. In the morning turn out upon a well-floured board, roll thin, cut into strips, form into knots, and fry a golden brown in deep, hot fat. Serve while hot and crisp.

IN DREAD OF CROUP.

Every mother fears croup unless she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small doses at the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and affords relief and comfort. Its use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

Let the parents, the father as well as the mother, impress upon their young daughters, whether they are in the country school house or college, that the true woman's sphere is in the home, and the great business and educational world that have thrown wide open the doors for woman does not detract one iota from the importance of her sphere.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION IN SCHOOLS DISCUSSED BY COUNCIL OF WOMEN

That religious instruction brings in creed and how to solve the question of widening the religious instruction in the schools without offending different sects, was the question before the monthly meeting of the Local Council of Women yesterday. Mrs. Mowatt said that what is being done at present is all that is allowed by the Department of Education. Mr. Mowatt suggests that copies of the Ten Commandments be placed in the schools, as statistics show that one-tenth of what a child learns is remembered, whilst one-fifth of what he sees is retained.

Mrs. Harstone's Report.

Mr. Robert Harstone, who was the delegate from the Local Council in Ottawa when the agenda for the annual meeting in Winnipeg, in May, was prepared, read a concise and comprehensive report of the important matters discussed.

Public questions with such women should now become familiar, because of the extension of the franchise, were discussed. The meeting, which was held in Victoria Museum, was attended by the Duchess of Devonshire and the Marchioness of Aberdeen. A message was received from the Duke of Connaught, in answer to the message of condolence sent by the National Council at the death of the Duchess.

The Agenda.

The aggenda to be presented at Winnipeg was read by Mrs. Stevenson, and discussed. The first question was the restriction of immigration. The easy handling of this in the United States has brought out the necessity of doing something towards this matter in Canada. The daylight saving scheme was approved by the local Council.

The debt of Canada requires a substantial increase of revenue. It is suggested to increase customs duty and place a land tax of one per cent. to raise the revenue. The local Council will take no action in this.

The restriction of objectionable printed matter is necessary and the Council will ask the Government to take action.

The government will be asked for a standardization of sizes of canned goods and stated weight on such.

That picture shows are, in some cases, unsuitable for children of tender years, was considered. The Council will endeavour to interest motion picture people in the idea of presenting suitable films for children, on Saturdays.

The Council would urge the Federal Government to have more military training in the schools. The local Council resolved that more physical instruction be given in all schools, and military training in all High Schools.

As a guarantee of good conditions and fair wages it is suggested that the Council demand union labels be affixed to any printed matter they use. This clause the local Council laid on the table.

Meetig in June.

Because of the house-cleaning season the next meeting will be held over until June.

STRICKEN IN THE STREET

Completely Restored To Health By "Fruit-a-tives"

382 St. Valier St., Montreal.

"In 1912, I was taken suddenly ill with Acute Stomach Trouble and dropped in the street. I was treated by several physicians for nearly two years, and my weight dropped from 225 pounds to 160 pounds. Then several of my friends advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". I began to improve almost with the first dose, and by using them, I recovered from the distressing Stomach Trouble—and all pain and Constipation were cured. Now I weigh 208 pounds. I cannot praise "Fruit-a-tives" enough". H. WHITMAN.

LITERARY RAMBLES

The Choosing of Books.

So many enquiries have been made at various times as to the manner in which the books for the Peterborough Public Library are selected that a little information on the subject may be found interesting. It will prove a fitting and sufficient answer, at any rate, to those who cavil, small though their number is, at the quality of literature purchased for our library. The books, in the first instance, are in practically every case, picked from amongst those that have been favourably criticized in the best known literary periodicals. A fair proportion, every month, are selected from the different branches of literature and these are gone over as carefully as possible by the members of the Library committee, who go to a considerable amount of trouble to ensure a good selection. This, in short, is the way in which the Public Library books are chosen, and, if in the face of this statement, carpers are to be found to say they are not satisfied, then all that can be said is that in no library of any standing for efficiency will they be better able to find books suited to their tastes. Every librarian is confronted, day after day, with extraordinary requests. Some desire literature dealing with the most sordid and unlovely traits in human nature; others again, delight in the morbid element and others in controversial questions, concerning which, if the demand were acceded to, ammunition would be provided for the most acrid and dangerous arguments. In our own library great care has been taken to fight shy of all such books as far as it has been possible to do so. To provide clean literature has been the main consideration of the Board, and the difficulty has always been to select books in which cleanness was allied, with strength. Some people, sentimentally inclined, want books with lots of LOVE in them, not the variety that also goes by the name of Christian Charity, but the other sort that deals with artless souls wandering by laughing brooks, hand clasped in hand, etc. In so far as this taste could be satisfied, it has been satisfied, in a modified form. No complaint has ever been made, in regard to any other branch but fiction, and this is really the one in which the greatest care has been exercised. The chief complaint and this, only from a few, has been that there is a lack of the "human element," in our library fiction. Well, if by the "human element" is meant such books as the French term "risque" or venturesome, the public may rest assured that they will never, knowingly, be placed on the shelves. The few that have unwittingly been purchased at odd times have been quickly disposed of when attention has been drawn to their true nature. Another great difficulty that besets every Library Board is in the choosing of books dealing with religion. These are bought sparingly, although the branch to which they belong, might be considered the most important of any. The only books bought in this section are such as are commonly regarded as by master hands, and no preference is given to one church over another.

Children's books present another difficulty. For years there has been a strong call from young people for the Alger books, but no attention has been paid to this as it has been felt that there were other books, just as interesting and breathing a more virile spirit, that would be preferable for the growing youth of Peterborough.

Many valuable books have been acquired by the Public Library since it was opened in February, 1911. During that period some 8,000 volumes have been obtained by presentation or by purchase and some 3,000 have been struck off the lists. If all these had been erased owing to natural causes there would be no cause for worry, but, unfortunately, in more cases than one would care to enumerate, books have been either wilfully stolen, or damaged beyond repair. Of course, these vandalisms occur in every library, but it is small satisfaction to us that they do and convey very little joy to our souls, to feel that we are, after all, no whit worse off than other people. The evil is one that seems hard to eradicate owing to the miserable cunning that is practised by those who indulge in it. It is hard to feel charitable when one opens a volume and finds some of the most interesting and valuable illustrations cut from the letter press or whole pages torn bodily from a book, or original comments scribbled on the margins of the pages. It is the meanest kind of criminality and one for which no mercy would be shown if the culprits were discovered. At the present time the library is minus two books that have been taken from the Reference Room. One is a copy of Comstock's Nature Study and the other, the Colour Key to North American Birds, by Chapman. Any information that will lead to the discovery or return of these volumes will be appreciated by the library authorities.

LANGEMARCK 1915

In memory of all the Peterborough boys who fell in the battles of Ypres and Langemarck:

Young as the youngest in khaki clad,
True as the truest who wear it,
Brave as the bravest they marched away
Hot tears on the cheeks o ftheir mothers lay),
Triumphant waved our flag that day—
They fell at the front before it.

Firm as the firmest, where duty led,
They hurried without a falter;
Bold as the boldest, they fought and bled,
And the day was won—but the field was red,
For the blood of their fresh young hearts was shed
On their country's hallowed altar.

On the trampled brest of the battle plain
Where the foremost ranks had wrestled,
On their pale, pure faces not a mark of pain
(Their mothers dreamed they would meet again).
The fairest forms 'mid all the slain,
Like a child asleep they nestled.

In the solemn shades of Langemarck woods
Or the fields where their comrades found them,
They buried them there, and the big tears crept
Into strong men's eyes that had seldom wept,
(There mothers—God pity them—smiled and slept, Dreaming their arms were round them.)

A grave in the woods with the grass o'ergrown
A grave in the hearts of their mothers—
Their clay in the one lies lifeless and lone,
There is not a name, there is not a stone,
And only the voice of the wind will moan
O'er those graves where never a flower is strewn,
But their memory will live forever.

Peterborough, April 20th, 1917.

It is when the sun has gone down that the home influences become actual and potent. In opening the tender buds of young characters, the light from the hearthstone is far more efficient than the sunlight. The distinctive characteristics of the home life are manifested most strongly when the labors of the day are ended, and the family gather around the fireside for the evening. One hour of evening homelife is worth a month of the ordinary daily experience.

Suffered With Heart For Ten Years

Would Nearly Smother

There is nothing that brings with it such fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The uncertain and irregular heart action causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, so that it beats strong and regular, and tone up the nervous system so that the cause of so much anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. M. O. McCready, Wapella, Sask., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I feel that it is only right for me to let you know what your wonderful remedy has done for me, and in a very short time, too. I had suffered terribly with my heart for nearly ten years, could scarcely do any work, and would nearly smother at times. I had many remedies, some only relieving me for a time. I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and felt so much better that I kept on using them, and can truthfully say I feel like a new woman.

"I would advise anyone with heart trouble to use them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

Dr. George Anderson of the Royal Canadian Naval Institutes will address a special meeting at the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday afternoon, at 4.15 o'clock. Subject, "Social Service Among Sailors." Every man is cordially invited to attend this service.

The ladies of the Mothers' Club are preparing an entertainment to be given in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium on the evening of May 11th, the purpose being to secure funds with which was given to the Y.M.C.A. which to purchase yarn for socks for soldiers. The auto knitting machine by our late Honorary President, Mr. J. W. Bennett, has been in constant use during the past two months. Any organization or individual may have the free use of this machine by applying at the Y. M. C. A. office.

The Y.M.C.A. would like to correct the statement that was made in the local press during the past week to the effect that no flags had been displayed in Peterborough in recognition of the recent victories participater in by our Canadian soldiers. Within two hours after the news of the first victory reached Peterborough, about twelve days ago, the Y.M.C.A. flag was unfurled, and kept to the top of the mast for three days. It is now up, to commemorate Ypres.

All Junior boys of the Y.M.C.A. who have back-yard gardens are requested to meet at the Y.M.C.A. Monday night at 7.30, for the purpose of organizing a Boys' Garden Club. The boys will elect their own officers and prizes will be given to the boys who bring in the largest number of members for the Club. It is the intention of the officers of the Y.M.C.A. to give cash prizes for the best kept back-yard garden, so it will pay the boys to get busy and join the Club.

The Farm Production work, in which the Y.M.C.A. is giving the best part of its organization at the present time, is meeeting with great success. This week, Boys' Secretary Galley, in the interest of the Ontario Government visited Norwood, Campbellford, Stirling and Omemee, in which place he addressed the High School boys and girls on the needs of increased production and giving facts to show that several countries in the old world are now on the verge of starvation and must look to Canada and the United States for their food supplies. The Y.M.C.A. while affiliated with five production movements, feels that the main need is to line up the city men and boys to aid the farmers this season. While the Y.M.C.A. effort is not limited to its membership, still it hopes to make an every-member canvass to ascertain how many of it own members are to participate in garden or farm work this year. An invitation is given to every person who expects to work land this year to register at the Y.M.C.A., that a record of our emergency agricultural workers may be submitted to our Government.

IT RESTS WITH YOU!

Hungry, a prey to nerves, but frightful yet,
Hun keeps a keen and eager eye on you,
And having hurled abroad his latest threat,
He wonders greatly what you mean to do.
He knows his hour of fate is drawing nigh,
Will he have strength to weather out the gale?
Will Britain let her splendid chance go by
And will the stream of her resources fail?

It rests with you! Your country's call is clear,
By all the blood and treasure she has spent,
By all the things that British hearts hold dear,
By every foully murdered innocent,
She bids you bring your offerings to her feet,
Which she in queenly fashion shall repay,
That she may make her armored might complete
Against the great and all-deciding day.
Great is the need, although your task be small
Compared with that of soldiers in the field.
Shall it be said that while these gave their all
Your little hoard was selfishly concealed?
Your foemen watch you hoping to the last
That you will grudge your Motherland her due
And rob her of her triumph at the last.
What shall your answer be? It rests with you!

Directory First!

WHEN you call a telephone number from memory or when you guess at it you are apt to be wrong.

¶ The mind has a trick of transposing figures—instead of "1263" you are quite likely to say "1623."

¶ Also, telephone numbers, firm names, etc., are frequently changed.

¶ And when you thus ask for the wrong number, you waste your own time, the operator's, and the time of the person called through your error.

¶ Directory first is a good principle. In the end it saves time and temper to first consult the latest issue of the telephone book.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Sparkling and vivacious—merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside-bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "run-downs," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimetary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaitation. We must remember that inthan outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

British Attack On Wide Front Along Scarpe River

General Haig Striking Out With Powerful Forces Towards Douai---Guenaphe and Gourelle Fall into British Hands With Great Quantity of Booty and 1000 Prisoners---General Maude Scores Another Success in Mesopotamia.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, April 23.—Over a wide front on both sides of the River Scarpe, Field Marshal Haig early to-day resumed the British drive with a tremendously forceful attack. "We attacked at dawn this morning on both banks of the Scarpe and made satisfactory progress," he reported. "South of the Bapaume-Cambrai Road we captured the remainder of the Village of Trescault and at the right gained the greater part of the Havrincourt Wood. The Scarpe attack was over a wide front."

London hailed Haig's report as the beginning of the resumption of the British general offensive. While there has been no abatement in the pressure around Lens and on the Cambrai-St. Quentin line during the past week, nevertheless it was felt here that the Franco-British strategical plans contemplated alternate smashes in force between the Haig and Nivelle armies. The thrust along the Scarpe was regarded as a new development in the Allied offensive. Haig is now reaching out with powerful forces toward Douai. To-day's statement did not definitely locate exactly where Haig's blow on both banks of the Scarpe was delivered, but it was probably near Fampoux. Fampoux is about eight miles southwest of Douai. A drive in this direction is not only a menace at Douai, but it is part of the general enveloping scheme around Lens. Further indications that Hang's forces on all the British front are starting in motion in the concerted offensive was seen in the official report of gains on the Bapaume-Cambrai Road. Havrincourt Wood is now practically surrounded by British forces. Trescault itself is a bare eight miles' distant from Cambrai, the pivotal point in the "Hindenburg line."

Unofficial headquarters reports declared the towns of Guemappe and Gavrelle had fallen into British hands. A vast quantity of booty is being captured all along the front, also over one thousand prisoners to-day. Guemappe is located on the main road from Arras to Cambrai, about five miles' distant from Arras. It lies directly to the south of Monchy. Gavrelle is on the main highway from Arras to Douai—about equal distant between the two cities. The newly captured town is only eight miles from Douai.

COPENHAGEN, April 23.—Berlin is thronged with Turkish troops en route to the western front, and stirred by peace talk, according to information from the German capital reaching here to-day.

Big Events Are Expected in The West

(By Henry Wood.)

PARIS, April 23.—Germany has just gone through the most disastrous week for her in the history of the war. The French Army staff says that the coming seven days are likely to unfold more clearly the nature of the Franco-British offensive. The fighting which is now in progress is of tremendously vital importance. Since Monday a week ago, when the great French offensive began, General Nivelle's forces have accomplished the capture of more than 100 guns from the Germans, the taking of 20,000 German prisoners, the ocupation of twenty large villages, and the retaking of about fifty square miles of French territory, and have inflicted losses in killed, wounded and missing on the Germans conservatively estimated at 100,000. Two great battles were raging to-day. One is along the Chemin Des Dames (The Ladies' Road), dominating Laon and the Plateau; the other around Moronvillers Heights, dominating the northern Champagne plains.

The fighting which was in progress to-day supercedes in importance any actions on the entire western front. At any moment newer and more important situations may be created.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—A member of the British War Commission to-day said twenty German submarines and their crews were captured by the British April 10, the day before the party sailed.

They had been searching for a destroyer base which had been destroyed by British. The crews were quite subdued and gladly surrendered.

"England is getting a lot more submarines than you people in America have any idea of," said this officer.

LONDON, April 23.—British forces north of Bagdad have achieved another brilliant victory over the Turks, an official statement announced to-day. "On Saturday night the enemy evacuated the remainder of its Istabulat position which we stormed and consolidated on Saturday," the statement said.

On Sunday at daybreak we pursued the Turks from Istabulat, capturing prisoners and one 5.9 howitzer, the statement continued. The enemy was found occupying a position to the right of the Tigris, six miles nearer Samara, which is being attacked. Istabulat is sixty miles northwest of Bagdad on the Bagdad Railway and the Tigris River. The Turks are under attack from the British at a point only four miles from Samara.

WILLIAM SHAKSPERE

Born April 23, 1564 (St. George's Day) — Died, as to the body, April 23, 1616

"Shakspere is the most modern writer in our language. It would seem that in one fruitful moment the genius of England gave birth to a poet, who interpreted his country to itself and to the world, once and for all time; his thought and language being the everlasting mind and utterance of his race at its highest."

PTE. PETER HAMMOND, member of the 93rd Battalion, who is officially reported wounded.

MONAGHAN MAN PURCHASES FIRST MOTOR TRACTOR

Wm. McIlroy Will Begin Operations To-morrow on His Farm Near Hales Bridge—First to be Used In This County

WAS BOUGHT HERE

Mr. Wm. McIlroy, of Monaghan has purchased the first farm motor tractor reported in this country and will begin plowing and cultivating operations to-morrow morning. His farm is located near Hales's bridge on the west side of the river and is sometimes known as the Hugh Waddell farm. This tractor was brought to Peterborough by the International Harvester Co., from whom M. G. A. Gillespie expected to secure it for the general use of farmers in this district. But Mr. McIlroy picked it off for himself, and begins a new agricultural epoch to-morrow morning, the motorization of farm work in this county.

Some Different From Peterboro

Sad Lack of Flags Marked Anniversary of Ypres Here

The Kingston Standard says The 24th of May or the 3rd of June never saw Princess street more gorgeously decked with the red, white and blue than it is to-day, ready for the anniversary of the battle of Langemarck, where so many Kingstonians fought and died for love of Empire. The Union Jack and the Canadian ensign float from nearly every window and here and there appears the flag of the United States, the great republic which has taken its stand beside the allies, since that memorable date.

GOVERNMENT IS SENDING A MOTOR TRACTOR AT ONCE

A motor tractor with mechanician is being favoured at once by the Ontario Department of Agriculture to Peterborough. Mr. Gillespie this morning got in touch with Mr. Bailey the assistant deputy minister who stated that he would immediately attend to the shipping of a tractor to Peterborough. It will be placed at the disposal of the farmers who will receive its use without any cost other than the wages of the driver and the cost of the gasoline used. It is expected to be here in a few days and will be put to work on neighboring farms.

SIG. MAX BRECKENRIDGE

Signaller Max Breckenridge, who enlisted here early in 1915 with the 57th quota to the 39th Battalion, is officially reported killed in action, the sad message having been received on Saturday. Signaller Breckenridge, before enlisting, had been employed at McDermid and Jury's drug store, and was very popular in the city. He was a member of St. Paul's Church and had a host of friends who will be grieved to hear of his death. His relatives live at Westwood. Signaller Breckenridge was a graduate of the Norwood High School and while in attendance there was an enthusiastic member of the Cadet Corps, showing a remarkable proficiency in signalling. Naturally, when he determined to enlist for overseas service, he elected to carry on the work in which he had training and became a member of the Signal Corps of the 39th. Add Breckenridge casualty.

The young soldier was one of two sons of Matthew Breckenridge of Westwood who were on active service, his brother being at the present time in an hospital in England, after having both his legs broken.

Max Breckenridge was a splendid young Canadian of sterling character, and the sympathy of the entire community will go out to his father and the other members of his family, including his grandfather, John Breckenridge, Esquire, the veteran Justice of the Peace at Westwood.

PTE. B. WETHERUP.

Mrs. A. Jones, Rutherford avenue, has received word that her youngest brother, Pte. B. Wetherup, was severely wounded in the leg on April 12th. Pte. Wetherup enlisted with the 109th Lindsay Battalion, and went overseas with that unit, afterwards being transferred to the 38th Battalion at the front. He had been in the trenches only two days when wounded.

PTE PETER HAMMOND.

Pte. Peter Hammond, who enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion and went overseas with Lt.-Col. Johnston's unit, afterwards being transferred to another Canadian battalion in France, is officially reported wounded, his name appearing in the list given out at Ottawa on Saturday. Pte. Hammond had been employed on a farm before enlisting, and had also lived for some time in Millbrook and in Peterborough. He has no relatives living.

PTE. J. TUTTON.

Pte. Jack Tutton, a well known Port Hope boy, who came to Peterborough in the autumn of 1915 and joined the 93rd Battalion, becoming a member of the machine gun section, is reported wounded. Pte. Tutton was for a number of years connected with the Port Hope hockey club and is very well known here.

PTE. W. J. DARBOURNE.

Pte. W. J. Darbourne, a Peterborough member of the 93rd Battalion, who enlisted here in the autumn of 1915 with Col. Johnston's unit and was a member of B company, is officially reported died of wounds, his name appearing in to-day's casualty lists. Pte. Darbourne was popular in the battalion, and the news of his death will be received with much regret.

PTE. V. R. JACKSON.

Pte. V. R. Jackson, who enlisted with the 93rd Battalion, in the winter of 1915-16, is officially reported wounded to-day. Pte. Jackson's relatives live in England.

PTE. H. J. DORSET.

To-days' official casualty lists contain the name of another Peterborough member of the 93rd Battalion reported wounded in the person of Pte. H. J. Dorset.

HAVELOCK BOYS WOUNDED.

Two Havelock members of the 93rd Battalion, Lance Corp. H. T. Matheson and Pte. F. S. Davidson, both of whom are well known in the railway town, are in to-day's casualty lists as wounded.

EDWARD HALL WOUNDED.

Sheriff Hall received word yesterday that his son, Edward, who enlisted in Regina at the outbreak of the war, has been wounded. This is the second time he has been in the casualty list.

CORP. R. L. BUTCHER.

Mrs. R. L. Butcher, 486 Bonacord street, received an official message to-day from Ottawa informing her that her husband, Corp. R. L. Butcher, Canadian Mounted Rifles has been admitted to Queen Mary's Military Hospital, Whalley, on April 19th, seriously ill. No particulars have been received. This is the second time Corp. Butcher has been in the casualty lists. He is the son of Mr. R. H. Butcher.

LANCE CORP. HARDWICKE.

Mrs. J. T. Hardwicke, 489 Cross street, has received a message from Ottawa stating that her son, Lance-Corp. Chas. Hardwicke, of the Signal Corps, 21st Canadian Battalion, is reported admitted to No. 32 Stationary Hospital, Wimereux, on April 16th, with gun shot wounds in the shoulder and back. Lance Corp. Hardwicke, who was employed in the C.P.R. telegraph office before joining the colours, enlisted here in September, 1914, with the 21st Battalion.

Pte. P. Bertrand.

The wife and parents of Pte. Percy Bertrand, 631 Union Street, have received official word to the effect that he had received a gunshot wound in the right shoulder. Pte. Bertrand was a member of the 93rd Battalion, and subsequently transferred to the 18th Battalion.

CORP. JOHN JORDAN.

Among the list of casualties referred to in Saturday's issue was the name of Pte. James Jordan. This should have been Corporal John Jordan of the 21st Battalion. The latter whose mother resides at 629 Union street, was wounded on April 14th. Pte. James Jordan, father of Corporal John Jordan, is a member of the 51st Battalion, having been transferred from the 80th Battalion.

Rev. Douglas Dixon, chaplain with the overseas forces, is reported dead at the front. He is a brother-in-law of Mr. James Buck, Hastings Road, near Norwood.

EMPIRE THEATRE WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON IN AID OF ST. PETER'S PATRIOTIC CLUB.

Dr. F. L. Robinson has generously placed the Empire Theatre at the disposal of St. Peter's Patriotic Club on Wednesday afternoon, April 25th. The proceeds will be used to purchase comforts for the soldiers. This is a little opportunity to help a great cause. 4d-92-2896

Forty per cent. are unconscious of visual defects. This means that in every hundred, forty people who are not wearing glasses do not know they need them. You may be one of the forty. An examination by Dr. Lacey will remove that doubt. Do not cripple your eyes.—410 George St.

TAG DAY CAMPAIGN REALIZED $1536 TOTAL

SIGNALLER MAX BRECKENRIDGE, who left Peterborough with the 39th Battalion in March, 1915, and is officially reported killed in action.

War Veteran's Delighted With Success of Their Drive Saturday—Corps of Women Workers Added Materially in the Result.

A LIST OF THE BOXES

As prophesied, the tag day of the Great War Veterans on Saturday broke all records for a similar event in Peterborough, the total, including Friday's collections in the schools, amounting to $1,536. The War Veterans are delighted with the result and the interest shown in their welfare.

Although the weather conditions were not of the best, the big squad of workers, comprising the veterans themselves, the members of the Daughters of the Empire and the scores of other women and girls who assisted did great work and the fruit of their efforts can be seen in the splendid total received. The campaign was kept up in the evening, the Veterans themselves looking after the final drive, which was quite successful.

Box 68—$24.75
Box 60—$25.27
Box 63—$34.64

A STATEMENT FROM THE GROCERS CONCERNING BREAD

The Expected Happens This Morning—Grocers Refuse to Handle Bread on the Present Margin of Profit

REFUSED 150 LOAVES

Bread is up two cents a large loaf this morning and a little war has been precipitated between the bakers and the grocers which so far has resulted in a number of grocers refusing to handle bread unless a larger margin of profit is forthcoming. One grocer who this morning refused one hundred and fifty loaves, claims that the bakers have raised the price of bread from eight cents a large loaf to sixteen cents a large loaf without giving the grocers any consideration in the way of increased profit. To-day the grocer is compelled to pay cash to the baker and sell on credit to the consumer and in many instances deliver it on a margin of eleven per cent., which is not the cost of doing business. Considering the quantity of paper required to wrap a large loaf of bread and the prevailing cost of paper, the increase in the cost of twine and the facilities required to properly keep bread in a store, the margin of profit is out of all proportion, said the grocer referred to. Bread handled by the grocers at sixteen cents a large loaf and sold to the consumer at eighteen cents must be handled at a loss. The result is that the grocers have refused to handle bread. A few of the grocers may be handling the bread to-day, but the above mentioned authority states that there will be no bread sold in the grocery stores by to-morrow.

The price of bread to the consumer is eighteen cents, which is an increase of two cents since Saturday. This is due to the increase in the price of flour. This price has been charged in a number of Ontario towns and cities for over a week. No relief is in sight until the present price of wheat comes down.

THIS IS ENGLAND'S DAY

There is no land like England
Where'er the light of day be;
There are no hearts like English hearts,
Such hearts of oak as they be.
There is no land like England
Where'er the light of day be;
There are no men like Englishmen,
So tall and bold as they be.

There is no land like England

MONDAY, MARCH 23, 1917

ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

St. George's Day never dawned upon a more dismal or more glorious England than in this year of grace, 1917. Never before in her thousand years of history has England been so stinted in basket and in store, never before was the cupboard so bare, or rigid table frugality so imperative as to-day. And never before in her history was Britain more gallantly and strongly battling to kill the dragon of remorseless and potent and malignant militarism. Never before was England battling more bravely for the precious heritage of liberty she has passed on to the world. England, the cradle of constitutional freedom, parliamentary government, self government, applied democracy, is fighting as nation never fought that mankind might be free, and free institutions be assured to the smaller nations of the world. Her navy, matchless in might, has been, and still is, the bulwark of the world against the forces of oppression, and her armies represent the last thing in universal national employment of resources, in material, skill, manhood, womanhood, statesmanship and concentrated devotion to the omnipotent traditional watchword of England, "duty."

In all her days of pride and triumph and accomplishment, even when bending, but thank Heaven, not breaking, under the weight of the mightiest responsibility she has ever borne — confronted with the hardest task, and in her most critical national hour, England was never more worthy of the love and reverence of her sons at home and abroad than she is to-day.

PATRIOTIC PRINTERS.

Printers are naturally associated most intimately with the facts and interests of the great war. It is a truism to say that through them we learn of its origin, its movements, and the good news of its advancing fortunes—on the side of the Allies. But printers are not content with this mechanical or semi-official relation of the war. They have played the part of true patriots and shown the highest devotion to duty a man can show by enlisting in the ranks.

The printers fraternity does not bear a very numerous relation to the population of the country; nor are there, proportionately, any more eligibles in it than in any other calling. But it seems clear that if every other element of our people had done their duty as fully as the Union printers of Canada, we should have had our full 500,000 of promised Canadian soldiers under arms long ago.

It is on record that nearly six hundred Canadian union printers have enlisted for service, and, like good printers, they have not been looking for "fat takes," but have so manfully stood up to their work that twenty-seven union printers have laid down their lives in proof of their devotion to duty; and mortuary benefits to the amount of $7,675 —an average of $286—have been paid to the wives and families of Canadian members of the International Typographical Union, who have laid down their lives for King and cause and country; and twenty-seven crosses have been placed to mark their honoured graves—"somewhere in France". And the Examiner reverently hangs upon the crosses the laurel wreath of recognition and gratitude, in tribute to the memory of the twenty-seven members of the Typographical Union who have sacrificed their lives, and to the call of patriotic duty have been "faithful unto death."

JUST THINK OF IT.

Twenty tons of "waste" paper of a commercial value of between $275 and $300, collected last Thursday by the Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham in the interests of Red Cross work, and for providing comforts for fighting Canadian soldiers.

The ladies, for of course ladies are the moving spirit, if not "the whole works," of the League, deserve credit for initiating the idea of converting otherwise waste materials to merciful and beneficial service. Tons of newspapers, after they had done service in the reading of their appeals to patriotic purposes, have come back to do new service.

The success of this collection, and its object, is literally an object lesson in saving and thrift. The rescue of waste paper from waste, is not the only thing upon which saving can be effected. In all the processes of house keeping from the larder to the attic, the same thought and care that preserved old papers, applied to other things, would yield equally tangible results. If the appeal and material outcome of the idea and enterprise of the Ladies' Patriotic League were applied to all the details of domestic life and personal employment of means, we should be an infinitely better people, would have more comfort, more ease in making ends meet, more peace of mind, greater consciousness of duty done in making wise use of the means intrusted to us. If the lessons of waste paper profits were taken to heart, and generally applied, the waste we now are guilty of—the word, "waste," would become an anagram for wealth, not in bulk, perhaps, but in essence.

When we note the waste that results from perhaps the average household processes — food extravagantly purchased, wastefully prepared and wastefully thrown out, with, perhaps, its food value unrealized; when we see in articles of dress and household fabrics the waste that comes from the failure of proper care and taking a stitch in time; when we see the wicked waste of governments—civic, provincial and federal, we feel justified in generalizing to the conclusion that in all these things as much money or money's worth, is wasted as is economically, that is, profitably, used.

And we need to take home the lesson. Most of us work by the day; most of us live by the day, and for the day alone. For most of us, in the use of means and the proper employment of money, there is no to-morrow. We win easily and spend merrily; forgetting that in the working of the inexorable law of compensation and consequences, the proverb comes true—"Wilful waste makes woeful want." We shall not always have such "easy money" as comes these days to thousands of wage earners. The sun of prosperity shines brightly, but shine it never so gayly the "rainy day" is sure to come. Failure to provide for the "rainy day," lavish expenditure of money in frivolous pleasure, intemperately pursued—with no thought of the morrow, in thousands of cases makes pleasure and pauperism an inevitable sequence. Waste, or unwise use—virtually the same thing—always brings penalty in some form or other. Avoiding waste, or utilizing the waste we wilfully create, points the way to wealth, or if not wealth, to comfortable living, comfortable circumstances.

ODDFELLOWS' ANNIVERSARY

Members of Two Peterboro Lodges Parade to All Saints' Church

On Sunday evening All Saints' church was crowded to capacity, the occasion being the annual church parade of the Independent Order of Oddfellows. The Peterborough and Otonabee Lodges were well represented, also a number of outside lodges. Flowers were placed in the chancel of the church by the Society in memory of the late Brother Cooney.

In a cordial welcome to the visiting brethren the Rev. R. B. Grobb characterized the Society as "a great humanizing organization created for the propagation of the true principles of Christianity." He referred to the origin of the Order in America some ninety-eight years ago in the city of Baltimore, when five members constituted the nucleus of the Society.

"Fear God."

Rev. Mr. Grobb took for his text the message contained in the first epistle of Peter, second chapter, seventeenth verse, "Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the King."

"The exhortation," said the speaker, "is an appropriate one in the strenuous days through which we are passing. The true principles of Christianity cannot be realized unless we carry out the injunction contained in the text. It is upon this foundation that the present world-wide democracy is being established. This is a day of wonderful achievements. We learn of the establishment of democracy in Russia and the release of thousands of prisoners from Siberia. It is the dawn of a new day. In Germany we learn of the unrest and the proposal to grant a greater degree of democracy there than the people ever knew before. Germany's break with the world was the result of a religious shipwreck. The theologians in Germany have taken leaves out of the Bible and in some cases have attempted to create the impression that the existence of Christ was only a myth. A country with such an element within its borders could not but incur anything but the wrat of God.

Feeling Reference in St. Paul's Church To Two Dead Heroes

At St. Paul's Church yesterday morning the Pastor, Rev. Robert Pogue, referred to the death of two members of the congregation, who had been killed on the battlefield in the recent big offensive. He said:

"The shadow of a great sorrow lies over this congregation to-day. Word was received just yesterday that two our brightest young men were killed at the now celebrated battle of Vimy ridge, which began on Easter Sunday and continued through the days following. I refer to Captain Harold Hill, who fell on the 9th, and Max Breckenridge, who was killed on the 10th of April.

Harold Hill was known to most of you. He was born in the city and grew up in our midst, and was identified with this congregation all his life, first as a Sunday School scholar, and then as a communicant member of the Church. To know Harold was to love him. Hence, I venture to say he was the most widely known and beloved of the young men of our city. He was a young man of the highest ideals, and one to whom the junior boys loved to look up, and whom they admired. He distinguished himself all through his high school career and college, not only in the field of athletics, but in his studies. He had intellectual gifts of a high order. One evidence of this is the fact that he took his second year in Arts and stood high in his examinations at a time when he was in training for overseas service. When he enlisted it was as a private. Any honours that might come to him he wished to come by merit on the field of battle. He rose from the ranks of private to that of Captain, and was even acting Adjutant previous to the battle in which he lost his life. He was in high favour with his commanding officer, just because of his fine, manly qualities of head and heart. His moral qualities were as high as his mental ones; his moral development as perfect as his physical. He was the soul of truth and honour.

He united with St. Paul's Church since I became its minister. When he took his stand for Christ it was with a clear knowledge of what Christian discipleship meant. His life was always such as to commend the religion which he professed. I believe the high conception of the meaning of life which he held, his wonderful attainments, his popularity with all who knew him, his stainless record, and then the free and glad surrender of his life in a cause which he believed to be righteous, were all made possible because of the influence upon his life and heart of that religion which had been taught him, in a Christian home, and then in the Church of which he was a member. We have no doubt in our minds to-day concerning his welfare. Such lives go at once to he with the King. He has already received the "well done" of the Master. He may not complete with us in his university training. He has entered a better school than the schools of earth, where he will continue his education in the higher spheres and in the broader spaces, and under the Master's own tuition. We do not sorrow to-day as those who have no hope. Nor indeed do we sorrow for him. It is well with Harold Hill. He is now a felicity of which the world knows nothing. Our sorrow is for his dear parents, and for his sisters. Life can never be the same to them again. But even they must not think themselves poor and as losers only. Only those are poor who have lost nothing, and who have made no sacrifice that truth and righteousness might be vindicated in the earth. Blessed indeed are those who have parted willingly with their nearest and dearest for a cause which they believed to be sacred. Verily I say unto you, they have their reward.

Not so many of you knew Max Breckenridge. Much that I have said of Harold Hill I could say of Max. He was active in our Church work as an usher, as a member of the Young Peoples Guild and as a member of the Young Men's Bible Class. His smile when you went into Mr. McDermid's store, in which he was a drug clerk, was as good as a tonic as anything he had for sale. I was hoping that God might yet direct him into the ministry. He had to an unusual degree, the gift of choice, effective speech. On two occasions he figured in our debates, when he surprised us all by his mental as well as his oratorical abilities.

It is hard to think that so many of our splendid young men will come home no more, and that our victory over German militarism must be bought at such tremendous cost. But, as one of our ministers recently said: "No sacrifice shall be finally without its reward. The full results of our sowing it will take the nations years to reap. "But already a new heaven has been won for us. We had our mediaeval conceptions of a place where men and women of maturity and over-seriousness found endless scope for contemplation. But heaven has become the rendezvous of the youth of all lands. They suddenly emerged out of the heat and stress of warfare into the joy and freedom of the heavenly land.

"Heaven's thronged with gay and careless faces,
New waked from dreams of dreadful things;
They walk by green and pleasant places,
And by the crystal water springs,
Forget the nightmare field of slain,
And the fierce thirst and the strong pain.

Oh, if the sonless mothers weeping,
The widowed girls, could look inside,
The country that hath them in keeping,
Who went to the Great War and died,
They would rise and put their mourning off,
And say: "Thank God, he has enough."

Raisins are delicious added to cereals such as rice or whole wheat.

A little salt added to a glass of milk is said to make it easier of digestion.

Lists of Properties and Lots in the City, and Adjoining, Which May be Used to Further Greater Production.

If you are interested Carefully Consider What is Offered And What May be Arranged for With Owners of Lots

Following are lists of lots available for use, including those of which consent of owners has been obtained, and a second list of lots quite suitable but for which those desiring to make use of will have to see and arrange with owner.

The name and address of the owner is given. As near as may be the positions of lots has been defined in a general way so that the location may be recognized. Formal entry on plans, as registered, does not afford the necessary information, short of consulting the plan. In case of doubt as to exact location the City Assessor, Mr. Henry will no doubt be glad to assist in affording further information.

For all lots which have been given over for use by the owners, any selection from these will have to be made by notification to the secretary, Mr. Dobbin, at the Patriotic Fund Office, City Buildings. This rule is imperative, otherwise confusion is sure to result. If you find a lot, in the first list, one which you would wish to use, telephone and afterwards write and secure it. Act promptly. Even now two and three requests are in for lots deemed especially convenient and workable.

Having secured one of these parcels, as a matter of courtesy, the owner should be communicated with to see if he has anything in regard to care of property, etc., or things which he would wish to be respected. Seeing the owner is not absolutely necessary, but advisable, if only to thank him for the use of the place.

Conditions with regard to selection and use of property the consent to use, of which, has not been obtained by the committee will be found preceding the lists of such lots. Be sure and do not confuse the proceedings in regard to the two propositions.

LOTS OF WHICH CONSENT TO USE HAS BEEN OBTAINED BY THE COMMITTEE.

For purposes of identification the parcels, or lots, have been numbered. As far as possible the information will be put in this order:—No. of parcel; owner's name and street number; street and number of lot (so far as possible) or failing this the lot and plan number. Where dimensions of lots have been supplied such are printed.

1.—Milton W. Brown, Vancouver. Lot 1, plan 22, Dufferin street, just across from street numbers 59 and 60.

2.—W. H. Bradburn, Lots 89 and 94, each 38 feet front. South side of Prince street, couple of hundred feet east of George street. Asked for by Geo. Rayner.

3.—E. A. Peck. Several parcels. Particulars from Mr. Peck, at office, Water street.

4.—Thomas Hooper, 327 George street. Two lots on Maitland Avenue. Also ask Mr. Hooper about lots 20 and 21, Lansdowne street, the second and third lots on Lansdowne street, east of Park.

5.—J. T. O'Connell, 136 Hunter. Several lots. Mr. O'Connell will supply particulars to those enquiring.

6.—Frank Bowness, 299 Boswell Avenue. Lot 16, plan 120, on Lansdowne street. About 320 feet, west of Aylmer street. Also Lot 13, same street.

7.—S. Windsor, Apsley, Ont. Lot 44, plan 138, 48 x 110 feet. Mr. Windsor does not give the street and No., but such can be learned from the assessor, Mr. Henry, City Buildings.

8.—John E. Firth, 1 o Dalhousie street. Lot 38 and E., part of lot 37, plan 120. Corner of Aylmer and Prince streets, south side.

9.—Mrs. Mary Elstone, corner Monaghan Road and Walkerfield Avenue. Lots 4, 5 and 6, plan 120, 40 ft. frontage, each. These lots are on corner of Aylmer and Lansdowne streets, N. E. corner.

10.—Hugh Cruickshanks, 251 Prince street. Lot 14, plan 120, Lansdowne street, about 320 feet west of Aylmer street.

11.—Thomas R. Kennedy, 32 McDonnel street. Lot 51 and 52, plan 120, Lots on north west corner of Aylmer and Prince streets.

12.—Geo. A. Gillespie, 375 Aylmer. Lot 57, plan 120. The seventh lot west of Aylmer and on north side of Prince street.

13.—B. D. Hall, 116 Hunter street. Seven lots, Nos. 21 to 27, plan 62. each 50 ft. frontage, on Gladstone Avenue, west of G.T.R. track and on south side of Gladstone Avenue.

14.—Warren Hall, 667 Water. Lots 8 to 12, plan 99, corner of Hart and Patterson streets.

15.—D. W. Dumble, 435 George street. Five acres, south of Dumble Avenue and west of old Chemong railroad roadbed, and west of Argyle St. Two pieces of this property have been asked for, one-half each, Plenty as yet to spare. See Mr. Dumble as to requirements.

16.—W. Harper, Lakefield. Seven acres, near Crawford's Grove. See Mr. Jos. Gray, Charlotte street, (near Snowden's Hotel) for use of this property.

18.—Robert Northcotte, 666 George street. Lot 91, Edison Avenue. (Outside city).

19.—Geo. W. Lundy, Dickson street. Lots 55 and 56, plan 144, each of 59 ft. front. Lots on Walkerfield property.

20.—Peterborough Lumber Co., (Mr. Linton, at 163 Hunter street). Lot 18, plan 80. On Cedar street, near Monaghan Road.

23.—John Boorman, 296 McDonnel. Lot 45, plan 19A. On Woodbine Ave.

24.—J. J. Devlin, 477 Rogers street. Lot 12, plan 101, Wolsely street (This lot can be used, all but part covered by a small building). Also Lot 76, west side Rogers Street.

25.—H. Rush, 51 Brock street. Lot 3, plan 72. Conger street.

LOTS, PROBABLY AVAILABLE, BUT FOR WHICH CONSENT OF OWNER WILL HAVE TO BE OBTAINED

The following properties, as listed, were selected from the assessment roll as being available, from location and general character of soil, as suitable for cultivation. For one reason and another, the consent of owners has not been obtained. It will not follow that owners would be adverse to use. Only that they have not, as yet, been consulted.

Each one making selection from the list following, need not refer to the secretary. Just go and find the owner and make your own arrangements.

26.—William E. O'Brien, 5 Wolseley street. Lot 41 on Prince street South side; 3rd lot east of Aylmer street.

27.—W. H. Baker, Dublin street. Lots 9 to 12 on Clara Ave. Lots 13 to 16 on Clara Ave. Lots 17 to 24 on Baker street. These are on, or off, north side of Patterson street, and near Monaghan Road.

28.—City Property. Part of park lots 1, 2 and 3, and lot 13, Con. 12, corner of Monaghan Road and Lansdowne street. Apply to the City Engineer, or Chairman of Property Committee, Ald. Saunders.

29.—Alex. Archibald, Brownton. Part of lot 82, plan 30, 30 x 100 ft. Corner of Alfred and Chamberlen streets.

30.—Toronto Loan and Savings Co. Lots 14 to 18, plan 23, east end of Lansdowne street. Apply to Mr. W. G. Morrow, at Company's office, George street.

33.—J. E. B. Paquette, 149 Lake street. Lots 1, 2 and 3, plan 120, 40 ft. frontage, each, on Lansdowne street, 120 ft. east of Aylmer street.

34.—Albert Dorris, 291 Louis street. Lot 36, plan 120, 39 ft. front. On Prince street, 3rd lot west of Aylmer street, on the south side of Prince St.

35.—Thomas Hooper, 327 George street. Lot 24 and 25, 64 to 66, each of 39 ft. frontage. These lots on Prince street, 64, 65 and 66 are on the N. E. corner of Prince street and Park street. 24 and 25 are just across the street.

36.—Michael Fortune, Villiers P.O. Lot 46, plan 120. 40 ft. front. On Prince street. The 5th lot east of Aylmer and on the north side of Prince St.

47.—Mrs. M. D. Roy, Rubidge street. Lot 41, in Walkerfield.

48.—W. H. Gould, 310 Cedar street. Lots 9 to 13, each of 50 ft. front, on Cedar street. Also lots 29 and 30 on Walnut street. Each 50 ft front.

49.—Andrey Noley, Adeline street. Lot 23 on Walnut street.

50.—David Hunter, 406 Mark street. Lots 21 and 22, each 70 feet front, and on Walnut street.

51.—Albert E. Dixon, 397 George street (office). Lot 29, plan 30. Lots 91 to 93, all on Aberdeen Avenue, near the corner of Aberdeen and Manning Avenue.

52—Miss Annie Anderson, Keene. Lots 13 and 14, Wolsely street. Lots 22 and 23, Aberdeen street. These lots near the corner of Aylmer and Aberdeen.

53.—R. C. Braund, 53 Park street. Lot on west side of Reid street, and just south of Smith street.

54.—J. D. Collins, McDonnel street. Eight lots on west side of Elgin St.

56.—Burnham Estate. Several lots in East Ward. In regard to these consult Mr. E. A. Peck.

For the purpose of facilitating the work and movement the following list of men available for engagement to do ploughing is printed here. We are sure the papers will excuse the complimentary advertisement in view of the general help given. In fact the papers do a heap of helping and this is just one more boost. Some day some one at some time and in some way will tell what the papers have done and are doing, but that will keep. Now as to the ploughmen::

F. Turner, 480 Donegal street; R. Frise, 498 Bonaccord street; G. Sexsmith, 508 Romaine street; J. O'Brien, 501 Boliver; B. Revoy, 292 Woodbine Avenue; P. Quinlan, 335 Downie street; F. Moncrief, 62 Lansdowne street; J. T. Ormistone, 826 Water street; W. Millain, 891 Water street; W. Stinson, 576 Harvey street; F. Drake, 567 Bolivar street; J. Healey, 228 Cameron street.

From the number of enquiries already received for addresses of ploughmen, it is certain that a good many are going into the work and movement. A healthy and hopeful sign. Harry Evand has supplied the list of artists at the plough and says they are all good men. If a piece of land requires to be disced, and the plougher has not that tool, it is understood that the Peter Hamilton Co., have agreed to loan such things for public service. That is another helpful thing.

During the last week a number of applications have been made to the office for reservations of lots. These lots have not been entered on the lists as printed. Those who have signified that they want them had better come to the office at once and get the matters fixed up.

If anything has been forgotten just 'phone the Patriotic Fund Office and the secretary will try and supply. There will be a meeting of the committee of the club, presently. As to seed potatoes, the supply is, just now limited, but some help in this direction is being looked for. If successful due notice will be given. There is land enough in the list as above which, if planted, would feed the city next winter. Let each man go to it in the firm resolve that, if for nothing else, that he will never pay again $4.50 per bag for the humble, but now, lucrative potato. We shall see what we shall see.—F.H.D.

Saint George And The Rose

The Rose is The Emblem of England's Patron Saint

By Frank Russell

The Rose (Lat. Rosa), has been the favourite flower throughout all ages, and holds a position in general literature rivalled by no other plant. For it must be remembered that in the great majority of instances the rose of the poets and the rose of the botanist are identical.

The rose is

The Emblematic Flower of England,

just as the shamrock and thistle are the emblems of Ireland and Scotland respectively. It is not intended in this writing to give any botantical thesis on the rose—a flower to be found in all parts of this earth. Nor of the various fetes of the Rosiere in which the essential feature is the crowning with white roses of a maiden who has maintained an unsullied reputation for virtue.

The reason for making a few

Comments on the Rose

at this particular juncture is on account of this day being the Feast of St. George, the patron saint of England and the Empire. The rose is one of the emblems of St. George and it is fitting that all who feel any degree of pride that they or their ancestors come from the little sea girt island should on this day wear the emblem of their country, be it the red rose or the white rose.

The Rose in English History.

The rose entered at one time largely into the history of England. In the fifteenth century were the long and furious civil wars, known as the Wars of the Roses, in which the feudal nobles and great families were occupied much more in the indulgence of personal hatred and in mutual destruction than in the carrying out of any important political principles. These disastrous wars were waged mainly by the houses of Lancaster and York and their powerful adherents. The emblem of the house of Lancaster was the red rose, while the white rose was the cognizance of the house of York; hence the name,

The Wars of the Roses.

The reigning manarch, Henry VI. of the house of Lancaster was a weakling, and his disastrous government provoked the animosities of the feudal nobles. These were fomented by the intrigues of the Duke of York, and thus arose the long and furious civil wars known as the Wars of the Roses, the ultimate conclusion of which was the supremacy for the time, of the house of York, whose Duke was proclaimed king under the title of Edward IV. The dynasty, however, was but short lived, it being driven out soon to give place to the house of Tudor. Thus the fortunes of the red rose prevailed in the long run, the house of Tudor being firmly placed on the throne of England.

To the Lover of English History

the Wars of the Roses provides very interesting and profitable reading. The origin of the expression War of the Roses is thus given by Shakespeare:

Plant. Let him that is a true-born gentleman . . . .
If he supposes that I have pleaded truth,
From off this briar pluck a white rose with me.

Somerset. Let him that is no coward, nor a flatterer,
But dare maintain the party of the truth
Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me."

Whereupon Warwick plucked a white rose and joined the Yorkists, while Suffolk plucked a red one, and joined the Royalist or Lancastrian faction. The above quotation is from Shakespeare's Henry VI., Act. II.

Legendary Lore

The traditions as to the origin of the rose are quaint. Sir John Mandeville tells us that a Jewish maid of Bethlehem (whom Southey names a brutish sot. Zillah rejected his suit, Zillah) was beloved by one Hamuel, and Hamuel in revenge, accused the maiden of offences for which she was condemned to be burned alive. When brought to the stake, the flames burned Hamuel to a cinder, but did no harm to Zillah. There she stood, in a garden of roses, for the brands which had been kindled became red rose, and those which had not caught fire became white roses. These are the first roses that ever bloomed on the earth since the loss of paradise.

According to

the rose is thus accounted for: When Mahomet took his journey to heaven, the sweat which fell from his brow upon the earth produced white roses, while that which fell from Al Borak (the animal he rode) produced yellow ones.

Christian Tradition.

Another Legend

is that when the Flood ceased, Love threw to earth a flower to show Noah that the righteous wrath of God had passed away. That flower took root and became a rose, and ever since then the rose has been made

The Emblem of Enduring Love.

The waters ceased, and Love threw down a flower
To show the wrath had passed of God above,
The rose took root, and ever from that hour
Hath been the emblem of abiding love.

The Roses of Paradise.

The roses which grew in Paradise had no thorns. "Thorns and thistles" were unknown upon the earth until after the fall (Genesis iii.v.18). Both St. Ambrose and St. Basil note that the roses in Eden had no thorns, and Milton says that in Eden bloomed "Flowers of all hue, and without thorn the rose."—Paradise lost, IV.

St George's Rose.

It is the royalist, loyalist red rose, rather than the revolutionary or white rose, that is usually worn in honour of St. George, the chivalrous and noble gentleman, who—even if he be a myth, as some aver—will be for all time an ensample of courageous help to maidens in distress, protecting their good name from the villain who would besmirch it.

"A LITTLE BIT OF FLUFF."

Albert Brown and his English farce comedy, "A Little Bit of Fluff," proved an irresistible combination at the Grand Opera House on Saturday and the two were responsible for the greatest amount of laughter of the season. The action consisted of one funny mix-up after another, each apparently more amusing than its predecessors, judging by the effect upon the audience, and no funnier farce has been seen here in years. Albert Brown, well remembered for his great work in the "White Feather," was the storm centre of the outburst of laughter and his portrayal of the role of Bertram Truly was a masterpiece. The supporting company was capable and clever.

WEDDING BELLS

DIER—TAYLOR.

The marriage of Miss Lyela Taylor of Peterborough, Ont., second daughter of Mr. Wm. Taylor, Chatsworth, Ont., to Mr. Arden B. C. Dier, of Calgary, took place at Augustine Presbyterian church, Winnipeg, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, April 18th, 1917. Rev. Leslie Pidgeon officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. S. V. Moulton, Winnipeg, wore a very becoming suit of navy blue serge embroidered in Oriental shades, the coat opening on a blouse of grey Georgette embroidered in silver, her hat being a pretty gray straw trimmed with French roses. A corsage bouquet of violets and tea roses completed her costume.

Mr. and Mrs. Dier left on G. T. P. for Edmonton. They will make their future home at Calgary, Alta.

ROSEBOROUGH—BUCKLAND.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Woods, Warkworth, on April 11th, when Sarah Elizabeth, youngest daughter of Mrs. R. A. Buckland, was united in marriage to Mr. Chas. Gilbert Roseborough, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Roseborough, of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. Johnston.

The bride was given away by her uncle, Mr. Fletcher Buckland, and wore a gown of brocaded satin and embroidered net trimmed with pearls and attended by her cousin, Miss Florence Buckland, of Wiarton, wearing a pale blue silk with an overdress of white shadow lace. Mr. Geo. Buckland, brother of the bride, attended the groom.

After receiving congratulations, supper was served in the presence of about twenty guests. The evening was spent in games and music.

The many and beautiful presents received testified to the esteem in which the bride was held by a large circle of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Roseborough left for Peterborough, where they will reside. The bride travelled in a navy shot gold satin de-chene suit.

OBITUARY

JOSEPH HOPKINS.

The death occurred yesterday of Joseph Hopkins at the family residence, North Monaghan. Deceased has been ill for upwards of a year and his death, while deeply regretted by a wide circle of friends, was not unexpected. He leaves to mourn his loss, a wife and one son, Walter at home.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery.

MRS A. REID.

Mrs. Alec Reid, 212 Aylmer street, died on Sunday morning at Nicholls Hospital from blood poisoning.

Mrs. Reid had an open scratch on her face, which in some way became infected. She had up to Thursday attended to her duties about the house. On Thursday evening, however, the pain about her heart became so severe that medical aid was summoned. She was immediately taken to the hospital, but all efforts to save her life proved futile and she passed away yesterday at 7.30.

Mrs. Reid, who was formerly Eliza Amelia McCauley, was born in Chandos 38 years ago and has resided in Peterborough for seven years. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, who is at present in Minnesota, and five children, Alice, May, Lena, Russell and Eddie.

Four sisters, Mrs. Sam Wilson, Burleigh, Mrs. Wellington Sanderson, Peterborough, Mrs. George Foster, Peterborough, and Mrs. Albert Reid, Mount Julian, and four brothers, William, Burleigh, Robert, Minnesota, Thomas with the 93rd in France and Samuel of this city, also survive.

The funeral, which will be held under the auspices of Court Chemong, I.O.O.F., of which Mrs. Reid was a member, will leave the house at 3.30. Interment ata the Little Lake cemetery.

GEORGE AHERN.

George Ahern, a highly respected citizen of Peterborough for thirty-two years, died on Sunday morning, after an illness of about a month.

Mr. Ahern was born in Limerick, Ireland, fifty-five years ago, coming to Canada at an early age. He was a prominent member of the C.M.B.A. and the T.A.S. Since coming to Peterborough, he has been employed with the Lock Company.

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, four sons—George, Joseph, David and Wellington—and two daughters—Aileen and Lizzie—all of this city. Four sisters and four brothers, residing in Limerick, with the exception of Mrs. Michael Reilley, of this city; Mrs. O'Neill, Mindon, Conn., and Mr. David Ahern, of Troy, also survive.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 423 Downie St., tomorrow, at 9 a.m.

EDWARD PAGE.

Edward Page died this morning at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Thorndyke, near Lock's Bridge, aged 85.

He is survived by two sons, Wellington and William, Toronto, and five daughters, Mrs. Sheppard, Toronto; Mrs. Thorndyke, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Baker, and Miss Violet Page, all of this city.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 1.30 from Mr. Thorndyke's residence to the Fraserville Cemetery.

DOROTHY BROWN.

The sympathy of the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Henry Brown, Scott's Corners, will be extended to them in the death of their youngest daughter, Dorothy Eleanor, who died on Saturday, April 21st.

The funeral took place this afternoon from the family residence to the Fraserville Cemetery.

Cheese Factories Open, Diverting Milk From City

Most of the cheese factories opened up in the Peterborough district this morning. The first effect upon the city is the diversion of a supply of milk that will be used for cheese instead of distribution to local consumers. The first price offered by the factories was slightly better than twenty-five cents per hundred pounds. The increased flow of milk reported recently has not been followed by the expected decrease in prices. Perhaps the consumer is well aware of that. He is paying winter prices and the prospects are that he will continue to do so, and will be fortunate if there are no further advances.

The demand for milk and cream is increased by outside competition, and it is safe to state that there will be more milk go out of this county this summer than ever before. The Toronto dairies are extending their lines of communication into the remote country places, systematising their collection and forwarding operations. the consumer might as well expect at the outset that he is going to be pinched in dairy produce as sharply as in most of the other necessaries to which he is accustomed.

The farmers are expecting big prices for cheese this summer. Last year showed big returns.

MILITARY NEWS

Mrs. J. J. Hawthorne, 197 Dublin Street, has received word that her husband, Company Sergt.-Major J. J. Hawthorne, of the 93rd Battalion, has undergone an operation for appendicitis in the Military Hospital at Eastbourne, Sussex, England.

It is expected that Lt.-Col. T. J. Johnston, commanding officer of the 93rd Battalion, will reach Peterborough to-morrow.

LIEUT. MANNING AT HALIFAX.

OSHAWA, April 22.—Lt. H. G. Manning, teacher in the University school, Toronto, who went overseas in June, 1915, and was wounded on September 9 inst., has arrived safely in Halifax from England.

Lt. Manning is a brother of Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton of Peterborough.

Dairymen trying for high records, with the necessity of milking three times a day, are being hard hit by the labour scarcity. One prominent dairyman says he has not averaged over five hours' sleep a day for weeks.

Openings For Men And Boys on Farms Near Peterboro

Mr. Gillespie has, at his office, on Aylmer street, the names of a number of farmers who will engage men or boys for Spring and summer work. They are men whom Mr. Gillespie vouches for, good farmers in the vicinity of Peterborough. It is hoped that parents of well-grown boys, particularly, will co-operate by permitting the boys to go out on the farms.

St. George's Day at St. John's Church

It is hoped that the loyal people of this city will not forget the National service in commemoration of Saint George, England's patron saint, which will be held in St. John's Parish Church this evening at 8 o'clock.

On this occasion, Canon Cody, of Toronto, who is recognized as one of the most prominent preachers in Canada, will preach the sermon. It is not often that the opportunity is afforded in this city of hearing such a talented and earnest man.

Farmers Will Seed As Extensively As Possible, The City Must Help in Harvest

Saturday's meeting of farmers cleared up one doubtful point in the Greater Production campaign. They are not worrying about help for the seeding operations. It is at harvest time that they will require more help than they have in sight, and will then need every assistance that citizens can give them. "Last summer," said one man, "there was a farmer in Smith who had a great field of hay. There was only himself and his wife to take it in. They did their best to handle it, but finally had to give up, and the most of that crop remained in the field. In short it went to waste. That was one place in which city help, by able bodied men, not boys, could have been of material assistance to the farmer and to the country."

While Saturday's meeting was not as large as the Organization of Resources Committee had hoped for, it brought out the fact that the farmers are going to put in as much seed and vegetables as they can. It also disclosed the acute shortage of farm labour. Men from Monaghan, Smith and Asphodel reported that for miles around their homes, considering the three sections as one, there were only two farm labourers.

"Fortunately I have two young lads of my own," said one of the men, and I will be able to get along fairly well."

A second of these three had one son at home, but the third was alone. And to the credit of these farmers it may be staged that they are willing and eager to work to the limit in seeding. That is the harvest time they are concerned with and anxious about. But Mr. G. A. Gillespie assured them that the citizens of Peterborough will be ready to assist them in taking in the crops.

The farmers intend to take school boys who will be placed with them by Mr. G. L. Galley.

Seventy Veterans of The Great War at Knox Church Service

Anniversary of Ypres Observed by Peterboro's Returned Soldiers Who Hear Splendid Address From Rev. Jas. A. MacKenzie

References to the second battle of Ypres were made at the majority of the city churches yesterday, but the chief event in the local observance of the immortal stand of the Canadians was the Church parade of the Great War Veterans to Knox Church yesterday morning. It was a notable parade inasmuch as it was the first the Veterans have had in Peterborough, and it was also the biggest gathering of returned men the citizens of Peterborough have had the opportunity of seeing.

In all there were seventy overseas soldiers in the procession, and on their collar and cap badges were the numerals of a host of C. E. F. battalions, representative of all four Canadian divisions, while a number of returned Imperial soldiers marched with their comrades of the C.E.F. In the ranks were many boys who had fought at Ypres, the majority of course being members of the 2nd Battalion and the 4th Battery, C. F. A., in which units the greater part of Peterborough's first division soldiers served in France. Other first contingent units represented were the Strathcona Horse, the heavy artillery, and the 3rd, 13th and 16th Battalions. The 21st, the 2nd Division, Eastern Ontario Battalion, in which many Peterborough boys served, had six representatives in line, and the Canadian Mounted Rifles, 39th Battalion and other units were well represented in the notable parade.

A number of the men still showed evidence of the wounds they had received, a limp being perceptible in the case of a number of those in the parade, while Corp. Art. Moscrop, with his arm still in a sling, was a noticeable figure. In a motor car were a number of wounded men, including Lance Corp. Fred Long, Pte. Bruce Clarke and Pte. Leonard Clarke, who were unable to march.

The parade fell in at the Armouries at 10.30 o'clock, in charge of Capt. Belton, himself a veteran of the present war. Sergt.-Major R. T. Biggs was the Sergeant-Major of the whole parade, while Sergt. Victor, in charge of the infantry party, and Sergt. Cooper, in charge of the mounted men, including the artillery. At the head of the parade marched Lieut. W. R. Elliott, Military Cross.

The band of the 57th, under Lieut. Gliddon, supplied the music, and the veterans, swinging along like the real soldiers they are, to the strains of "Soldiers of the King."

AT KNOX CHURCH.

Knox church was crowded to the doors and the service was of a hearty impressive character. The music by the choir included a quartette by Messrs. Smith, Anderson, Hunnage and Anderson, "Quit Ye Like Men."

The pastor, Rev. J. A. MacKenzie delivered an eloquent address in which he referred at some length to the glorious stand of the Canadians at Ypres. He extended a warm welcome to the Great War Veterans and said that Knox church felt it a great honour to have the Veterans visit their church on the occasion of their first church parade.

PTE. W. J. DARBOURN, Peterborough member of the 93rd Battalion, who is officially reported died of wounds.

Motor Show Special

May Robson and Co. Secured for Saturday Next

"The Making Over of Mrs. Matt" is the story of the arrival in New York of a great western financier, who has come up from the bottom of the ladder and his determination to have his wife evolve into a fashion leader, and his son marry into an old family. The homely tastes of the wife, and the manly affection of the son for the father's wholesome stenographer, wreck the plans of the senior member of the family, while the mother's shrewdness brings a happy denouement from a stormy, sobby and withal mirth-provoking situation. In the role of "Mrs. Matt," May Robson has a character to enact that fits her like a glove, while the supporting company is all that could be desired to present a Robsonian production. May Robson in "The Making Over of Mrs. Matt" will be seen in this city at "The Grand" next Saturday April 28, matinee and evening.

Fraser Mission Band Successful Sale

The amount realized by the rummage sale conducted by the ladies of St. Paul's Fraser Mission Band of St. Paul's church, on Friday and Saturday, was within a few cents of $200. This very satisfatcory result shows what may be accomplished by the practical exploitation of cast-off clothing and other discarded wares.

The emergency shelf should have its place in every well-regulated pantry.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

PARIS (French Official Communique), April 23.—French troops fought back two violent German attacks in the vicinity of Moronvillers and Monte-Haute in fierce fighting, the French official statement to-day asserted. Three German surprise attacks in the Woevre and Vosges—evidently designed to create adversion and relieve the pressure of the great French offensive to the north—were likewise beaten back. Active artillery combat from south of St. Quentin to Rheims was reported.

PETROGRAD, April 23.—German battleship and cruiser squadron has left Libau presumably to attempt an attack behind the Russian line from the Baltic. It was reported also that another German warship squadron was en route to the Russian Baltic positions from Kiel.

NEW YORK, April 23.—Three are dead to-day in the first "war murders" and suicide to be recorded in this country. Rev. Robert Berry, Congregationalist minister, shot and killed his wife and mother-in-law, wounded his sister-in-law, and ended his own life. Berry was enraged by German atrocities. The police believe he considered the members of his family dangerous pro-German sympathizers.

(By William Philip Simms, Special Correspondent of the United Press.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES AFIELD, April 23.—All along the fifty-mile front from Lens to St. Quentin the Germans are panicky. The slightest movement of the British troops results in a feverish flare up of "S.O.S" rockets from the Prussians summoning aid. The British having now turned the Hindenburg line for a distance of several miles to the southwest of Arras, the enemy undoubtedly is preparing for further setbacks. To-day the battle opened with a dawn that was bright and cold. The night had been ablaze with gun flares, the roar reaching drum-fire tensity just as the sun reached the horizon and peeped over. The infantry moved forward as a single unit over a number of places near by. It was supported by artillery and machine gun fire. So the Prussians wouldn't know what was happening, the British artillery and machine gun fire was loosed along practically the entire fifty miles of front for a brief period. Not knowing where the infantry was to strike the Germans frantically signalled all along the lines.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 23.—Foreign Secretary A. L. Balfour, the British special envoy to the United States for the big war conference, was formally received by President Wilson to-day with the heads of the departments of the United States Government in which they are especially interested. To-morrow the actual war conference will be on. The French delegates are not here yet.

PETROGRAD, April 23.—The Germans on the northern part of the Russian front have been firing glass bullets from their rifles at Russian lines, says to-day's War Office announcement. Hostile activities by Kurds against the Russians in Persia are increasing.

THE HAGUE, April 23.—Germany now faces trouble from ultra-Conservatives, according to information reaching here to-day. The Conservatives united in continuing the war and in carrying out in full the policy of absorption by Germany of all land of which she can make a conquest—have flatly threatened a revolt against Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg's rule if he yields in any way to the demand of Serialists for commitment of the government to the "no annexation" pronounciamento recently issued by them.

German newspapers received here contain insistant demands that the Chancellor mage some answer to this Serialists manifesto.

STOCKHOLM, April 23.—May 15 has been set as the date for the conference of Serialists from all belligerent countries on peace, is the announcement made by Serialists leaders here to-day to this ecect. But the names of those who would be present was withheld.

AMSTERDAM, April 23.—Germany may be making more efforts to ad- ment made by Serialists leaders here to-day to this effect. But the names of Tages Zeitung, by Count Reventlow, is correct. "It appears the efforts for a separate Russian peace have somewhat subsided," Reventlow said, according to a despatch here. "But the Government seems again to be setting its hopes towards the United States.

The Second Coming of Christ

The largest audience of the present series of evangeliatic services in Gospel Hall listened last evening to an address on "The Imminence of the Second Coming of Christ," delivered by the evangelist, Harold M. Harper, late of Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, Ill.

The address was preceded by a bright song service, in which the audience joined in heartily singing the good old gospel hymns. This was followed by a duet by the Misses Hartshorn.

The speaker then showed how that Christ rebuked the Pharisees for being unable to discern the signs of the times when they were able to discern the weather by looking at the sky. He then said that dispensationally the world was divided into three classes, the Jew, the Gentile and the Church of God, citing I Co., 10:32. Each of these classes were dealt with and their present condition shown. Reading Mark 13:26-29, the speaker told how the Jews were flocking back to Palestine in unbelief and how the fig tree type of the nation was beginning to bud. He then spoke of the condition both of the professing and actual church of God. Indifference and worldliness had crept into it and spirituality was at a low ebb. Here Matt., 24:11-12 and II Tim. 3:5, was quoted. From these two spheres the evangelist turned to conditions in the world at large. Matt. 24:37-39 was read and the days of Noah were shown to be similar in five or six ways to the ones in which our lot was cast. Especially was the activity of wicked spirits noted and the wickedness and corruption seen on every hand. The audience was shown the way of escape through trusting Christ as Saviour, and was warned in view of the near approach of Jesus Christ.

Mr. Harper will speak to-night on the second coming of Christ and the events in heaven succeeding it. You are invited to hear this young evangelist preach the word.

SECOND SON LEAVES FOR OVERSEAS SERVICE.

Rev. C. H. Coon, of Tweed, was in the city to-day on his way to Lakefield. His second son leaves Ottawa to-morrow for an eastern point, on his way overseas. Rev. Mr. Coon formerly resided in Peterborough as pastor of the Mark Street Baptist Church. His oldest son Horace went overseas with the 33rd Battery.

Social in Honour of Pte. J. Houghton

A combined farewell and birthday party was held on Saturday night at the home of Mrs. George Houghton, Orpington Road, in honour of her son, Private James Houghton, who is leaving in a few days for England to report for duty at the end of his furlough. About twenty-five friends were present, and a pleasant evening was spent. Private Houghton enlisted with the 21st Battalion and was wounded on the Somme the day after his father, who enlisted with the 59th, was killed. The two telegrams came together to Mrs. Houghton, and in view of her loss, her son was given ten weeks' furlough after he was able to leave the hospital in England.

NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Stamford, Conn., Nurse Tells How She Found Health

STAMFORD, Conn. — "I am a nurse and suffered from a nervous breakdown. I had no appetite and could not sleep at night, and nothing seemed to help me. By chance I heard of Vinol, and after taking the first bottle I noticed an improvement, and four bottles made me well and strong, it gave me a hearty appetite, so I can sleep soundly night or day. I consider Vinol a wonderful tonic." Edith R. Forbes, Stamford, Conn.

The reason Vinol is so successful in overcoming such conditions is because it is a constitutional remedy, and goes to the seat of the trouble. It is the greatest strength creator we know—due to the beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates which it contains, all dissolved in a pure medicinal wine.

We have seen so many wonderful recoveries like this right here in Peterborough caused by Vinol, that we feel perfectly safe in offering to return money in every such case where Vinol fails to benefit.

New Regulations Governing Dairies

Aim to Deal More Strictly With Tuberculosis and Prevent Its Spread

OTTAWA, April 23.—New regulations have been put into force by order in Council to deal more strictly with the question of tuberculosis, and to prevent the spread of that disease. The new regulations provide that dairies in which milk or cream are produced for sale shall be licensed, and no license shall be issued unless the dairy shall conform to the required standard.

The standard requires that the stable shall have an ample amount of air space, and at least two square feet of glass for each cow, and shall be well ventilated, drained, and kept clean and sanitary. Two years from the date of the first test of the cattle of a dairy the sale within the city or town of unpasteurized milk or cream from that dairy shall be prohibited unless the veterinary surgeon can certify that the herd contains no reactor, and is, in his opinion, free from tuberculosis. The inspectors are to use the tuberculin test and carefully examine the cows.

Compensation is to be paid to owner of cows slaughtered, at the rate of one-half of the appraised value if destroyed for open tuberculosis, two-thirds if destroyed as a reactor at the request of the owner and valuation to be made by the veterinary inspector.

Milk or cream from a herd containing reactors shall not be sold except pasteurized. Whenever, in the opinion of the Veterinary Director-General, the work of elimination of tuberculosis from the herd supplying a municipality has reached a satisfactory point, the municipality will be expected to maintain the standard reached.

Novel Introduction is Seen in "White Sister"

One of the most novel introductions to a photoplay ever presented is shown in "The White Sister," Essanay's six-act photoplay. The novel, written by F. Marion Crawford, glides out on the stage, apparently without human agency, presents its back with the title of the book, turns around and opens to the front-piece showing a full length picture of Viola Allen, the famous stage star who leads in the play. Miss Allen is then seen to step right out of the page in diminutive form and increase to natural size, when she makes a bow to the audience, and the play is on. This great feature produced by Fred E. Wright, will be shown at the Empire Theatre to-night.

Bishop's Tribute to Heroes of St. Julien

At St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday morning Bishop O'Brien, referring to the second anniversary of the Battle of St. Julien, paid a tribute to the memory of Canada's heroes who had given their lives in France and Flanders, and asked the people to pray for the repose of their souls. They had acquitted themselves nobly against terrible odds and their deeds had given a new lustre to the name "Canadian." His Lordship spoke of the no less generous sacrifice of the men who had come home from the front broken in health and disabled, and expressed the fervent hope that the efforts of the Allies would soon be crowned with success. Bishop O'Brien also emphasized the importance of the greater production campaign, in which he urged every person to co-operate. The men at the front must be fed, and it was a responsibility that rested upon the people at home to do all in their power to provide for their needs during the coming months. Bishop O'Brien stated that an honour roll was being prepared which would include the names of all the men who had enlisted from St. Peter's Parish. When completed it would be placed in the vestibule of the Cathedral.

Dr. Anderson's Lecture To-night on Malta

To-night at the Public Library, Dr. George Anderson will lecture under the auspices of the Chapters of the Daughters of the Empire on "Malta, the Island Home of the British Mediterranean Fleet." Dr. Anderson and his wife spent several months there in 1913-14. Malta, apart from its intense naval interest, has a most interesting epoch-making history. Malta, the Melita of the ancients, was the scene of St. Paul's memorable shipwreck; "the barbarous people that showed him and his comrades in distress no little kindness," have become to-day a loyal people to the throne and Empire. Their island is packed with thrilling things to be told. There will be no admission charge. Collection taken for the Royal Canadian Naval Institutes.

To-morrow night Dr. Anderson will lecture for the same interests—and with the same intention the "British Navy and Its Work in the Great War," in All Saints' school house. The lecture will be finely illustrated.

KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Eat Less Meat and Take Salts

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat, but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat, and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain, called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate the uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which helps overcome uric acid, and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

The Death of William Redpath

Was a Former Resident of Keene

William Redpath, a former well-known resident of Keene, passed away on Friday last at his home in Grimsby. Deceased was eighty-four years of age. His wife predeceased him about two years ago. Two sons and one daughter are left to mourn his loss, namely, Frank, on the homestead, at Keene; Walter, in Toronto and Mrs. W. H. Gillespie of Grimsby.

The funeral will take place this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the Keene station to Keene cemetery.

Food Supplies Give More Concern Than Even Men Munitions and Money

Unless a Greater Acreage is Put to Crop in 1917 Than in 1916 There Will be Positive World Hunger Before the 1918 Crop is Marketed —Sounds a Note of Warning—Ten Nations are on Short Rations.

THE CASE OF THE FARMER

The outbreak of war found Britain and her Allies totally unprepared, and men, guns, munitions and equipment were the great need. As war entered upon its third year, the financing of it was a problem that caused serious anxiety to those who were in charge and in close touch with the money centres of the world. The entrance of the United States has solved the latter problem and t-day food supplies give more concern than even men, munitions and money.

Letters received by members of the Toronto Board of Trade from Presidents of Chamber of Commerce in Great Britain indicate clearly that unless a greater acreage is put to crop in 1917 than in 1916, then, before the 1918 crop is marketed there will be positive world hunger.

David Lubin, the United States representative of the International Bureau of Agriculture with headquarters at Rome, reported in October last to the Government at Washington that the world's stock of grain,—wheat, rye, barley, oats and corn, would last until August of this year, by which time the 1917 crop would commence coming in. The March reports, which have just been furnished Washington by Mr. Lubin, shows shortage of one hundred and thirty million bushels. This is accounted for by unexpected losses through submarine activity and other causes, and leakage of some kind which is not accounted for. In other words, if the world consumed food grains at a normal rate and had an abundant supply, it would absorb one hundred and thirty million bushels more between now and the 1st of August than there is in existence.

NOTE OF WARNING.

The American Government has secured Herbert Hoover, who was organizer of that miracle of efficiency the American-Belgian Relief Commission, (all Americans having been withdrawn from Belgium on the United States breaking with Germany). Mr. Hoover has been put in charge of American food control, with the definite duty of increasing food production and stopping food waste in the United States.

Lord Devanport, Food Controller of Great Britain is asking the Legislation permitting the search of private homes in Great Britain and the punishing, by fine or imprisonment, of those who hoard food contrary to orders now being issued. Wheat to-day in Chicago is quoted $2.38 per bushel; corn $1.43; beans $48.00 per bushel; potatoes $4.50 per bag, and evidence is multiplying that goes to show that no warnings we have exaggerate the danger facing us.

In pre-war days, the world is said to have had never more than three months grain supply on hand at the end of any one season, and let us look at the situation which war has created. Forty million men were taken out of the peaceful walks of life and put into the army. Behind them are twenty millions of men and women,—strong, healthy, the very best producers—who are engaged in furnishing guns, munitions and army supplies generally, other than food stuffs,—sixty millions of the world's best taken out of peaceful industry and put to war work. The arduous nature of the employment and life of these men and women calls for a generous diet. The difficulties of feeding armies in the field involve waste, and it is stated that one hundred million people in times of peace could be fed with what these sixty million use at this war time.

ON SHORT RATIONS.

Do we realise that ten nations are to-day on short rations? Do we realize that six of these nations are suffering from hunger, and that more thousands of human beings are dying of starvation that we care to contemplate? Do we realize the enormous area that is shell-ploughed, devastated, and non-productive? Do you know that Ontario cultivated 365,000 acres less in 1916 than in 1915? Do you know that Ontario planted 28,000 fewer acres in potatoes in 1916 than in 1915? Do you know that Ontario produced in 1914, 32,000,000 bushels of potatoes, in 1915, 16,000,000 bushels of potatoes, and in 1916, 8,000,000 bushels of potatoes?

Do you know that Toronto brought potatoes in 1916 from British Columbia, from Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, and from as far East as New Brunswick? Do you know that Ontario brought beans last year from Manchuria? and that engines, train crews and rolling stock bringing potatoes from New Brunswick and b ns from Vancouver are not at the same time available for bringing coal from Pennsylvania, all of which helped to create our last Winter's coal shortage? Do you know that to furnish a weekly steamship service between St. John and Liverpool would require four steamers of fourteen knots while a weekly service between Australia and Great Britain would call for twelve such steamers? In each case Great Britain would have one steamer in and out each week, the same service from the four with Canada that she would have from the twelve with Australia. With the shortage of ocean tonnage, this imposes a special duty on Canada with regard to the food requirements of Great Britain and her Allies.

A FURTHER REASON.

Do we want a f rther reason? At prices bound to prevail when crops, the result of to-day's seeding, are being harvested, Ontario's arable land contains potentialities of wealth that should be exploited to the uttermost. The burden of debt imposed by the war, which we will bear our share of without grumbling, can be carried more easily if our natural resources are taken full advantage of, and let us bear in mind that food production is no more important—not as important—as the cutting out of food waste. Canada is as wasteful a country as can be found on the globe, and in our hotels, restaurants, boarding houses, and private homes, such waste of food goes in as would, if checked, equalise in value the greatest efforts of our Organization of Resources Committee to increase production.

We must not forget the case of the farmer. In the Winter of 1914 and Spring of 1915, the cry to the farmer was "Produce! Produce!" and he responded in such a way that Ontario had a record crop in 1915, but almost before it was harvested, the Recruiting Sergeant was around with his cry, "Enlist! Enlist!" and the farmer was told that crops were of secondary importance; and farmers' sons and farm labour recruited relatively quite as well, perhaps better, than the young men in any other walk of life. And now, after taking the farmer's help—and this was done, because in Ontario to-day there is only an average of one man to each hundred acres—we come again asking the farmer to produce. Small wonder if this irritates him, and the offer of the city man to go out and spend his vacation in the farm naturally causes the farmer some amusement; and plans and aims of the Resources Committee must be fully explained in order to enlist the co-operation of the farmer

A MATTER OF FACT.

As a matter of fact, there is not a village in the entire Province that could not furnish to the farmer at least one man, and the City of Toronto could furnish thousands, who are country bred, who came from the farms, who are physically fit, perhaps not to plough, but to drive a seeder, to harrow, roll, take care of horses and cattle, and do almost any of the work of the farmer's hired man. It is the plain duty of every employer of labour to learn whether he has such men working for him, and, if he has, to release them, making it easy for them to go, urging them to go and put in the entire season on the farm, holding their positions vacant for them, and, in special cases, going so far as to augment the pay the farmer may be willing to give. Many a city

AN EXPERT ON COLDS

Comparatively few people realize that a cold is a signal of physical weakness.

To treat a cold with weakening physics, alcoholic syrups or drugged pills, may smother the cold but they also reduce the body powers still further and invite more serious sickness.

Scott's Emulsion has always been an expert on colds, because it peculiarly enriches the blood, quickly tones up the forces and strengthens both throat and chest. Try Scott's. Refuse Substitutes.

HOW THEY DO IT

BY STEWART LYON.

Special War Correspondent of Canadian Press, Limited.

Canadian Field Headquarters.—"Messes I have been in," is perhaps a somewhat suggestive title for what follows, but when it is explained that in every case I got into the mess through the invitation of the senior combatant officer connected therewith, the blamelessness of the Canadian press correspondent will be apparent.

There are many sorts of messes at the front and behind it. There is the mess dignified of the corps on the division where the "brass cups," if lucky, may have table covers, initialled napkin rings, and electric bell to summon the waiter, the morning's Times to furnish material for after-dinner conversation and for environment perhaps, the salle-a-manger of some fine old house that has been left uninjured by strange oversight of the barbarians during their temporary occupation, or has been hit in a few non-vital spots

600,000 HUNS FAIL TO WIN VERDUN GOAL

(Press Despatch, Apr. 24, 1916)

On the grim slopes of Le Mort Homme and Douaumont, a year ago this month, Generals Nivelle and Petain broke Germany's offensive power and decisively turned back the tide of victory. French readiness, mobility and speed—typified in their wonderful "seventy-fives"—proved that in spite of disadvantages the Hunnish hordes could be conquered.

In the humbler but yet important sphere of personal comfort, our fighting men have been well and truly served by the same qualities of readiness, mobility and speed—embodied in the Gillette Safety Razor. They have proved that under all the disadvantages of life in billets and trenches, a clean, refreshing shave is always ready for the lucky owner of a Gillette. All he needs is soap, water, and five minutes to spare.

Returned soldiers are eloquent in their appreciation of the Gillette Safety Razor on active service. If your boy Overseas hasn't one (or you yourself, either) you cannot spend Five Dollars better than in making good the need! Why not send him a Gillette, or get one for yourself, to-day?

SOLDIER SETTLEMENT PLAN

OTTAWA, April 20.—An Imperial scheme for soldiers' settlement somewhat broader in scope than what has been outlined previously, is involved in the bill which Hon. Dr. Roche will introduce in the Commons to-day. A board of three commissioners is to be appointed to administer the act, with power to grant 160 acres of western land to naval or military veterans of the Canadian or British forces or their widows and also to loan an amount not exceeding $2,000 to defray the expneses of buildings and implements.

Spraying with arsenate of lead with a soap spreader and sticker proved most effective, in tests conducted by the Ohio Experiment Station, to control the plum curculio.

Visible Supply Shows Decrease

Weaker Tone to The Grain Marke —The Cattle Market

Growing crop news was of a decidedly bearish character yesterday, but this was offset by the knowledge that visible would show a huge decrease with the opening of navigation. The decrease when finally given out proved to be about 4,000,000. On the whole the tone of the market was weak, but closing about even.

Manitoba wheat — No. 1 northern, $2.61; No. 2, $2.56 1-2; No. 3, $2.51 1-2; No. 4, $2.39; track, bay ports.

Manitoba oats — No. 2 C. W., 79 1-2c; No. 3, 78 3-4c; extra No. 1 feed, 78 3-4c; No. 1 feed, 77 1-2c; all rail delivered.

American corn — $1.51, nominal; subject to embargo.

Ontario oats — No. 2 white, 73c to 75c; No. 3 white, 72c to 74c.

Ontario wheat — No. 2, winter, per car lot, $2.40 to $2.42; No. 3, $2.38 to $2.40; according to freights outside.

Peas — No. 2, nominal; car lots, nominal.

Barley — Good malting, $1.35 to $1.37; feed barley, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $1.87 to $1.89.

Manitoba flour — First patents, in jute bags, $12.60; second patents, $12.10; strong bakers, $11.70.

Ontario flour — Winter, according to sample, $10.40 to $10.50, track, Toronto, prompt shipments.

Millfeed — Car lots, delivered, Montreal, shorts, $43 to $44; bran, $41; feed flour, per bag, $2.80 to $2.90; middlings, $40 to $48.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $11.50 to $12.60; mixed, $9 to $11; straw, $7 to $7.50.

Cattle Markets.

There was a good run of cattle in yesterday, but of very mixed quality. A few loads of extra choice, which sold at prices steady with last week. A large proportion of the receipts was of medium and poor quality. The demand for the latter was not over keen, and trade dragged along rather slowly, with prices shading off to about 15c lower at the close.

Calves, steady.
Choice milkers, firm.
Sheep and lambs, firm.
Hogs steady with last week for Saturday's tradings, but packers are quoting 25c lower for to-morrow's market.

SEES END OF WAR IN EIGHT MONTHS

NEW YORK, April 21.—The war will be over within eight months because of the economic conditions in Germany, according to an American official who has just returned to this country after residing in Berlin, Hamburg, Frankfort, and other German cities for some years.

"At the beginning, in August, 1914," he said, "the German people were confident that Germany would conquer Europe in three months and then take Brazil and any other countries in South America she needed, regardless of the Monroe Doctrine or what the United States might have to say in the matter. The setback given to the army at the battle of the Marne caused some feeling of pessimism in Germany until the hopes of the people were raised once more to the zenith by the capture of Warsaw and the defeat of the Russian Army. Then the government made another big blunder by not making a separate peace with Russia, which could have been done then if the Geramns had gone the right way about it and returned Poland.

"German intrigue was so successful in the Court at Petrograd that a separate peace would have been made a few weeks ago if Rasputin had not been killed and his death followed later by the revolution. He was in the pay of the German Government all the time, and through his influence over the Czar Nicholas thousands of Russian troops were sent to the front to be slaughtered like sheep. Under the new regime at Petrograd there is no chance for Germany to make a separate peace, and her agents are either in the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul or have fled the country.

"Only old men, women, and boys are seen in the streets of the German cities performing the labour that was formerly done by the men who have been called to the front. There is nothing to eat scarcely, and what food can be had is of very poor quality.

"Each February the Government has admitted that the crops of the preceding year were poor, but the coming season would prove to be a bumper. It is the same this year, but the people have lost heart. Even the beer is bad, as there is no malt to be had. The only query that is heard on every side in dreary, listless tones, is, "When will the war be over?"

"There will be no lack of money while the printing presses can turn out bills from a mark upward in value, but it will not purchase food, especially fat, because it cannot be had. There is no lubricating oil to use on the trains or for machinery in the factories.

"When the officers and soldiers returned from the trenches on leave during the first year of the war they looked strong and healthy, well set-up military men, full of fight. The lack of proper food and the hopelessness of the war outlook has had its influence on them, and they return now gaunt and haggard and broken in health from the want of proper nourishment. I have talked with well-educated young officers quite recently and the stories they told me of food they had to eat in the trenches were nauseating.

"The Kaiser is a very sick man, and will not live to see the end of the war, in the opinion of officials who are in close touch with him. He is a sufferer from Bright's disease, and the tremendous strain of the war combined with German internal troubles has broken him down. At the Kiel yacht regatta he was a well set-up man, looking to be in the prime of health, and when I saw him a month ago he was a drawn, haggard-looking man, whose face was furrowed and his hair had turned nearly white.

With regard to the conflicting reports regarding the merchant submarines Bremen and Deutschland, the American official said that he was positive of their whereabouts from authentic reports and that neither of them had been sunk.

"The Bremen was captured by the British Navy," he continued, "and is at Milford Haven, South Wales. The Deutschland is safe at Bremen, and will remain there until the end of the war. She left Bremen for New York and put back, five days later on account of some accident to her machinery. I sent several cards in the special mail to friends in America as souvenirs, which were all returned to me later. Several bankers and other business men in Berlin and Frankfort whom I know had their mail returned from the Deutschland.

INDICATES THAT SUPPLY OF MUNITIONS IS FAIRLY AMPLE NOW.

LONDON, April 24. — Sunday labor is to be abolished as far as possible in a large majority of the munitions works. Only in establishments in which the process work is of necessity continuous or where contracts of great urgency are being filled will exceptions be made. This decision is the result of an experiment carried out for four months in works on the Tyne and Tees, where the abolition of Sunday labor, according to an official report, has been in most cases highly beneficial to the health of the workers and the output of munitions.

Nervous, Run Down People Need This Spring Nerve Tonic

Trembling Hands, Halting Step, Lack of Confidence, Timidness, Bashfulness, All Caused by Overworked and Abused Nerves.

Old-fashioned Spring tonics are good as far as they go, but they dont go far enough. Overwork, excess in eating, drinking, smoking, late hours and too strenuous living during the Winter months means that your nerves have been abused and you need the best remedy you can get to put them in good shape.

Get a bottle of Extract of Native Roots to-day. In two days you'll step livlier, your eye will brighten; you'll start to grow younger instead of older; and soon you will regain your old-time vigour and confidence, and no one will dare suggest that you are a "dead one," a "down and out," or have "lost your grip."

No matter from what cause your nerves may have become shattered you can put your old time force into them and make them as steady as an athlete's and as strong as steel. How happy you will be to again be able to do well the things that lack of confidence prevents you from doing. Be strong, be vigorous; get back your old time ambition and be your own happy, robust, contented self again.

The genuine Extract of Native Roots is sold by Warne Drug Co. and other leading druggists throughout the Dominion. Start the treatment to-day.

SURVEY OF FOOD SUPPLY.

President of U. S. Should Have Power to Fix Prices.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—To meet the food situation Secretary of Agriculture Houston told the Senate to-day the Department of Agriculture needs the authority and power to make a complete survey of the food supply of the nation, and to license and supervise the operation of all plants, mills, packing houses, canneries, slaughter houses, breweries, distilleries, storage houses, or other establishments or factories dealing with food.

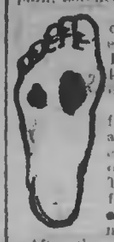
In case of extreme emergency the Government should have the power to purchase, store and subsequently dispose of food products to groups of peoples or communities organized in some form, and to fix maximum or minimum prices.

Perhaps the exercise of this power should be lodged in the Council of National Defence, to be used only when directed by the President. Secretary Houston adds: "It is possible that the mere existence of the power would make action unnecessary."

It is estimated that approximately $25,000,000 will be required to carry out the plans outlined.

PEEL OFF CALLUSES WITH THE FINGERS

To painlessly and quickly remove any callus spots from the bottom of the feet apply a few drops of freezone directly upon the hardened skin and shortly it will peel right off without pain, soreness or bleeding.



This drug is an ether compound. It simply loosens the dead callused skin. It doesn't eat it away, but loosens it so it peels right off with the fingers.

A quarter ounce of this freezone costs little at any pharmacy, but is sufficient to remove every corn or callus from one's feet. This is the only way to free the feet from corns and calluses without soreness, danger or infection.

After the corn or callus is lifted away the skin beneath and surrounding, is found pink and healthy, and not inflamed, or even irritated. This is a good thing to know.

GERMAN NERVES WEAR OUT.

Discourtesy Now is General, Newspaper Writer Asserts.

In the last few months it has been noted frequently in both the German and foreign press that the strain of the war is wearing out the nerves of the German people in general and has made good manners almost a thing of the past in the Kaiser's empire. A writer of the Frankfurter Zeitung recently summarized the situation in an article partly reproduced in the London press. He begins by asking if the German people, in the fret and horror of the war, with all its shocks to their nerves and all its calamitous influences on daily life, have become more or less peaceful and reasonable in their conduct. The writer comes to the conclusion that impoliteness and actual rudeness are more prevalent now than in the pre-war days, and that this neglect of the amenities of life is not confined to the "loud-voiced and insolent shopkeeping classes" but is met with in almost all other elements of the community.

The writer singles out the street car as the place where rudeness, insolence, tactlessness and want of regard for the feelings of others may be seen in fullest measure. Here people of all classes and ages are thrown together. The cars are always crowded. Since gasoline and horses disappeared the cars are the only conveyances available.

The persons waiting at the stopping places are described in the article as unmannerly boors, each considering himself more important than the man beside him, each pushing and driving for an advantage. Education, gallantry, breeding — not a vestige of it. In the cars, the writer says, it is rare to see young men and women rise to give their places to the aged and feeble. They have paid for their seats, why should they not keep them? The writer laments this barbarous attitude. He is ashamed of it, he says, and wonders if a change is possible and how it may be best brought about.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Goose That Laid the Golden Egg

By F. A. MITCHEL

"I have heard that you won your wife from the fact that you were a successful author," said Dawson to his friend Sturdevant. "If a man wants to win a woman he must raise himself above his fellow men by doing something that glitters. To wear a gaudy uniform is the easiest way with the ordinary type of woman. But I am not surprised that it required a different sort of prominence to secure Miss Sturdevant. She is a very bright woman and would naturally look up to a man of your caliber."

Sturdevant glanced at the ceiling, then at the floor, then out through the window.

"Yes," he replied, "my wife is a smart woman, but she has no reason to admire me."

"That's modesty for you."

"You don't know anything about women, John. You say a woman to love a man must look up to him. So far, so good. But she is just as likely to love him because she looks down on him. The truth is, the sex is not to be analyzed. This story that I won my wife on account of my literary standing is balderdash. I'll tell you the basis of it if you like."

"Please do so."

"I have always been rather impractical, and Dora is the very reverse. When I met her I was ambitious to write a successful novel. She listened to my talk, sympathized with me, but I could see that she considered me in the clouds.

"'You don't seem to think I'm up to the work of successful scribbling?' I said to her one day, miffed at her want of enthusiasm.

"'I think you're not down to it,' she replied.

"'What do you mean?'

"'Oh, that would take too long to explain.'

"She might have truthfully added, 'I wouldn't attempt to try to fire it into as stupid a brain as yours.'

"I was engaged at that time on my story, 'The Goose That Laid the Golden Egg.'"

"I believe 200,000 copies were sold?" Dawson broke in.

"Three hundred thousand."

"And all the while," interrupted Dawson, "it was you who"—

"Don't be in such a hurry, I'm telling this story. I put $1,000 into the venture. I intended to spend it all on the printing and binding, but Dora persuaded me to have it illustrated. So I paid $400 of the amount for pictures. The book was published through Lampblack & Co., who put their imprint on the title page.

"Three months passed, and I got a check from them for $27.50. The public didn't clamor for the goose that laid the golden egg worth a cent. One reviewer said that it was easy to pick out the goose that didn't lay the golden egg, which complimentary remark evidently referred to the author. Another three months passed, and I got another check for $8.75.

"What was my surprise when the next quarterly payment was made to receive $150. After that one day when I was introduced to a man he looked at me curiously and asked, 'Author of "The Goose That Laid the Golden Egg?"' Surprised, I admitted that I was and with a heart flutter. The next day I was told by a friend that my book was being talked about, and, stopping at a book and news stand, the dealer told me that he was selling it like hot cakes. I asked him to what he attributed the sudden increase of sales, and he replied:

"'The public wants it.'

"This satisfied me that I had at least struck a popular vein, and I hoped to climb the ladder of literary fame.

"To make a long story short, my novel was talked about by everybody, rich and poor, high and low. In six months I had cleared a small fortune; then the sales fell to nothing. I had made some money, but no literary reputation.

"Dora and I were married and went to Europe on a bridal trip. One day while on the voyage over I was twitting her on her want of appreciation of my ability to succeed as an author, when she said:

"'The reviewer who said that it was easy to pick out the goose that didn't lay the golden egg was half right. Now listen to me.

"'One day after your novel had fallen flat,' she went on, 'I concluded to try to stir up an interest in it. I went to all my friends and told them there was a hidden meaning in the title and asked them to guess what it was. They all went about propounding the query to their friends. It got noised about that there was a mystery in the book that did not appear on the surface. I re-enforced the position by propounding the query whether the goose was a goose or a gander. This set people to quarreling as to whether the hero, Tom Phunnyfeller, or the heroine, Miriam Twaddleby, was the mystery. To half my friends I suggested that the book was written to advocate the cause of votes for women; to the other half that it was an attack on the abilities of our sex. That's all. I didn't have to do any more. The public got hungry for the goose, and we got the golden egg.'"

Sturdevant paused.

"Why haven't you followed up your success?" asked Dawson.

"Because my wife would not permit me to kill the goose that laid the golden egg."

A Sepulcher of Broken Hearts.

In the old Franciscan church of the Holy Cross rises one of the two monuments disdainful Florence condescended to give her greatest poet, whose greatest honor lies in his gift to the world at one splendid sweep of a pure and recreated Italian language—until his time halting and feeble—in that immortal masterpiece of literature, the "Divina Commedia."

This church might well be known as the Broken Hearts instead of Santa Croce, for near Dante's cenotaph—his exiled ashes still rest in Ravenna—lies the body of that other terrific genius, Michelangelo, who, broken in spirit, died gladly when the city so dear to his heart fell once more upon dark and tyrannous days. And Galileo is here, too, and Alfieri, and Machiavelli, and many another, a brilliant train.

Michelangelo's last work is in the nearby church of San Lorenzo, in the mortuary chapel of the Medici, the great house which deigned to favor him with its patronage or its enmity throughout his life.—National Geographic Magazine.

His Epitaph.

A recent automobile accident in an up state county resulted in the death of the driver and the injury of two passengers.

The coroner summoned several witnesses, among them a farmer living near the scene of the accident. There was voluminous testimony regarding the high speed at which the car traveled. Witnesses said, too, that the road was in bad repair. The coroner finally reached the farmer who lived near the scene.

"What would you say about this accident, Mr. Swiggett?" the coroner asked.

"Well, if I was writin' that young man's epitaph," the witness drawled, "I'd say he died tryin' to git sixty miles a hour out of a ten mile road."

A Famous Dresser.

Joachim Murat was in his day the best dressed man in the world. Born in 1767 in a village near Cahors the son of a day laborer, he was sent to a Jesuit school to be educated for the priesthood. He ran away, joined the army, and sixteen years after he had become a lieutenant he was a field marshal, duke of Cleves and Berg, with Napoleon's sister, Caroline, as his wife, and finally, by the grace of his brother-in-law, was created king of Naples. In all stations he paid the closest attention to his attire and wore in battle gold embroidered and jeweled uniforms which would have made him conspicuous at a court function, and dressed himself as for a review when he was led forth to be shot.—New York Tribune.

POTATO SALAD (WARM).

Five potatoes, two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, one cup of water, two eggs, two teaspoons sugar, one teaspoon mustard, salt and pepper, one-third cup vinegar. Melt the butter, add the flour and cook until bubbling, add the water, cook until smooth, remove from the fire, cool slightly and add the well-beaten eggs, then the vinegar and seasonings. Return to the fire and cook until smooth and thick. Have ready sliced potatoes slightly warm, pour the warm dressing over them, and mix lightly. Garnish with hard boiled eggs.

Had Violent Coughing Fits

Looked Like Consumptive

Mrs. Mary Wheten, North Forks, N.S., writes: "Having taken five bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, during the past few weeks, to relieve a chronic cough and general throat trouble, allow me to express my unbounded satisfaction and thanks as to its sterling qualities. A short time ago I became subject to violent coughing fits at night and directly after rising in the morning. I began losing weight, and all my friends cheerfully informed me that I was going into consumption.

"After taking the 'Dr. Wood's' I am pleased to relate that the cough has entirely disappeared and I have since regained the lost weight. I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup."

There are many imitations of "Dr. Wood's" on the market so see that none of these so-called "pine syrups" are handed out to you when you ask for "Dr. Wood's." It has been on the market for twenty-five years, is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c and 50c.

GERMANY SOON TO BE 'DRY.'

Austrian Brewers Also Will Suspend in a Few Months.

Confirmation of cable dispatches indicated that both Germany and Austria are likely to go "bone dry" so far as beer is concerned if the war lasts much longer, is found in recent copies of newspapers from Berlin and Vienna. On March 18 one of the leading brewers of Vienna was quoted as asserting that the production of beer in Austria was assured only until the end of August, as the Government had refused to allot any more barley for brewing purposes.

The Berliner Tageblatt, in announcing that the Imperial Grain Bureau had refused to give the breweries any barely since the middle of February because of the necessity of using all available grain for food, said that the barley on hand in the breweries of North Germany would last only about two months, and that, consequently, it was probable that no more beer would be sold in that part of the empire after May.

The breweries in South Germany appear to be in a stronger position regarding supplies of raw material, presumably because the larger part of their output goes to the army, but Munich papers tell of a recent reduction of the beer shipped to other parts of Germany to 20 per cent. of the normal quantity. The Bavarian officials have allowed the percentage of malt to be cut from 7.7 to 5, provided the beverage thus produced is sold as "thin beer."

Pasture is the cheapest food that can be produced for hogs in summer. Hubbard squash and cabbage make excellent green winter feed for hens.

RHEUMATISM CONQUERED

"I have been for the last two years a cripple with Rheumatic and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I tried almost everything known to medical science to relieve me of the intense pain and inflammation. AND NOW FOR SEEDING

Soil Should Be Allowed to Warm Up Before Planting.

SOME FIRST CROPS TO PUT IN

Beans Are a Splendid Food Product to Grow This Year—How to Proceed in Several Lines.

(By S. C. JOHNSTON, Vegetable Specialist, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Having discussed the methods of preparing the garden soil to receive the seed we now turn to the sowing of the seed itself. There is no need to hurry the sowing of the seed. Better results will be obtained if the amateur gardener will wait until the soil is warm and easily worked. The vegetables discussed are arranged as nearly as possible according to the time they should be planted.

LETTUCE. Lettuce is grown for its leaves, and is our best known salad plant. It is a short-season plant, and is often grown to follow or precede another crop. It is quite hardy and may be planted quite early in the spring, grown to maturity, and followed with a tender crop such as tomatoes, or it may be planted between any plants of the cabbage family. It is a good plan in a small garden to plant only a few feet at one time and follow this with successive plantings made every ten days or two weeks until July 1st. The lettuce seed may be sown in rows comparatively thinly at a depth of a quarter of an inch. The plants should be thinned to stand two inches apart.

If one desires large single heads of lettuce the plants should be thinned to stand from seven to nine inches apart. The thinnings may be transplanted to another part of the garden.

RADISH. The radish plant is grown for its roots, which are eaten raw just as soon as they are large enough to use. It is quite hardy, and may be planted very early in the spring. Radishes are frequently sown with other crops which are not such rapid growers, such as parsnips. They should, however, be pulled out before the parsnips or other crops need the ground. Successive planting is also advised for this crop. Radish seed may be planted in rows, four inches apart or broadcasted, the depth preferred being from a quarter to half an inch only. Radish as a general rule require no thinning, and the soil between the rows should be kept loose with the hoe. A crop of winter radish may be obtained if the seed is sown about the first of August. These should be thinned out to three inches apart.

SPINACH. Spinach is a short season crop which is grown to provide table greens. The plant matures in about six weeks from planting, and seed should be sown very early in the spring, as the plants run to seed during the hot summer months. The seeds may be planted in rows or broadcasted, and should be sown at a depth of one half inch. Successive planting may be made if so desired. When the leaves are large enough to use they may be pulled off or the whole plant may be cut from the root.

ONION. The onion is grown for seasoning, pickling, and for eating raw. A large percentage of onions stored for winter use are grown from seed planted in the soil very early in the spring. The soil should be rich, moist and well drained, but fresh manure is not the best to apply. The seeds should be planted at a depth of about one-half inch, and the rows should be from twelve to fourteen inches apart. The seed should be planted very thinly so that there will be no need for extra thinning of the onions. Cultivation should cease when the onion tops are such a size as to prevent easy work. In the fall when the tops are about two-thirds died down the onions should be pulled and laid in windrows so arranged that the bulbs are covered with the tops of the onions. This prevents any sunburn which causes considerable trouble in storage. After they have been kept in this position for five or six days they may be gathered up and placed in a slat box or basket and tied up some way so that the rain will not get at them and the wind will have plenty of chance to circulate around the bulbs. The tops may be removed from the onions at this time if so desired, or they may be left on. Dutch sets may be planted as close together as they will stand in a straight, row very early in the season. They should be barely covered with soil, which should be well firmed by trampling on it, and the green onions should be pulled as soon as they are ready for use.

PEAS. Peas may be planted very early in the season, and for the early crop the seed should be sown in a furrow of two inches deep and the seeds placed an inch apart. Some arrangements should be made so that the pea vines will have some support. Limbs of trees or chicken wire may be used for this purpose, as the vines will cling to this for support and will be kept up from the ground. This support should be set preferably at the time of planting. The soil should be drawn up around the vine.

BEANS. Generally speaking, it is not a good practice to add fresh manure to the soil where one expects to grow beans. They prefer a moist, deep loam. The seeds should be planted fairly early in the spring. The rows being at least eighteen inches apart. A furrow two inches deep may be made with the corner of a hoe and the seeds placed from two to three inches apart in the bottom of this furrow. Another way which is sometimes followed in planting beans is to make holes two inches deep twelve inches apart and in each hole three or four seeds be placed. It is always advised not to touch the plant when they are wet.

Practically all the O.A.C. dairy students competent to act as head butter or cheesemakers, were engaged before the close of the late term.

Polishing Coral.

Although Venice is a center for tourist trade in coral and shell cameos, coral itself is neither gathered nor worked there. The manufacture is confined to Terre del Greco. Polishing coral in quantities is an interesting feature of the work. It is placed in a small bag of strong, raw linen together with crushed pumice stone, and the bag is shaken in a special tube with a hole for drainage under a small column of water. When the coral is well pumicated it is washed and passed into a clean bag. Instead of the pumice the so called 'pulimento" (red or white) is used, and the former operation is repeated, first without water, then with a little and finally with much water, when the coral has become brilliant. What the "pulimento" is the inhabitants of Terre del Greco, while so proud and jealous of their industry, have never taken the trouble to find out, as, indeed, what the "aqua ossigenata" (hydrogen peroxide) is, which is used to change the color of the coral, black when extracted from the sea, to red. As for the "pulimento," it is not different from that which the jewelers use to polish precious stones.—Exchange.

Guarding the Bank of England.

The Bank of England is quite the best guarded institution in the world. No burglar or bank thief has ever succeeded in making it part with a penny. The great outer doors are so finely balanced that a clerk can, by pressing a knob under his desk, instantly shut them in the face of any one making a dash for the street. They cannot be opened except by special machinery.

In recesses near the doors are hidden four guardians, who, without being seen themselves, watch all visitors through mirrors.

Special and costly precautions are taken to guard the bullion department, where the gold is stored. It has been stated that the whole department is submerged every night in several feet of water by machinery. The same machinery would be also set in action automatically if at any time during the day the place were tampered with.—London Globe.

Looked Like a Mistake.

One of the big eastern structural companies, having a contract to build a traveling crane above a coal handling plant at a dock, decided to employ a surgeon to remain "on the job." The honored one was given a note which read, "Please hand this to the foreman in charge and tell him that you will look after any of the men who may be injured by falling from the work." The doctor without ado went out to the plant. He looked up at the false work that was being built in preparation for the crane, and it was so high that the men on it looked like liliputians. He thought of the possibilities if one of them should fall to the dock, and he said to the foreman: "I think the company made a mistake. It should have addressed this letter to an undertaker."—Argonaut.

SAUSAGE AND CABBAGE.

Take a solid round head of cabbage that will weigh about three pounds. Cut off the top and hollow it out so that there is only a shell left. Mix together one pound of sausage, one cupful of bread crumbs, a very little milk, one egg and a pinch of nutmeg. Put this into the shell, having it about three-quarters full. Tie it up in a cloth and steam for two hours. Serve with tomato sauce or catsup. The cabbage taken from the shell can be made into salad for the next meal.

"TIZ" FOR TIRED AND SORE FEET

Use "Tiz" for puffed-up, burning, aching, callousod feet and corns

Why go limping around with aching, puffed-up feet—feet so tired, chafed, sore and swollen you can hardly get your shoes on or off? Why don't you get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" from the drug store now and gladden your tortured feet?

"Tiz" makes your feet glow with comfort; takes down swellings and draws the soreness and misery right out of feet that chafe, smart and burn. "Tiz" instantly stops pain in corns, callouses and bunions. "Tiz" is glorious for tired, aching, sore feet. No more shoe tightness —no more foot torture.

MAY STOP FLOOR TRADING

British and U. S. Government May be Buying up all Wheat.

Winnipeg, April 20.—There is considerable uncertainty in grain exchange circles following a report that the allied Governments of Great Britain and the U. S. are buying up the entire wheat market and will control the supply and prices in the near future. The council of the local grain exchange is said to be seriously considering stopping trading in future, while the present abnormal conditions obtain. Some grain men even go so far as to say that all floor trading may be brought to an end before very long on account of the Government's control of the market.

New Vigour and Strength For The Run-Down System

More Proof That Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is Accomplishing Great Good in This City—Many More Cures Reported

PETERBOROUGH, Ont., March 19.—In the most simple and natural way imaginable this food cure is restoring to health and vigor people who have been ailing for years and apparently getting no lasting benefits from the medicines used. Here is the reason:

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is composed of the elements from which Nature forms new, rich blood and thereby nourishes the cells and tissues of the body. By supplying these elements in condensed and easily assimilated form so that the most delicate digestive system can make use of them, the Nerve Food brings health and strength to the weak and suffering.

It works in a different method to most medicines, and as a result the benefits obtained are both thorough and lasting.

Mrs. John Roach, 581 Elm St., Peterborough, Ont., writes: "About four years ago, I received splendid results from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I had been troubled with nervous debility, sleeplessness, and my system was run down generally. At times the pain in the top of my head was unbearable; and I also had severe pains across my kidneys. There would be nights and nights that I could not sleep. I had tried many remedies as well as doctor's medicine, without their doing me any good. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to me, so I secured some and commenced using it. Finding myself benefitted, I kept on using them until I got better. Before long I could eat and sleep well, and my headache was all gone. I have recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to many friends, as I think there is nothing better for nervousness or run down system."

Mrs. J. Riedeman, 184 Adeline St., Peterborough, Ont., writes:—"I was troubled with nervous headaches, which, at times were so severe that I could not do my work. I also suffered from indigestion and pains in the back. From reading in the newspapers of the benefits other people were deriving from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I was encouraged to try it. I began using them, finding good results from the beginning, so I continued the treatment until I obtained great benefit. Now I do not have the nervous headaches so frequently or so severe. My appetite is much better, and in fact, I am better in many respects. I would not wish to be without Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in the house now. I have recommended this treatment to many of my friends, who also find good results from their use.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

FOOTBALL BEHIND TRENCHES.

Tommies, "Bleuets," and "Poilus" Have Impromptu Sports.

NEW YORK, April 23. — Even if sports are to be abandoned in the United States, they receive as much of official encouragement as possible at the west front behind the trenches. Impromptu golf matches, cross-country races, wrestling and boxing matches are held, and almost all of the free moments of the Tommies and Poilus are devoted to some kind of sport.

Football is the most popular sport, however, due to the fact that a field can be marked out easily on any piece of ground that is fairly level. The following letter from one who witnessed a football game behind the lines is testimony to its popularity:

"You cannot imagine a more magnificent sight than the vast field presented. There was an immense plain, in the centre of which the football field was indicated by a rectangle formed of 5,000 French soldiers. At one end an improvised little grandstand had been made, composed of fallen trees, all kinds of planks, and an odd collection of chairs, all decorated gaily with army flags. The goal posts were regimental flags, and the umpire, the army chaplain, who had girded up his cassock to his knees and entered thoroughly into the sport. The contest was between the young soldiers of Paris and the old soldiers on the front, or as we say here, between the "Bleuets" and the "Poilus." The game was arranged by the President of the French Sporting Society of Paris. It was a great contest, splendidly played. The younger soldiers won. After this there were cross-country runs and bomb-throwing exercises. The regiment's records were excellent, some men throwing fifty-six yards. All this, mind you, while the German cannon were roaring a few miles off."

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery remember the blood forming qualities Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by its use flood the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to secure lasting benefits.

BEST OF ALL ASSETS

"God Almighty hates a quitter!" said Tom Reed of Maine. The nation roared applause from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the lakes to the Gulf for the virile vigour of this rough expression of manhood. The sentiment is one of perennial value.

But what makes the man who does not know when he is defeated and fights to the finish, be the finish his or his opponents Is it not character; and is not character at bottom only the moral equivalent of stalwart backbone?

The quitter fails and falls because he lacks the force of character, the strength of will, which sees possibilities beyond capacities and regards obstacles as opportunities, discouragements as incentives. The fight which is worth attempting at all is the fight which deserves to be fought through. "It's dogged as does it," as when Heenan said to Sayers, "Now, Tummy dad, 'tis thou or I!" and won the last round and the match.

There was character. It may not have been ideal character. It certainly was not character in its highest expression. But it was the sum of the man's whole personality. All the power of him, all the pith and punch of invincible determination, went into the winning of his fight. The bulldog shows the same strength of will when he lets himself be choked or cut to pieces rather than let go his grip on the other dog's jugular.

It is this readiness to be killed, if need be, if one can not best one's adversary, which wins the battle of life for men and the wars of nations for their existence. Such a readiness is a form of character and the product whether aware or unaware, of a fight to achieve character. It is the reaction of the spirit to the long working of life and circumstances upon the raw and plastic ore of human nature.

Make money, then, and do so honorably. Get understanding—for the sake of social service as well as your own growth. Win power over men through right methods of approach and appeal. But with all your getting and gains achieve character above all.

Nothing can take the place of character. It knows of no substitute. Cleverness, cunning, and shrewdness are paper money. Character is the gold which alone gives them value. Pierpont Morgan rated character above collateral as security for loans and credit. Character is the best of all assets. — Spokane Spokesman-Review.

WEIRD CONTRASTS SHOWN IN MESSES

by projectiles. The facade of one place where the afternoon tea habit is now being cultivated is pierced in but one spot by a shell. The result is much like that produced in the face of an otherwise charming lady by the absence of a front tooth.

That particular shell pursuing its study of the interior dropped into the dining room and did so little damage there that the beautiful old Chinese pottery in a case on the wall remains undisturbed. The glass in the windows of the room has been criss-crossed with trips of paper so that it will not be broken by the vibration of artillery fire.

Under such conditions an officers' mess is rather a pleasant place even when the enemy, with entire lack of consideration is sending over "big stuff" at dinner time, this forcing the gentleman just back from leave, who is telling of what he had to eat at the Savoy last night under the food regulations, to raise his voice unduly, when he declares that the mess chef, a pastry cook in civilian life, will soon have the London fellows "beaten to it."

But it would be doing wrong to the "brass caps" of the staff to leave the reader in ignorance of the fact that most of them have had experience of life in the trenches and know the difference between paradise and no man's land.

HOW THEY DO IT THERE.

By way of contrast with the dignified mess behind the lines, here is a rough sketch of another close up to the front. The mess room is an iron hut of circular form hid in an excavation on the side of a hill. Historic ground lies all around. There are but two officers in this isolated artillery post, the nearest to the enemy and in the mud-floored, sand-bagged roofed hut they direct the operations of their battery as well as eat. A single candle stuck on an empty cigarette case gives a faint light which is augmented in honour of the visitor to the mess by the addition of a second candle. A primitive fireplace at one end of the little hut has been contrived out of noting used in trench-making and a few bricks from an adjacent rubbish heap that was formerly a village. A fire is smouldering in the improvised grate, and as the senior combatant officer stirs it up, Rembrandtesque lights and shadows fill the little hut. Three chairs, a rather rickety table, made or rough planks, and covered on top with oilcloth, indicate fastidious taste. The handle of a broom depending from couple of iron links and provided with S links here and there makes an admirable hall rack. There are a few official records and some letters awaiting censoring in a little cupboard. That is the sum total of the mess furniture.

HERE COMES EIGHT-INCHERS.

While we wait the result of the instructions to have lunch for three, the senior officer who was not very long ago a practical science student at a Canadian University and his junior, another Canadian explain the flight of shells with practical illustrations.

"Here comes one now," says the demonstrator as the sound of a projectile travelling overhead is heard.

"That is an eight-inch shell, the Bosche is using against some of our gun positions over the hill. Would you like to see it burst?"

A safe reserved seat encouraged me to say "yes." The door was thrown open and we watched the shells strike and explode on and over the hill. Each shell has its own sound and the trained ear of the artilleryman identifies them all. The bigger high explosive projectiles of the enemy have the conventional "boom," but the 5.9's have a sharp crackling sound unlike any other.

The most interesting information given during the demonstration was that a shell coming straight in line, and therefore highly dangerous, can be readily distinguished from one passing a short distance on either side. "You will often see a group of men engaged in conversation while under shell fire," said the senior combatant officer, 'pause for a minute when the first whirr of an approaching shell is heard and then go on with their talk quite unconcerned. Their cultivated sense of sound has told them that the shell is to one side or the other.

Some authorities argue that the straight on shell is not heard till it passes. My own very limited experience is against that theory for I assuredly heard a 5.9 that burst five yards short of me a few days ago.

No more informing half hour have I spent at any mess than while we ate our meat and vegetables and rounded up the meal with some sago and tea from a tin mug. Like a good many other Canadians over here, the young artillerymen are trying to finish a difficult job not to embark on a career but they are as keen as if they intended to spend the balance of their lives as big gun experts.

One of the duties laid upon officers is that of censoring the letters of their men.

SOME AMUSING DECORATIONS

A few words about another mess I happened into recently will help the reader in Canada to realize how varied are the experiences of both officers and men. Coming up from comfortable rest quarters where it had been for over a month a Canadian brigade found itself in a little village near the trenches were almost the only shelter was in the cellars of partially destroyed houses. In a ruin more pretentious than its fellows the officers' mess was located. In one corner the sky was visible. The floor was of mud. Some hastily gathered bricks hedged about a fire, the smoke from which took its own untrammelled way upward—when the wind permitted. The utter desolation of the hole was relieved by crayon drawings on the plaster of the walls. There was one amazing life-size half-length portrait of a Scots officer wearing a glengarry, the bulbous nose with a flick of red emphasising it and the general appearance of the cartoonist's victim told the story as plainly as if the sketch had been labelled "the morning after."

There were other caricatures by the same artist—of a monocled officer with a retreating chin and of some French ladies done after the style of la vie Parisienne. But none of them were up to the high standard of the bibulous Scot. I wonder if genius was rewarded by confinement to a cellar billet or whether the lampoon followed in the train of something of that sort. The temporary mess of the—Mounted Rifles was the oddest combination of squalor and artistic expression I have yet seen.

CANADA

"In order that 500,000 troops of the Canadian Expeditionary Force of second contingent in Canada may be secured for active operations overseas, a call is made to the manhood of Canada to volunteer for home defence."

SIR SAM HUGHES-KNIGHT, Minister of Militia and Defence.

"It is the duty of the country to let our troops see their numbers are going to be kept up to the fullest extent."

Right Hon. ANDREW BONAR LAW, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The Call To Arms For Home Defence

To provide adequately for home defence and release, as reinforcements for the victors of Vimy Ridge, the Overseas units held here, men are still needed.

Canadian Home Defence Force

Enlistment in the Canadian Defence Force is for one year—or for the period of the war and six months after if required. Clothing, equipment and rations provided as in the C. E. F. Pay the same as that for Militia on active service, with separation allowance for married men.

The call is for men between 18 and 45, physically fit and keen to serve.

For full particulars enquire at Armories of the Regiments listed below.

MEN STILL REQUIRED FOR OVERSEAS IN THE CANADIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCES.

More men are required for reinforcements at the Front. Those who desire to volunteer for Overseas Service may enlist through one of the regiments ordered to mobilize for Home Defence.

labouring man anxious to serve at this time, may have his family and home in the City and be unable to afford the loss involved in serving on the farm. In such a case, the employer ought to help. He owes it to the State.

Then there is the employee who gets a fortnight's summer vacation with pay. The proposal in Toronto is that employers this year extend this period to three weeks' period helping the farmer. It would be useless sending men who are not strong and fit. Next to an experienced man, one who is strong and willing should meet the needs of the farmer and no man should regard as a sacrifice, spending his summer holidays in this way at this time.

In Toronto the Daughters of the Empire invited the wives and mothers of soldiers to send their names and addresses if they wanted to have their back garden plots dug. Some hundreds of applications were received and, had there been many thousand, all would have had prompt attention.

A SYMPATHETIC PLAN.

A sympathetic plan was adopted, that proved successful, and that might be adopted by other cities and towns with advantage: John MacPherson, Y.M.C.A. Secretary at Hong Kong, now home on furlough, a graduate of Toronto University, and a farmer's son, undertook the work of inspection. Each lot was visited and reported on. In some cases the ground did not look promising, and Mr. MacPherson persuaded the applicant not to disturb it, but all other cases were distributed among young men in banks, offices, warehouses and stores in the city and one week completed the actual digging.

Arrangements were made with the local Horticulture Society to provide suitable seed free of charge and to supervise the gardens during the growing time.

I am a believer in the value of reflex influence, the by-product, and in this case the man who does the digging renders a service. The soldier's wife or mother writes over to France a letter that cheers one soldier because he finds someone at home has a heart, and the joy of having fresh lettuce, radishes, tomatoes, beans, carrots, beets, potatoes, of one's own growing may be the first step towards gardening in a larger way and possibly may furnish the influence needed to turn the thoughts of some of our soldiers to farming on their return.

The War Production Club of Toronto has purchased five tractors and plough outfits, and will have them manned immediately and put out in different directions at the command of the farmers, who will be expected to pay for their ploughing, a rate per acre that will cover expenses and wear and tear. It is hoped that these five tractors will be kept busy right through the Spring, Summer and Autumn This may cheapen the cost of living in Toronto. The result will be watched with interest.

Every municipality could adopt this plan with profit to its own constituency and to the great benefit of Canada, of the Empire, and of humanity.

U. S. STUDENTS.

Special Privilege Given to Those in Attendance at Illinois University.

OTTAWA, April 21.—R. B. Bennett, Director of National Service, has received a telegram that Illinois University Agricultural College has arranged to release at once all of its students who may desire to take up farm work in Canada. This agricultural college has over five thousand students. Wm. H. Thompson, one of the delegates sent to the United States by the Dominion Government, last night addressed a mass meeting of the students at the college at Champagne, Illinois, on "Fight or Farm to Win the War," and as a result two hundred experienced farmers' sons will leave for Western Canada.

TAG YOUR DOG BEFORE THE POLICE TAG YOU

Chief Thompson's note has resulted in a batch of dog tags going into circulation, but the number is only a small fraction of the ultimate issue. Hence the police slogan is "Eventually why not now," and after May 1st summons are expected to boost the civic revenue collected by the Police Court.

Spring Skin Troubles

Every spring, for years, Mr. Amos Smith, of Port Hood, C.B., suffered from boils, until he used Zam-Buk. He writes:

"Each spring they would return and break out on my hands and arms. At times they were so bad that I could scarcely work. I tried various remedies without receiving any benefit. I consulted a doctor, but he was unable to cure me.

"Then a friend recommended Zam-Buk. The improvement after using the first box was surprising. I continued until the boils had entirely disappeared, and I have never had any return since."

Zam-Buk is also unequalled for eczema, ulcers, abscesses, scalp sores, ringworm, blood-poisoning, piles, cuts, burns, scalds, etc. All druggists, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto; 50c. box, 3 for $1.25.

COURT HOUSE INSURANCE SETTLED.

To the Editor:

Dear Sir,—Satisfactory settlement has been made re the above. Delay in taking the initiative to restore the building has been caused as a result of the difference of appraisement of Mr. Wm. Langford and that of Messrs. J. Finnie and J. G. Graham.

The adjustor for the various Insurance Companies requested some time to consider, and after obtaining the figures of a third party's appraisement, response was made in accordance with the appraisement of Messrs Finnie and Graham, whose figures were in the neighborhood of $19000.00 and Mr. Langford's figures in the neighborhood of $13,000.00.

The Committee acknowledge the interest taken by Messrs. Hill and Weddell on behalf of their agent, Mr. Hope of Otonabee, also the interest taken by Mr. Richardson, of Norwood in bringing about a settlement satisfactory to all concerned. By order of the Committee.

THE MARRIAGE MUCKERS.

Put up price of the licenses so every sneak may pay at least ten dollars for the chance to make his get-away from service for his country by marrying a wife and taking up domestic instead of foreign strife. The Lord knows there are slackers enough already here on numerous pretences, though none, of course, from fear; but there's no brand of slackers that history will note so shameless as the sneaker behind a petticoat. And by the self same token, the sort of girl who can accept one as a husband is shameless as the man. The wife who wants a husband who starts in on a sneak is certainly in spirit unutterably weak, and what will be the actions from such a parent stem? What permanence and prestige could ever come from them? If these must be our substance, the women and the men to make the future nation, God help our country then! Put up the price of licenses! Although we may decry the lofty cost of living, that cost can't be too high. Shame on the marriage muckers! Shame on the couples who combine against their country to sneak and snivel through! The laws they're undermining protect the dastard deed, but pray the God of nations that they shall never breed!

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP

YOU SHOULD USE MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS

Sleeplessness is caused by the nervous system becoming deranged.

Perhaps too much worry has gotten on your nerves, perhaps you have overworked yourself, or have been excessive in your use of tobacco, but whatever the cause, the nervous system must be built up again before restful sleep can be assured.

Those whose rest is broken into by frightful dreams, nightmares, sinking and smothering sensations, who wake up in the morning as tired as they went to bed can have their old, peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep back again by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. John Sloan, Haley Station, Ont., writes: "Over a year ago I was very nervous. I could not sleep at night, and I would faint at the slightest fright. I tried several doctors, but they did me practically no good. I noticed your advertisement, and immediately tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am proud to say they cured me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box or three for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HAIG'S TROOPS ARE DRIVING AHEAD

Samarra Station Captured by Gen. Maude

BRITISH HAVE SMASHED THROUGH AS FAR AS THE ST. QUENTIN CANAL

Field Marshall Haig's Report This Morning Announces Most Important Gains at Several Points---Progress Made on a Wide Front South of Bapaume-Cambrai Road--General Maude's Victorious Army Still Advancing

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER.

LONDON, April 24.—Field Marshal Haig gained more ground in the resumed British offensive to-day. "We made further progress to the east of Monchy Le Preux and Roeux," the statement said. "To the south of the Bapaume-Cambrai Road we gained ground on a wide front. To the east of Epehy we reached the St. Quentin Canal. In the neighbourhood of Vendhul, we also captured the villages of Villiers Plouich and Beaucamp."

The greatest gain which the British push achieved to-day was in the thrust against the Cambrai-St. Quentin line. Haig's report curtly mentioned his forces had reached the St. Quentin Canal, in the neighbourhood of Vendhul.

Villers Plouich has been so closely invested by British troops for four or five days that its capture was certain. Beaucamp is just adjacent to Trescault. Beaucamp and Villers Plouich lie about a mile apart on a straight line seven and a half miles south-west of Cambrai. Trescault was occupied by the British yesterday.

While Haig was achieving his victorious thrust at the Cambrai-St. Quentin line, there was no diminution in the power of his smashing away at the Germans to the east of Monchy Lepreux. Roeux, captured to-day, is on a line with Gavrelle, taken yesterday, and is eight and a half miles distant from Douai.

"At Croisilles and north of Gavrelle," the report said, "the enemy constantly repeated unsuccessful counter attacks, determinedly and regardless of losses. The positions we gained yesterday we maintained. Particularly violent counter attacks at Gavrelles were successfully beaten off.

"Yesterday's prisoners exceeded 1,500, including 30 officers. More are being taken to-day."

PARIS, April 24.—(French Official).—General Nivelle's troops are holding the positions they wrested from the enemy in last week's great offensive movement, despite all German counter attacks. The official statement of to-day mentioned a number of these German assaults designed to shake the French grip on their lines, all of which were repulsed. A number of scattered actions are reported.

"From St. Quentin to the Oise the artillery was very active," the statement said. "Two German reconnaissance attacks were checked prior to the forces reaching our lines. French patrols imprisonsed several Germans here. In the Hurtebise and Craonne regions there were artillery struggles and various actions, in which the French made prisoners. Near Rheims two German attacks were checked. In the Champagne there was grenade fighting, and at Eparges a French clean up party imprisoned several of the enemy."

LONDON, April 24.—The occupation of Samarra Station and a vast haul of supplies from the defeated Turks was announced in the official statement to-day. "We occupied Samarra Station early yesterday," the statement said. "Our captures included 16 locomotives, 224 railway wagons and two barges containing munitions. The enemy casualties were heavy."

Samarra Station is sixty miles north-west of Bagdad, and is an important centre, located on the Tigris River.

LONDON, April 24.—"This is the last and deciding push, for we soon shall be able to hold out no longer," reads the diary of a German officer who was captured yesterday in Flanders.

Germans are to-day fighting in masses. Great numbers of them are mowed down by our British artillery as they advance towards the British lines in useless counter attacks.

ROME, April 24.—The "Corriere Italia," the clerical organ, declares that it is able to confirm reports published in Spain that the immediate family of the German Kaiser is exerting pressure on him to abdicate.

Little importance is attached to this story in Italian political circles.

BERLIN, via London, April 24.—"England's might has suffered a heavy, sanguinary defeat through the foresight of German headquarters and the tenacious desire of our brave troops for victory," declared to-day's official statement. "The army will face new battles with complete confidence."

Battery Has Arrived Safely

The following message has been received in the city concerning the safe arrival in England of the seventeenth draft of the Cobourg Heavy Battery. The message reads as follows:

"I am in receipt of a cable from Lieut. Ponton, Officer in charge of draft from Cobourg Heavy Battery, stating that they have arrived and all is well."

If you have not yet taken part in a standing field crop competition get into one this year. No one thing has done more to increase production per acre than have these competitions.

GROCERS WILL SELL BREAD

Mr. S. H. Mitchell, representing the retail grocers of the city, to-day announces that the grocers of the city have rescinded their decision to discontinue the sale of bread on the grounds that such a course would inflict a hardship upon the consumers. The grocers will continue the sale of bread as usual.

BIG AUTOMOBILE PARADE WILL BE SPECTACULAR EVENT

It is Expected That at Least Three Hundred Cars Will be In Line For the Parade That Will Signalize Opening of Motor Show

THE LINE OF TRAVEL

Following is the formation and line of travel of the Motor Show Automobile Parade which is being conducted on Thursday night under the auspices of the Motor Association.

All cars come into Water street at 7 p.m. from Brock street, turn south on Water street and form in two lines one on each side of the street. These two lines will extend down Water street and west on Charlotte street as far as George. Motors should form themselves into these two lines before the parade starts. Then the two band trucks will be located at the proper position in the parade and the line will start in single file at 7.30. The right hand line will start first, the head of this line going West on Charlotte street. As the rear end of this line crosses George street the head car on the left side of Charlotte will fall in behind and the whole parade will then be in motion. Follow the car ahead all the time.

The route will be West of Charlotte to Park, North to Hunter, East to George, South to the C.P.R. Turn at the C.P.R. going into the yard and around the garden block, coming out to George, and turn to North going up the right side of the street. This will double the parade and give the participants a chance to view the others. The parade will pass on up George street to Antrim street, East on Antrim to Water, North to Smith, West to George, South to London, West to Aylmer, and South to McDonnel.

At McDonnel and Aylmer streets the head car will turn East on McDonnel, the second car continuing down Aylmer, the third car going East on McDonnel, and the fourth car going down Aylmer and so on. This will divide the parade into two divisions. The one going East on McDonnel will turn South on George to Murray, then East until the head reaches Aylmer, when this line will close up next to the right hand curb, stop, and unload. The line going down Aylmer will turn East on right hand side of Murray, North on George, and West on McDonnel until the head reaches Aylmer, then close up on right hand curb, stop, and unload. This will leave the two lines of cars all parked on both sides of McDonnel, George, and Murray streets, and will avoid confusion. The bands should both turn from Aylmer into McDonnel and pass around George and Murray after the parade stops so as to run the head cars up opposite the entrance of the Armouries so that the bands can play there while the cars are unloading. Chief Thompson has promised ample police protection to the cars. Both the 57th Regiment Band and the Salvation Army band will take part in the parade.

Pte. Percy Mann, late 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

DIED OF WOUNDS.

Pte. John McGregor, late 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

WOUNDED.

Pte. Gus Rose, late 93rd Battalion, 65 Lansdowne street.

Pte. John Morrow, late 93rd Battalion, 1 1-2 Simcoe street.

Pte. John McGarvey, late 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

Pte. W. E. Snider, late 93rd Battalion, Glen Alda.

Corp. Arthur Lumley, infantry, 188 Reid street.

Pte. John Angus Louden, infantry, late 93rd Battalion, 499 Donegal St.

Pte. John W. Donnelly late 93rd Battalion, 184 Brock street.

PTE GUS ROSE.

Pte. Gus Rose, the well known local City League baseball pitcher, was wounded in the fighting at Vimy Ridge. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Rose, 65 Lansdowne street have received an official message from Ottawa stating that he was admitted to the Australian General Hospital at Wimereux on April 11th suffering from a gun shot wound in the head. Pte. Rose who was born in Peterborough enlisted here with the 93rd and after going overseas with Lt.-Col. Johnston's unit was transferred to the 18th Canadians.

PTE. JOHN MORROW.

Mrs John Morrow, 160 1-2 Simcoe street received official word yesterday that her husband, Pte John Morrow formerly of the 93rd Battalion has been admitted to No. 32 Stationary Hospital, Wimereux, April 14th suffering from concussion. Pte. Morrow joined the 93rd Battalion late in 1915 and did good work on the recruiting staff, afterwards being appointed to the military police of the battalion.

PTE. J. McGARVEY.

Pte. J. McGarvey who enlisted in Peterborough with the 93rd Battalion soon after the organisation of that unit and went overseas as a member of the 93rd Bugle Band is officially reported wounded, his name appearing in to-day's list from Ottawa. Pte. McGarvey's relatives live in Ireland, where he was born. He is well known in Peterborough.

PTE. W. E. SNIDER.

Pte. W. E. Snider, a Glen Alda member of the 93rd Battalion is another in the long list of wounded today.

PTE. PERCY MANN.

Mr. Sherwood Mann, 30 Lafayette avenue, received the sad news to-day that his son, Pte. Percy Mann, of the Mounted Rifles, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was killed in action on April 9th. Pte. Mann, who was born in Otonabee, but had lived in the city for six years, was among the first to enlist in the 93rd Battalion, being a member of A company. He was slightly wounded soon after going to France, but returned after a month in hospital. He celebrated his eighteenth birthday in France. The family will have the sympathy of the community.

PTE. CECIL BENNETT.

Pte. Cecil Bennet, who enlisted in the 93rd Battalion here, and was transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front, has been killed in action, according to an official message received to-day from Ottawa. Pte. Bennett was a member of the military police of the 93rd Battalion when Lt.-Col. Johnston's unit went overseas.

PTE. JOHN McGREGOR.

Pte. John McGregor, a Peterborough member of the 93rd Battalion and among the first to enlist in that unit is officially reported died of wounds, the sad news having been received from Ottawa to-day. A brother of Pte. McGregor is also overseas.

PTE. JOHN W. DONNELLY.

Mrs. Geo. Donnelly, 184 Brock street, received official word to-day that her son, Pte. John W. Donnelly of the Mounted Rifles, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was admitted to No. 2 Australian General Hospital, Boulogne, on April, wounded slightly in the shoulder. Pte. Donnelly went overseas as a member of No. 5 platoon, B company.

CORP. A. LUMLEY.

Mrs. Sarah Lumley, 188 Reid street, has received official word to the effect that her son, Acting Corporal Arthur Lumley, has been admitted to the Australian General Hospital at Wimereux, suffering from a gunshot wound in the left arm. This is the second time that Corporal Lumley has been wounded. Last fall he was shot through the foot. He enlisted in the 91st Battalion in St. Thomas and later transferred to the 39th Battalion.

PTE. JOHN ANGUS LOUDEN.

Pte. John Angus Louden, 499 Donegal street, who left Peterborough as a member of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported admitted to No. 7 General Hospital, Etaples, on April 10, suffering from sharpnel wounds in the shoulder. Pte. Louden was employed as a chauffeur by Dr. Robinson before enlisting.

PTE. HENRY WILKINSON.

Mrs. Wilkinson, Douro street, has received an official message from Ottawa stating that her husband, Pte. Henry Wilkinson, who enlisted in Lindsay with the 109th Battalion, is reported admitted to No. 13 General Hospital, with a gun shot wound in the shoulder.

LT.-COL. JOHNSTON HOME.

Lt.-Col. Johnston, commanding officer of the 93rd Battalion, arrived in Peterborough on the early C. P. R. train this morning and left shortly after for his home in Otonabee. He was met at the station by Capts. Watt and Lech, Sergt.-Major Hughes and other former members of the 93rd Battalion. Col. Johnston, than whom there has been no more popular commanding officer in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, was in France for some time on an observation tour.

Cobourg Heavy Battery.

The Cobourg Heavy Battery, with headquarters at Cobourg, Ont., which is now recruiting its eighth overseas draft for the Heavy and Siege Artillery is the only Heavy Battery west of Montreal.

The Cobourg Battery enjoys an enviable record, both past and present. Organized in 1866, its members have seen service on the Fenian Raid, Northwest Rebellion and the South African War and four times have won the Governor-General's Cup for general efficiency in big gun competitions at Halifax and Quebec.

When war was declared on August 4th, 1914, the Cobourg Heavy Battery was the first volunteer company in Canada to be ordered on active service. They left Cobourg on Thursday, August 6th with a strength of 4 officers and 120 men, having been given only 24 hours in which to get ready. Since then seven drafts with a total of 432 men, reinforcing the Heavy and Siege Artillery, have left Cobourg and have done and are doing splendid work at the front.

The eighth draft is now being formed and although the seventh draft left only a short time ago—on the 5th inst. — there are already 26 men on the strength of the new draft. Judging by previous experience, this draft should leave for overseas about June 1st. The prospect of getting overseas so soon and the fact that the Heavy Artillery is one of the most interesting branches of the service attracts a very high class of enlistments and particularly appeals to men anxious to get into the game without delay.

The previous drafts have included among their gunners many qualified officers who resigned their commissions to take advantage of this opportunity and the personnel of all drafts recruited has been of an exceptionally high standard. An interesting feature of the seventh draft is that of the seventy men who composed that draft all but two were under thirty years of age and unmarried.

Any young men desiring any further information can secure the same from Gunner D. J. McLeod, who will be in the city for a few days recruiting.

CANADIANS IN HOT BATTLE AT AVION

Maple Leaf Troops Have Hard Fight With The Huns in Suburbs of Lens, Fighting From House to House.

REACHED OBJECTIVES

By STEWART LYON.
Canadian Press Correspondent with the Canadian Forces.

Canadian Headquarters in France, April 23.—At dawn this (Monday) morning, after a vigorous artillery preparation, an attack was launched upon that part of the enemy line opposite the northern end of the Canadian corps. On the centre and on the extreme south, the attack was speedily successful, and our objectives were reached with relatively small losses. At the northern end of the line the enemy developed a tenacious resistance, at the electric station to the west of Avion. Here houses had been transformed into carefully-fortified machine-gun positions, which were difficult to deal with.

Our infantry were held back while heavy artillery turned a concentrated fire on the electric station and on the western part of Avion, whence also a galling enfilading fire was directed upon the troops, who, in the first rush, had occupied Fosse seven. House-to-house fighting was resumed after this bombardment, which greatly weakened the enemy resistance. The progress made is important in that it brings our line close up to Avion, a suburb of Lens, to the south.

The victory by which the British troops have captured Gavrelle, in a rapid advance, uncovers this part of the Hindenburg line. This win renders of little value the work of construction of wire entanglements, upon which the Germans have been busily engaged since their retreat from Vimy Ridge ten days ago.

During the past two days the enemy have been pouring gas shells into Vimy and Petit Vimy, and this morning, in the back area, they experimented with what is believed to be a new form of poison gas. Eight bombs, bursting high in the air threw at first a ruddy glare, then a bright orange vapor, which rapidly changed to a heavy grey cloud that drifted before the wind. No ill-effects, however, was observed in the district in which these bombs burst.

The burning of Lens is a thorough and systematic process. Beginning on the southern end of the town incendiaries yesterday extended operations to the northern district. Simultaneously Avion and other centres of the mining district adjoining Lens are being destroyed with all the appliances of the enemy. Where he has been driven out and can no longer apply

Union Prayer Service Wednesday

A union prayer service for all the Christian people of Peterborough will be held in the Trinity Church on Wednesday, April 25, at 8 o'clock. This meeting has been arranged by the Ministerial Association, and is one of a series to be held monthly for the duration of the war. It is hoped the religious zeal and patriotic interest of our people will be evidenced by a very large attendance. In a number of the congregations the usual mid-week meetings have been withdrawn in order that the citizens may be free to attend the union service.

LOCAL PEOPLE ARRIVE HOME FROM ENGLAND

Wives of Peterboro Soldiers Reach Canada Safely—The Ship Also Carried Some Five Hundred Wounded Canadian Soldiers

TWO DEATHS ON BOARD

Four Peterborough people arrived in Halifax from England with the party of Canadians returning home, which included Mrs. Joy Whittaker, Mrs. Cyril W. King, Mrs. E. B. Clegg and Col. Johnston, 93rd Battalion. This excursion home was planned by General Whitmore, and on account of the conditions in England and somewhat slim rations, was hailed with thankfulness. One passenger to-day on being interviewed, said "Turnips were a big feature of the diet and bread was portioned out at the rate of four pounds a week per head, one-half a pound of sugar for the same time. These rations, got a bit monotonous and made one long for one good, square meal. Candy is at a premium and is very likely to be forbidden in the near future."

The voyage over was one of great excitement. The ship started out three weeks ago, but was interned in the Clyde for ten days. Leaving the Clyde three destroyers convoyed the vessel until a terrible storm came up and the destroyers returned home. There were two deaths aboard, one a child, who broke her neck falling over the deck, and a fireman was also killed.

The passengers, five hundred wounded soldiers, three hundred wives and children and sixty British aviators and officers also included a number of notable people, Mr. Balfour, General Rodigo, McCanna, (author of Sonia), and Vernon Castle.

England is a sad place now, and the returned ones would not advise any one to cross who can keep out of it.

"The British Navy" at All Saint's To-night

Dr. Anderson will give the concluding lecture of his visit in the interests of the Royal Canadian Naval Institutes in All Saints' Parish Hall to-night at 8 o'clock. The subject will be "The British Navy and the Great War"—illustrated. No admission charge. Silver collection at the door.

TUESDAY, MARCH 24, 1917

A GRAND COINCIDENCE.

There is something coincidently significant in the fact of the synchronization of the visit of Hon. A. J. Balfour, British Foreign Secretary, and head of the British special commission to the United States, with the anniversary of the second battle of Ypres. That occasion recalled to all of us the glorious fact of Canadian troops having gloriously "saved the situation" two years before; and while we knew all about it, and appreciated and took immense pride in their achievements, it is pleasant to have a distinguished British expremier confirm our warrantable vaunt and join the British with the Canadian sense of pride. The pointedness of his endorsation, in its uniting effect, is expressed in his words to Canadian newspaper men on his arrival in Halifax:

"The roll of honour of the British Empire has many names upon it which kindle our imagination, and in the mention have power to knit us all together. Upon that roll the names of Ypres and Vimy Ridge will bear witness to the world through history that when the cause was just and the peril great, Canada would spare nothing of what in peace time men hold dear."

While the imperial bond is strengthened between Canada and the Mother Land, and the other parts of the Empire, by the words of praise of Mr. Balfour, this is emphasized by his happy reference to the fact that he should first set his foot on the soil of America, in Canada. The occasion has a wider range of meaning. Mr. Balfour's reference to this phase is full of import:

"No more striking or picturesque event has happened within the range of history than this voyage of representatives of two of the oldest and most powerful civilizations of Europe, worn by the awful strife of nearly three years of constant warfare, across an ocean beset by deadly peril, to take counsel with the most powerful of the young democracies of the world for concerted action against a common foe in defence of liberty and human rights."

It is a far cry from the war of the Revolution and the war of 1812, to this day—when the people of the States and Britain, and the same people and Canada, were at each others' throats; and the present union of aim and resources has brought the peoples together in grips of steel. At Washington the flags of three great nations are materially intertwined in a way symbolic of the greater union of spirit in maintaining and attaining the ideals of democratic benison they respectively and conjointly represent. Of late years the United States and the British on both sides the Atlantic have been coming closer together; today they are falling upon each other's neck, and with both it is "neck or nothing," in the great enterprise of winning the victory for a free humanity.

THE FLAG.

Since the last general election Peterborough has not been an enthusiastic flag waver. We are as chary of displaying the flag as if it were as priceless and precious in material as it is in meaning. We let great days, days of anniversaries of great events, pass by, without any general display of the flag, only a crimson blaze here and there—an odd island instead of a town-wide archihelago of red. We let the great Canadian victory of Vimy Ridge pass generally unnoticed and unrecognized by any display of flags as striking and significant as the victory itself. Yet this was a victory worthy of special mention by a great British statesman when recounting and glorying in the deeds of prowess to be credited to Canadian soldiers. We let the second great anniversary of another stirring blazon in the record of Canadian valour, an event notable enough to make it a new Thermopylae—where Leonidas and his Spartans held the gates, and saved the day; but with no more heroic obstinacy that that with which Canadians held the gateway to Calais—and Dover, perhaps—and saved the situation.

We let that anniversary pass without any unusual display of the flag that Canadians kept flying through hours of unheroic horrors—hours of sheer dogged pluck and devotion to duty to the death. We are told that in Kingston—dear old stony, sleepy Kingston—the streets were ablaze with the swaying rejoicing and recognition of the undulating colours of the Empire. If we forget to mark with the flag the second anniversary, what will be in ten years or half a century our bearing towards an anniversary that will shine as an outstanding star in the pages of history in the centuries to come?

Why are we so apathetic? Or, is it worse than apathy, is it indifference? Even on the lowest consideration this neglect is unworthy of us, of us in the home of the greatest flag-making industry in the Dominion. Or is it pure selfishness, pure devotion to selfish concerns and interests? It is well if it is not worse than that. The flag, with its triple blazon of the crosses of the three greatest races of humanity is a symbol of the highest in our Christian civilization; worthy of our deepest devotion and our intensest interest. It should be an outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual loyalty. Is our indifference in the regard in question a reflection of the popular attitude towards the terrible tragedy of the war? We go our way, live our life as if we were not vitally concerned in the work of the war. Whether it is the feeling deep down in our hearts, we seem to be content with the fact that our Canadian soldiers at Ypres and Vimy Ridge kept th fiflag flying in the dun clouds of battle and death-filled air. Are we merely spectators of the ghastly, glorious drama, too unconcerned to even applaud; or are we at heart too deeply stirred for emotional display?

GLORY HAS ITS PRICE.

While we are rejoicing over the glory gained, and the victories won by Canadian soldiers in France, we must not forget that they are both bought with a price; that in their fierce struggles and great gains many lives are laid down and many laid aside with wounds.

We have four divisions of Canadian soldiers at the front, and every day names are missing from the muster roll of platoons, and after a big engagement the call of many a name in many a regiment brings no answer; the soldier who bears it is either with the heroic dead or in the field dressing station.

As remarked, we have four divisions in the field on the western front—or what is left of them—and one training in England; and all the overseas troops at present being trained in Canada are under orders to hold themselves in readiness to cross the ocean at any time. To safely permit the departure of all troops enlisted for overseas service it is necessary to provide for emergencies; to provide an adequate force for home defence.

Accordingly, the government has issued a call for 50,000 men to be known at the Canadian Defence Force. Those who join this force are required to begin drilling at once. For the present drill is required two evenings and one afternoon each week, and later in the season the Defence Forces will go into camp. At present it is contemplated keeping this force under arms till the end of the war and six months afterwards.

This force may not be so attractive to the youth anxious to get into the thick of the fight, but enlistment in the Canadian Defence Force is really the beginning, the equivalent, of active service. The terms of enlistment, pay, subsistence or maintenance; of clothing and equipment, are the same as for the overseas service; and it is understood that there is nothing to prevent any member of the Defence Force who wants to get at the front from being sent there, if he so desires, but not otherwise. In effect, however, joining the Defence Force is virtually doing service at the front. The enrollment of an adequate force will permit the sending of every enlisted overseas soldier to the front to help keep up the strength of the Canadian divisions in France. The need for releasing every enlisted man is great. The Canadian Defence Force should be attractive to many young men, who for legitimate reasons, or from the unwillingness of parents, mother or wife, cannot see their way to enlisting for overseas.

We must come to the point of all taking our share in war work; the women of Canada have shown the way, in this and their industry, enthusiasm, loyalty and self-sacrifice, while unostentatiously and humbly exercised, have been the equivalent to many regiments in the field, by adding to the well being and comfort of the men on active service, adding so greatly to individual efficiency, that one soldier becomes equal in fighting effectiveness to two or three unhelped, unsupported and unencouraged, by the splendid work Canadian women have done. Men who could not fight have worked to earn money to strengthen the arms of our soldiers. We have nearly all done our little bit in some way; and it remains for many of our young men to round out the process by enlisting in the Canadian Defence Force, and so permitting every enlisted man to go to the front.

Which of These Two Kinds of Town Would You Prefer?

Each town and city has its own particular individuality and character. If you don't believe it, all you have to do is to travel up and down the length and breadth of Canada to find out. A trip through Western Ontario with your eyes open will be sufficient to convince you.

The towns, like two twins, may look as much alike as two peas at a casual glance. But study them more carefully and you will soon be impressed by striking points of difference. In Ontario, for example, each town has its natural features, recognized, ignored, or just overlooked.

In a number of towns the streets are laid out in a peculiar manner. There are towns which, even is a country new as this, and the newer part of it at that, look as if they had reached the limit of their capacity for development, and long ago made up their minds to sit down and do nothing more about it. Sometimes they appear merely sleepy; other times dejected and dispirited. It depends upon the day.

There are towns which give the impression of going down the hill. Their industries may be making a good record, but there are fine houses with shuttered or staring vacant windows, fences falling to decay even on occupied lots, buildings of every description sadly in need of paint, sidewalks broken or crumbling, stores shabby-genteel at best and sadly down at the heel, mud holes in the streets. There are always a few fine residences, but these have a detached appearance and merely accentuate the contrast with the general slovenliness.

There are other towns which call to mind the wife of one of H. G. Wells' heroes, Mr. Polly. Like Mrs. Polly, they are always cleaning up and never getting done, with the result that eternal confusion prevails. Their intentions are good, but intelligence and system are lacking to carry any job through successfully.

Then there is another kind of town—brisk and alert-looking, public buildings a credit so far as conditions, if not architecture, is concerned; schools an indication of the educational ideals of the community; churches bespeaking the fact that they hold an important place in the public life; streets and sidewalks properly laid and kept in good repair; business houses that do not need a "welcome" sign above the door; store fronts and windows painted, shining-clean and attractively dressed; parks and boulevards lawns, gardens and the little strip in front of the door revealing artistic appreciation and practical care. And the houses? Why to be sure, however humble they must live up to the general character of the town. The spirit of the town is one of thrift, industry and progressiveness. On all sides are evidences of genuine civic pride.

In which type of town would you prefer to visit, settle down, invest money or establish a business? One that is living on the reputation of "better days," the one that is obviously mismanaged, or the real, live town with a future?

BOARD OF EDUCATION'S CONDOLENCE TO MR. HILL

Resolution Passed at Special Meeting Called on Monday Afternoon.

A special meeting of the Board of Education was held yesterday afternoon, called by the chairman, Mr. Vincent Eastwood. Dr. Burnham moved a resolution of condolence to Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hill in the recent death of their son, Captain Harold Hill, who was killed in action at Vimy Ridge on Monday, April 9th. The resolution was seconded by Mr. John Crane.

A REDUCTION IN TARIFFS ON FOODSTUFFS

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 24.—Reduction in tariffs on certain foodstuffs, but no change in the duties on manufactures, are anticipated in the afternoon budget which Sir Thomas White will bring down in the House to-day.

Sir Thomas also already intimated that the revenue was needed as never before. Whether there will be any increase in tax on excess profits is a matter of conjecture.

Motor Car Owners Held a Banquet

Mr. Howland, Present of The Ontario Motor League Was Present

Motor car owners to the number of about fifty, attended an informal banquet that was given last evening in the Oriental Hotel. Mr. Howland, President of the Ontario League, was present, and gave an instructive address on Good Roads. He referred to the Motor Show, which opens on Thursday of this week, and urged all motor car owners to lend their support to the enterprise which is being held under the auspices of the Red Cross Society.

Mr. R. R. Hall, an enthusiastic member of the League, addressed the gathering on the manner in which the automobile has helped the military authorities to solve the transportation problem. "The automobile," said Mr. Hall, saved France at Verdun, by linking up the firing line with the base long after the railway lines were cut off."

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., who presided, spoke optimistically of the coming motor show and the many features that have been provided for the occasion.

The Secret Rapture Of The Churches

The interest manifested by the increased attendance of young people at the service last evening in the Gospel Hall was most encouraging and Evangelist Harper caught the inspiration and entered into the discussion of his subject in a manner that brought conviction to the hearts of the large audience. He spoke on the Second Coming of Christ and the events transpiring in Heaven immediately following. The first Scripture referred to was I. Thess 4:13-17 from which was shown the importance of the doctrine, to every believer. He showed that it should be more than a doctrine, but should be the burning, anxious desire of every believer to be looking for the Person, none other than the Second Person of the Godhead. In his usual forceful manner the speaker described the return of our Lord, using such terms as a "Blessed Hope," a "Comforting Hope," a "Living Hope" and a "Purifying Hope," and exhorted the Lord's people to live with that in view. He spoke briefly on 'the place of the doctrine,' in Scripture as set forth in the "words of Christ" in John 14:1—3; the "words of angels in Acts 1:10-11; the "words of the apostles," in Phil. 3:20-21; Jas. 5:7; I. Pet. 1:3 and 7.

From this truth the Evangelist turned to I. Cor. 3: 11-15 and said the first event in Heaven following the rapture of the church, would be "the judgment seat of Christ," where the works of the believer would be brought in review with the object of reward. He said that three of the six kinds of material, gold, silver and precious stones would stand the fire and three would not, even the wood, hay and stubble and he sought to lead the Christians to live in the view of this judgment seat.

Reading Rev. 19: 6-10 the Evangelist then portrayed the "marriage supper of the Lamb," as the event immediately succeeding the judgment seat of Christ. He spoke in glowing terms of the joy which awaited the Christian when this took place and solemnly charged any who were unsaved in the audience to prepare for that scene by taking Christ as their Saviour.

Mr. Harper will speak this evening on the events which will take place on this earth after the Second Coming of Christ, such as "the Tribulation, the Revelation," "Judgment of the living nations," "the Millennium," etc. You will be made welcome at these special services.

May Robson at "The Grand" Next Saturday

May Robson, the well-known actress who is appearing this season in "The Making Over of Mrs. Matt," on a recent trip to Boston, seated in the chair car of the Knickerbocker Express, started in to do some sewing to wile away the time between New York and Boston. A young man entered the car, took a seat across the aisle from her, and no sooner was he settled than he commenced to whistle some popular air. Every one about him became annoyed as he continued the sibilant concert. But Miss Robson apparently paid little attention. She waited, evidently trusting like the others, that he would soon exhaust his repertoire. Sure enough, at last he wavered and the passengers took hope. It proved a vain hope, for after a misguided attempt at another popular song, he suddenly plunged into the classical, beginning with a well-known intermezzo. He ceased very pleased with his efforts, smiled indulgently to himself, and went along with a sureness of technique that cried aloud. But the pride which ever precedes a downfall was to be his, for in the midst of his triumph he reached for a high note, and failed miserably. Again and again he tried for it, each time being downed. The note was a horrible failure, and rather shamefacedly he glanced across the aisle at May Robson. The star looked up from her sewing, caught the young man's eye, "I can't whistle either," she said in a low tone, Whereupon the young man ceased whistling.

Two Fine Gifts For War Veterans

Receive a Union Jack From The 57th Chapter and a Splendid Photograph From Mr. F. L. Roy

In addition to the splendid cash totals collected on Saturday, the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans were the recipients of two handsome gifts. The 57th Chapter, I.O.D.E., reading in the Examiner of the Veterans' desire for a flag, presented them with a beautiful Union Jack, 6 feet by 12, which is now draped from the windows of the club rooms in the Barrie Building. Mr. Fred L. Roy was the other donor. His gift to the club was a splendid enlarged picture of Major Geo. W. Bennett, who commanded the Peterborough infantry boys at Ypres, and who was killed in action on April 23rd. The picture is greatly prised by the War Veterans, especially by the soldiers who served under him, and it will be suitably draped and hung in the club rooms.

Arrangements Are Nearing Completion

Legal and Reception Committee Prepare to Welcome the Governor-General

The Legal and Reception Committee of the City Council met last evening to consider plans for the reception of the Governor-General and his party who will visit Peterborough on May 25th. Ald. Duncan, Chairman of the Committee made a verbal report of the efforts that have been made to complete arrangements.

Mr. A. Mowat reported that Miss Raney, vocal instructor in the schools would undertake the instruction of the school pupils. The latter will sing a number of choruses in Central Park.

Mr. Killaly, local superintendent of the Trent Valley Canal informed the Committee that the Government steamer—The Bessie Butler—would be available for the occasion.

It was left with Mr. Mowat to procure flags for the use of the school children.

RAT SEASON A FAILURE.

Mr. Dan Whetung Says Winter Was Prolonged and New Law Cut Season at This End.

The muskrat trapping season closed on Saturday, April 21st, and according to Dan Whetung it was a great disappointment to the Indians of Chemong Village. In the first place the season was shorter than usual on account of the new law relating to trapping, and the season did not set in until late. As a result the Chemong people counted about 1,500 pelts instead of the average yearly catch of 3,000 or 4,000. The Indians requested Mr. McCamus, of Keene, their agent, to ask the Government to extend the season in view of the circumstances. It was too late for action and the request was not generally taken up.

Funeral of Late Geo. Ahearn This Morning

The funeral of the late George Ahearn was held this morning from the family residence to St. Peter's Cathedral, where a requiem high mass was sung by Rev. Father Phelan. At St. Peter's cemetery Rev. Father McHugh officiated at the burial. The International Moulders' Union was represented by sixty members who accompanied the remains of their late brother to the cemetery. The pall-bearers were Messrs. A. Whatley, B. Hunter, D. Cassidy, D. Gleason, D. Burke, and E. Blair. Other societies represented were the T.A.S., C.M.B.A., and A.O.H. The marshals were Mr. J. Londerville and Mr. Jas. Weyer. Beautiful floral tributes were received from the Peterborough Lock Co. employees, I.M.U., Metal Products Co., and the tool room of the C.G.E. Co.

STOCK KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

WHITBY, Ont., April 24. — Kerr and Davidson, pure bred stock breeders, of Ashburn, ten miles north of here, suffered a heavy loss last night when lightning struck their barns. The entire barn and farm outbuildings were destroyed together with practically all the cattle, horses, sheep and implements. The pure bred stock alone was worth thousands of dollars.

Some Householders Have Bread Tickets

A Few Who Anticipated a Raise in the Price of Bread Bought Many Dollars Worth

The increased cost of a loaf of bread which went into effect yesterday, was not as generally anticipated as previous increases, but some of those who sized up the situation correctly have backed up their judgment by buying a plentiful supply of bread tickets which to-day are just worth 12 1-2 per cent. more than when they bought them last week.

Three cases where large quantities of tickets were bought were cited yesterday, one lady buying $25.00 worth, another $35.00 and a man who does most of the buying for his household, $25.00. Numerous homes have bought a $5.00 supply. All these people have saved money. The man who bought $25.00 worth has saved $3.00, a $35.00 purchase saved $4.20, and a $5.00 purchase 60c. It is not likely there will be a drop before the tickets are used, as everything points skyward at the present time.

A Simple Way To Remove Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

Care should be exercised not to overfeed the calf on milk. It is practically impossible to satisfy a calf's appetite for milk without overfeeding it; therefore the amount should be either weighed or measured out at each feeding.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

British Citizenship Built On Justice, Faith, Liberty

Archdeacon Cody of Toronto Preached St. George's Day Sermon at St. John's Church Last Night—Service a Deeply Impressive One.

St. George's Day was observed in its closing hours by a solemn service at St. John's Church, last night. Its impressiveness seemed to be intensified by the influence of the misty traditions of England's Patron Saint and by a new impulse of the old ideals which are embodied in the mystic figure of St. George. The past dimly appeared as a pervading presence, illuminating and clearly setting forth the responsibilities of to-day and the inheritance that must be treasured and passed on inviolate to the future.

The subjects of the lessons read by Mr. D. W. Dumble and Col. Walker, the hymns, the devotional spirit of the congregation and the sermon by Archdeacon Cody, combined to heighten the effect of realization of the significance of St. George's Day in this crisis of the nation.

Archdeacon Cody, who is always a powerful speaker, preached from the text "But Paul said, I am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city," in the course of which he discussed the responsibilities and duties of citizenship with particular application to its present demands. St. Paul was heir to the triple citizenship Hebrew, Greek and Roman, which was crowned by that higher citizenship in heaven which he gave to Jesus on the way to Damascus. But we are citizens of a greater Empire than that over which the Roman eagles flew. We are citizens in the great State of Britain. This commonwealth of free peoples is scattered in every part of the world. On a day we dedicate to the patron saint of England, it is well that we stop and take stock of the great inheritance that has come from our forefathers.

To the question whether we were maintaining that inheritance up to the standard of our fathers, Archdeacon Cody said:

"The answer comes from the bloodstained battlefields; humbly, we believe we are. We are striving faithfully to guard those things which have come to us in sacred trust from the past."

We know but little regarding St. George and what we do know is uncertain and distorted. The result is only a golden nebula of chivalric tradition instead of a clean-cut legend. St. George stands for religion in our national life. We are not ashamed to confess that we are a religious people. He wrought deeds of valour beside the sea. That commended itself to our forefathers in the Motherland who down the years from King Alfred's time found their outlet on the sea. St. George was a martyr and his tomb is an embodiment of the unyielding temperament of our race when convinced of the justice of our cause. To-day we are still ready to die for our ideals. He is represented as a knight on horseback killing a dragon. Throughout the centuries the English race was fond of fighting dragons. Archdeacon Cody enumerated some of these: the dragon of tyranny, class rule, slavery, Napoleonism. To-day the whole race from the uttermost parts of the world have come together united against the spirit of militarism, the most bestial dragon that ever cursed the face of the earth.

Elements of Our Inheritance.

The inheritance we are seeking to transmit to those who come after us was characterized, Archdeacon Cody continued, by justice, trustworthiness and trustfulness or freedom. The peoples of India, Africa, Egypt, bore testimony to British justice. Britain displayed her trustworthiness in that she counted her plighted troth worthy to be kept above all things. She went into this struggle because she felt she must stand by her friends and her plighted word; not because she felt at the outset that the Empire was in danger. Her freedom was bought at a great price. She had an instinct for freedom. The best things in life are ever bought with blood. "We are purchasing freedom to-day with the blood of our best and bravest youth," said Archdeacon Cody. British freedom was justified of her children in their response during the past three years. The old Mother Country has trusted her children, sometimes reluctantly, sometimes readily, but always ultimately. How splendid has that trust been justified. The speaker particularly presented the example of Louis Botha, which he sketched with dramatic touch.

Justice, trustworthiness and freedom were the three great foundation stones on which this fair fabric has been built to be, in the terms of Lord Roseberry, the greatest secular agency for the benefit and blessing of the world.

After St. Julien.

Speaking of the war, Archdeacon Cody said with emphasis that the battle of St. Julien was an epoch-making event. To-day we were but beginning to understand all that was involved in it. "The position I fain would emphasize is this, by their deaths our men sought to recreate Canada. We sometimes wonder if there will be a new world after the war. The same material businesses will remain the fundamental principles abide. There will be no new Canada unless there is a better spirit in the men who come back and in those who remain in it. We must learn that personal rights are greater and of more worth than things. Things were ruling us before the war. We shall again be busy and things will bid for our souls. The men returning with the realization of the meaning of truth, honour and sacrifice will lead us to think more of the rights of persons than of the rights of property. We shall learn that service is greater than self-seeking, production greater than speculation and formation better than reformation.

Archdeacon Cody uttered a warning that there was a day of reckoning coming for those politicians who were mere self-seekers.

When we shall face the heroes in the world beyond they will say, "we died for liberty and you used our victory for license, we died for service and you sought your self advantage, we died for peace and you waged war among classes, which God forbid. Shall we not have learned the lesson of centuries of Christian civilization that only by sacrifice is there progress.

The fully choral service was finely sung by the Rev. Canon Cornish and the choir. The special features of the work of the choir were Kipling's "Recessional," the second and fourth stanzas of which were most expressively sung by Miss Quartermaine, and the "Hallelujah" chorus from the "Messiah." Both numbers were splendidly sung, and after the service Archdeacon Cody expressed his surprise and delight at the rendition of Handel's noble chorus.

CARRANZA'S GIFT TO CITY.

MEXICO CITY, April 24. — General Carranza has made a personal gift of 10,000 pesos to the town of Hermosillo in recognition of the fact that this city was the first to receive him in a friendly and hospitable way when he took the field against the late General Huerta in 1913.

INDUSTRIAL AND LABOUR COMMITTEE IN SESSION

The first meeting of the Industrial and Labour committee of the Greater Peterborough Association was held last night in the City Council Chambers at 8 o'clock. The enthusiasm displayed and work accomplished last evening augurs well for the creation of such a committee. Their main objects will be to give every assistance to the Manufacturers' committee of the City Council in securing new industries, not only in an advisory capacity, but in the most practical manner possible, and from a labour standpoint, to do everything possible to make conditions pleasant for newcomers who come to the city to join our factory forces.

The members present were: W. R. Breyfogle, chairman, W. H. Bradburn, J. J. Hartley, Jos. Begley, Edgar Worth, E. H. D. Hall, G. L. Hay, E. B. Fowler, G. O. Cameron, Secretary.

Absentees— W. H. Denham, A. A. McIntyre and W. G. Morrow, who are in Chicago with a delegation to interview the Quaker Oats Company. Mr. Ivor Brock was out of the city.

"Pinafore" Rehearsal Last Evening Was a Success

"An excellent chorus and cast" is the opinion expressed by Stanley Adams, after the first general rehearsal of the "Pinafore," which is being given in the Opera House on May 15 and 16.

It is a source of satisfaction to have such an expression from one who knows, and it is hoped that a record performance will be the outcome of all the hard work that both principals and chorus are putting in and will continue to do till the dates of the performance. Mr. Adams returns to Toronto to-morrow and will be back again later.

Rehearsal to-night.

The principals taking part in the presentation of "Pinafore" are asked to meet this evening at 6.30 o'clock and the chorus at 7.30.

German Reichstag Reassembles

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

THE HAGUE, April 24.—To-day was the date set for re-assembling of the German Reichstag after its adjournment for the Easter recess. Dispatches from Berlin indicate the liveliest interest in the forthcoming sessions. The committee of twenty-eight appointed to suggest on methods of constitutional reform was expected to report. Imperial Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollweg may also outline constitutional reforms.

There was a perceptible tightening of the German censorship to-day on news of the strike of Socialist activities.

Quarrel With Argentina Is Now Adjusted

Special to the Examiner:

BUENOS AIRES, April 24.— Amicable adjustment of the diplomatic quarrel between Argentina and Britain over Argentine's wheat embargo, was announced to-day. The two nations have reached a settlement whereby Argentine agrees to send to Britain and the allies at once 150,000 tons of wheat and 20,000 tons of flour. In return England contracted to forward to Argentina at a later date 200,000 tons of wheat from Canada, Australia and elsewhere.

A Taxi Has An Impromptu Run

Leaves the Driver While It Makes for the Creek at the C. P. R. Station

One of Fontaine's taxicabs became as unmanageable as the proverbial mule, last evening, at the C.P.R. station. The driver of the car found the emergency brake was not working as well as it might and got out of the car to look it over. While making sure that the tail light was ablaze, the car, which was at the cab stand at the station, took it upon itself to go for a run, and when it was through the lawn, the iron fence, and astride the heavy timbers that are built up along the side of the creek, with as much hanging over the water as was stuck in the fence and timbers.

A hurried call brought the taxi drivers to the scene and the car was rescued from its perilous position none the worse. If it could only appreciate what a mess it would have made of itself had it dropped into the creek it would cut out such capers.

Reassembling of Parliament Foreshadows Many Possibilities

At no Time During the War Has There Been Such an Air of Absolute Confidence Among The Members of The House of Commons — Statement Regarding The Irish Question.

FIERCE ALTERCATION

T. By P.O'Connor

LONDON, April 21. —The reassembling of parliament, after the Easter vacation, foreshadows many possibilities that are not as yet quite visible on the surface. The second reading of the bill to prolong the life of Parliament until the end of November, must not be understood to represent the real feeling of all members. The Irish Nationalists had already declared their intention of opposing any further extension of the session and as none of the other parties in the House had any direct reasons for offering opposition, any objection on the part of the Irish members to prolonging the session might therefore be readily misunderstood.

— AIR OF CONFIDENCE.

There is only an infinitesimal group of members who are not wholeheartedly and unyieldingly determined to prosecute the war to a successful conclusion. At no time during the war has there been such an air of absolute confidence among the members of the House of Commons, that the British Army and our brave French Allies, have the upper hand. While this fact has been known for some time, we are now having ocular demonstrations of it every day. Whether the progress of our army be quick or slow, it is definitely established that the enemy can be beaten back, and the day of his possible victory is definitely over.

MORAL SUPPORT.

This feeling of confidence has been enormously heightened by the co-operation of the United States. We hear all sorts of statements from German sources and even from American sources that the United States cannot effectively participate in the war for at least another year. We all hope, and Germany most of all, that the war will be over by that time. Without minimising the importance of the moral support America's action has given us, I am not so sure that our energetic young ally is going to be content to wait a whole year before joining in the defeat of the enemy. The House of Commons gave themselves over on Wednesday to felicitous expressions of appreciation of the action of the United States in joining with the Entente powers to defend the high cause of freedom and to fight for the rights of humanity against the greatest menace by which it has ever been imperilled.

LONG EXPECTED.

The long expected statement regarding the Irish situation has been postponed until next week, when serious difficulties may possibly arise. While the government has not tackled the whole situation either wisely or firmly, all the members are confident and optimistic over the final outcome, especially in view of the fact that many other members besides the Irish Nationalists, are quite determined that more consideration shall be given to matters of national interest. While no one would venture to say that the war can look after itself, everyone feels that a more critical attitude will be justified and helpful, rather than otherwise.

A GENERAL ELECTION.

The Irish members of Parliament feel that the Irish question is so intimately bound up with the aims consequent upon the ending of the war, that they will, if necessary, oppose the government at every turn, even at the risk of a general election. Indeed, there is a growing feeling that a general election would not interfere with the successful progress of the war, and would on the other hand serve many good and useful purposes. That opinion is reflected from many other directions, although there is not the same motive for asserting itself. One incident during the week illustrates my meaning.

FIERCE ALTERCATION.

The ban the war office has placed upon copies of the Nation circulating abroad resulted in a fierce altercation in the House of Commons on Tuesday, and the opinion of the members is probably best expressed by the fact that a large majority stood up in support of the request to move the motion on the adjournment of the House. Bonar Law was probably correct in his opinion that the House would support the government, which is precisely in accord with the attitude of a majority of the members. The feeling of other members on the other hand was voiced by quite a large number who supported the demand for a debate on the matter. One personal touch, which will interest the United States, was the statement that President Wilson, who is reputed to be a regular reader of the Nation, now has to have his copy forwarded through the American Ambassador in London.

TREASON EVERYWHERE.

The Revolution in Russia, with the possibilities as to how it may react on the 'Wretched Race of Hohenzollerns' continues to overshadow our own domestic controversies. We all instinctively realise that this Revolution, was all for the good in the vigorous prosecution of the war. Russia and her Allies might have won the war a year ago if all the mighty resources of the Empire had not been frittered away by the corrupt gang that surrounded the Court and directed most of the public departments. There was treason everywhere; there was corruption everywhere; and Germany had done her filthy work with more effectiveness in Russia than in any other country in the world.

So long as they could get plenty of money to spend on their savage self-indulgence the reactionaries and the officials did not care whence the money came. There have been some hangings since the war began; hangings made necessary by the discovery of German spies in the highest, and most important offices. But the cancer was so deep in the vitals of Russia that it was not touched even by these discoveries and executions. A drastic operation was necessary, and, Heaven be praised, the operation has been carried out with skill and with humanity.

TILLSONBURG, April 24. — The local bakers have raised the price of bread to nine cents per loaf.

Your Coal Bin For Next Winter

Think Over the Situation and See When It Would Pay You to Fill It—Miners After 20 per cent. Increase

It may be the best of advice but it still may be right when it is suggested that householders put in their supply of coal at the present prices. It costs a little to carry it, but then you would not have last winter's worries over again next winter and from all the information to be obtained nothing can be learned that would lead anyone to expect that prices would be much lower, if any, than at the present time.

The following despatch from New York means a lot and if the miners get the 20 per cent. increase it would have a tendency to keep the prices up:

"New York, April 23.—Representatives of 175,000 anthracite miners resumed here to-day the conference with a committee of operators which the men hope will result in a wage increase equal to the twenty per cent. advance recently granted workers in some of the bituminous fields. President White and his colleagues take the position that "miners are now working for a wage which does not enable them to feed themselves."

STUDENTS WILL HELP.

BARRIE, April 24.— A greater production labor bureau has been organized by the Board of Trade. A number of business men have expressed a willingness to assist in the harvest if their services are required. Over 50 pupils from Barrie Collegiate are going out to help in farm work.

The Work of The Y.M.C.A. at Front

H. Hastie Formerly of Peterboro Writes Interesting Letter About Association Men and Association Doings in France

In a letter received by a friend in the city from Signaller Harry Hastie, formerly of Keene and Peterborough, who went to the front from Montreal with the Grenadier Guards, he speaks most appreciatively of the work the Y.M.C.A. is doing at the front. In addition, he gives quite a little interesting information about Peterborough boys. In part his letter is as follows:

It is not always convenient to find a nice quiet place to write in over here. Lately I have been writing my letters while on duty during the night, when there is little doing. Since I wrote last I have taken a four week course in visual signalling. This was held in a small town some distance behind the line and it proved a very enjoyable change to trench life. I gained somewhat in flesh while there so the change must have agreed with me.

"While I was there I met several old friends. On New Year's Day I met my uncle again. His battalion was in the next town having a few weeks rest, so I had several long talks with him. Going along the street one day I met Will Hamilton. He was in a hurry as he was on duty, so he did not have much time to talk. Horace Coon was on the same course as I so we were together quite frequently during the four weeks. Since then I have met two of the old Y.M.C.A. boys who were also in Mr. McCarroll's Bible class in George street church. I met both in the same town on the same day so when I proposed meeting after supper and going out to some place of amusement both favoured a Y.M.C.A. concert which was on for the evening. There were movies in the town, as well as a boxing contest, but their choice was the concert, so to the concert we went.

'The Y.M.C.A. certainly has a great influence over the members after they leave home. It was quite easy to pick these boys out among their comrades as Y.M.C.A. boys; something which I cannot describe about their bearing shows this up. I also met two 'Couchiching 1914' friends in the persons of Capt. Sharpe and Capt. Forgie. Probably you have met these two men. Capt. Sharpe was formerly boys' work secretary, West End branch Y.M.C.A., Toronto, and Capt. Forgie was Boys' Work Secretary, National Council Y.M.C.A.'s They are both engaged in the work here among the soldiers. I also was introduced to Capt. Archibald, who is in charge of the physical work here. He told me that they are getting Douglas Loomis into the physical work here this coming summer. Have spoken to Capt. Pearson of Ottawa, Capt. Clarke, of Revelstoke, B. C., and one or two other Y.M.C.A. captains.

"Whenever I find a Y.M.C.A. hut or tent I always make inquiries as to who is in charge of that particular section and quite frequently find some one I know, or have heard of. These officers are carrying on a splendid work here. Just put up a notice, 'Concert at Y.M.C.A. hut to-night at 6.30' and you are certain of a full house. These huts all have a canteen where hot tea, coffee or cocoa can be obtained, also varied tinned goods as well as little necessities the soldier needs, at small cost. I am writing this in a dug-out about fifty yards from the front line and I am less than five minutes walk from a Y.M.C.A. canteen so the work is carried on as far forward as possible. Will close for this time as my shift is just over and another fellow wants to write some letters."

Yours very sincerely,
H. HASTIE.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Back of the Hindenburg line the Prussians have been constructing new series of trenches, which they have named after mythological German personages. Then they have the "Siegfried line," the "Wotan line" and others. These names are peculiarly appropriate. Wotan, who is named the "Wanderer" in Wagner's drama, would typify the change from place to place of the Prussian lines. Siegfried, who kills the dragon Fafner and steals the Nibelung's Ring, is finally slain for his treachery, both characteristics of Prussian "efficiency."

the torch he neglects even our working parties to make targets of the overhead plant of mines and the houses of miners.

A trip up the Souches Valley to-day through the mining region furnishing evidence that the enemy is hanging on solely for the purpose of completing his destruction. Everywhere in the valley are ruin and desolation, some of it caused by our guns before the taking of the Vimy ridge, but much of it by the enemy. In this hurried flight he left many unburied dead, and many others hastily interred, whose bodies have been again brought to view by German shells.

Nowhere is the utter wreck made by the long continued bombardment of heavy guns so apparent as at Souches, which is itself crumbling into heaps of unrecognizable rubbish. A notice board placed on a mount proclaims that spot as Souches Square.

A Peterboro Woman Among The Graduates

Among the 42 men and women graduating at the Moody Bible Institute, April 19, was Sara A. Wilson, of Peterborough, formerly of Belfast, Ireland, who has completed the two years' course in Bible Doctrine, Gospel Music, and Practical Methods of Christian work. The graduating programme consisted of the Class Exercises in the forenoon, the reception to the graduates in the afternoon, and the public meeting at night, at which time an address was given by Rev. Robert M. Russell, D.D., LL.D. The diplomas were presentedeto the graduates by Rev. James M. Gray, D.D., Dean of the Institute. The attendance of resident students at the Institute during the past term has been the largest in its history, viz., 448 men and 331 women. The regular summer term opens April 26th, and includes a Special Summer Course in evangelistic singing and playing, extending from June 27th to August 8th.

BIG AUTO PARADE

Kindly decorate your cars a little, if possible, but come anyway without decorations if necessary. Of course, the more decorations in the way of flags and bunting, the greater the success of the parade. Every car owner should get one with his car. This is a public parade. The Motor Association is only trying to boost it along, but the co-operation of every car owner is desired to make this a great event. We should have at least three hundred cars in this line.

Mr. T. F. Matthews, Chairman of the Red Cross Committee, will head the parade, with Mr. E. G. Patterson's car second. These two cars will divide at Aylmer and McDonnel, leading the two divisions around the Armouries as outlined above.

Two trucks for transporting the bands are being donated by the Canadian General Electric Company through Mr. Patterson, and one truck is being provided by Mr. G. A. Gillespie.

May Robson and The Young Man Who Couldn't Whistle

May Robson has appeared in many various characters while on tour, but it is calimed she never had a better vehicle than her present one, "The Making Over of Mrs. Matt," from the pen of that well known author, James Forbes, who also wrote such successes as "The Chorus Lady," "The Commuters," "The Show Shop," etc. "Quite the funniest thing I've seen in years," is the way one person expressed it while many others heartily agreed after viewing a performance. In the role of "Mrs. Matt," Miss Robson appears at her best. She is the central figure in numerous situations and her lines, put over as only May Robson can, send an audience into shouts of laughter. The play will be presented at "The Grand" next Saturday, April 28, matinee and evening.

Have ambition and your road will lead upward.

Sweeden Will Be Dry For Three Weeks

Special to the Examiner:

STOCKHOLM, April 24.— The entire kingdom of Sweden will be prohibition territory until May 21, according to a government decree announced to-day. The measure banning alcohol was only one of a number of stringent precautions adopted to prevent any serious demonstrations on May 1.

46,600 Pounds of Waste Salvage

Completed reports of the results of the collection of waste papers under the auspices of the Ashburnham Patriotic League, on Thursday last, show that a total of 23 tons, 800 pounds was collected, of a commercial value of $360.50. The amount would have been greater if many who were well disposed towards the collection had not, through some misunderstanding failed to put out their waste paper for the collection. The involuntary neglect to call upon them will, it is understood, be remedied by a supplementary collection.

Editor Peterborough Examiner.

Sir,—Having been in your city on business for a few days, I read in your paper a letter signed 'F. T. B.,' also two replies to it. Allow me a few words in explanation, which is due. "F. T. B." is a farmer over seventy years of age, (seventy-three, I think, is the correct figure). His only son is in the trenches, in Flanders, having enlisted and gone to the front with the second contingent. I was a visitor at F. T. B.'s home when the young man spoke of enlisting. I well remember his father's answer: "If you consider that your duty by all means go, with my blessing, and I will work and try and keep this home for you when you return." It is a beautiful home, a credit to the country in every way, and F. T. B. is in easy circumstances; he could retire and live a life of ease and comfort. But he has stayed at his post on the farm, struggling with adverse seasons and poor help. Both he and his estimable wife are working harder than they ever did before, even when they were clearing their farm, and I know what I am speaking about, for we have been personal friends ever since our childhood days.

Yet, Mr. Wearing (a lawyer) speaks of this man as a "knocker." It makes my blood boil to hear such men as F. T. B. so insulted by one of a class of non-producers, who, I am told, is of military age, and could well be spared at this time. Think of the glaring impudence of this fellow telling F. T. B. to produce. Let me say one man of F. T. B.'s stamp is doing more for his country than all the lawyers in Peterborough.

"Citizen" complains of F. T. B.'s letter because of its selfish spirit; but listen what he says: "The city people wish to help the farmer and thereby help themselves." How does that sound for selfishness?

My business takes me over rural Ontario and I find the same feeling as expressed in F. T. B.'s letter. These farmers can not be called disloyal or selfish because they do not agree with every scheme proposed by city men. The farmers should have been consulted in this matter and their advice sought, instead of city men or government experts who never farmed except with government backing. It almost took the point of starvation to make these people realise that the farmer is the backbone of the country in war as well as peace. "Citizen" asks for sympathy for the dependants of those who have gone to the front. I say they should be looked after well, not as sympathy or charity but as payment in part of a just debt. He also asks sympathy for the poor city labourer on account of high prices and scarcity of food. I say, give him none; let him get out of the city and help to produce food. And the starvation plan is the only way to make him move. No city man has a right to complain about current prices; he aided and abetted the circumstances that produced this result. And if he don't like it let him become a producer. Let me say, in travelling over rural Ontario for the past twenty-eight years, I never saw so small an acreage prepared for crop and the situation is alarming indeed. But this condition was forced on the farmer and was not of his own making or liking, and it is now too late in the day to remedy it much this year.

Mr. Wearing refers to the fact of the number of farmers who pulled through last year with school boys' help alone. He should remember that there was a very short crop, and the harvest weather was ideal. He should also know that when the work of preparing for fall wheat came the school boys were not equal to it, and this accounts partially for the small acreage this year in wheat.

An apology is surely due F. T. B. from Mr. Wearing and "Citizen," and I am hoping to see it.

Yours,
W. H. MINNS,
1134 Bloor Street, Toronto.

GOLD WATCH IS OFFERED FOR BOYS' BEST POTATO CROP

Wednesday afternoon the Mothers' Club of the Y.M.C.A. will meet for Red Cross work. A hearty invitation is extended to all mothers whose boys are members of the Y.M.C.A. to be present Wednesday afternoon and help in providing comforts for our boys at the front. The work of the Mothers' Club is well organized now and all that is needed is for the mothers to co-operate with the officers of the club in this noble work.

To Organize Garden Club.

Wednesday evening, April 25th a very important meeting for boys will be held in the Y.M.C.A. The object of the meeting will be to organize a boys' garden club. Every boy who has a back yard garden should be present at this meeting as it is the intention of the Y.M.C.A. to give valuable prizes for the best back yard gardens. It would be well for parents to encourage their boys to join this club as lectures will be given the boys on how to plant and cultivate their gardens by expert gardeners.

Prize For Boys of City.

Mr. Walter Oke offers the prize of a gold watch in a competition among boys, and to encourage the planting and bringing forward of a crop of potatoes.

The competition will be open to 12 boys, or youths; not older than 16 years. Must be amateurs.

Mr. Oke will supply the seed giving one peck to each of the contestants. Who will be the first 12 boys to get in on this big offer. This offer is made to all boys of the city whether they are members of the Y.M.C.A. or not. For information apply to the Y.M.C.A.

Boys' swimming campaign April 30th to May 5th. This will be an opportunity for boys who are unable to swim to learn the art correctly. Parents would do well to see that their boys took advantage of this campaign.

Battle in the Carso is Growing Hot

Special to the Examiner:

ROME, April 24.—The battle in the Carso is becoming increasingly violent. Dispatches from the front to-day indicated a terrific fire from the Italian artillery. General Cadorna was quoted as expressing the utmost confidence. There have been several indications recently that Italy was about to start a great offensive in the Carso.

LOOKING TOO OLD

Many girls and women look old long before they should. Their faces become pale and drawn, wrinkles appear, and their eyes are dull and lustreless. The cause of this is weak, watery blood. This is also the cause of the headaches and backaches, and the general feeling of wretchedness that afflicts so many women and girls. From one cause or another the blood has become thin and watery, and the victim has a prematurely aged appearance. People with good blood are energetic and cheerful—people with poor blood despondent and unhappy.

It is most important that the blood supply of girls and women should be regularly replenished — important not only on the score of good looks, but to restore robust health which is of still greater value. To obtain a supply of new, rich, red blood nothing can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills impart a glow of health to the cheek, brightness to the eyes and make tired, weary, listless girls and women feel bright and happy. Any woman or girl who looks ill or feels ill has only herself to blame if this condition continues, because Dr. Williams Pink Pills will surely and speedily restore health and strength. This has been proved in thousands of cases, some of them in your own neighbourhood. If you are weak, or pale or ailing, or are looking old before your time, you owe it to yourself to give these pills a fair trial.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

THE COURSE OF THE MARKET.

The stock market week has been one of conservatism, due to the impending Government war financing. The reason for the hesitation has been the lack of knowledge in regard to how far the Government will make use of its authority to issue bonds under the new law and how far it will undertake to raise the money for an estimated first year's war expenses by new taxation. The question should be settled rather rapidly, judging by the speed with which affairs are now proceeding at Washington. The extent and direction of taxation might easily be a matter of common knowledge within a week or ten days at the outside. So long as the taxation is fairly uniformly distributed it carries no menace to the country in its present condition of financial and economic preparedness, because of the experience gained and the credits obtained by serving the Entente Allies in the last two years. The overshadowing consideration in the stock market outlook, apart from the temptation to judge the international situation anew every morning by the newspapers, is the effect of the enormous scale of the American preparations upon the peoples of the Central Empires. This fact, coupled with the successful penetration of the Western battle line, the growing demand within the German Empire for electoral reform which would necessarily result in a change in the location of the sovereignty of the Empire, and the known and increasing instability of food situation in Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey, may bring within the next few weeks a highly sensational denouement. If this country is fully prepared for severe hostilities in the future and its business temper has been as wisely directed, the American financial community would seem to have little reason for the apprehension that might have existed if the United States had given the German people an idea that they were going into the recently stal mate war in a half-hearted and purely defensive fashion. In the meantime, there are evidences in many directions that shrewd bankers and investors ar advising their clients in regard to the stocks that are best situated for the next upward movement, assuming that perhaps that next upward movement might be a peace development.

THE BUSINESS SITUATION.

In the iron and steel industry it is to be noted that the present week witnessed the beginning of negotiations by railroads in this country for their rail requirements to be delivered as far ahead as 1919. The Northern Pacific Railroad, for instance, closed an order for 40,000 tons of rail for delivery over the last quarter of 1918. Both the French Government and the Italian Government have also closed orders for rails in quantity. In regard to general conditions in the industry, the "Iron Age" has this to say: "The variations in prices asked by different manufacturers and by the same manufacturer to different buyers or classes of buyers are most striking on the present high levels. Buyers are making the most of any connection they may have with a Government contract to get special treatment in deliveries or prices or both. Producers are expediting shipment of material for Government work, taking pains to sift out the exact tonnage to be so applied, but are not yet responsive to appeals for lower prices to private works, seeing that in nearly every case another buyer stands ready to pay more. In some cases where shell steel is involved the Government will do the buying, the munitions plant concerning itself only with the finishing. Government influence is being exerted to hurry deliveries to the Entente Allies, and the request has been made that their wants have precedence over those of the Government itself." In regard to the trend of general business, Dun's "Review" says: "Changing conditions in business result from the national exigency, but thus far the economic readjustments have been effected with a minimum of unsettlement. Both producing and distributing interests give precedence to Federal requirements, and in banking circles action has been taken with a view to facilitating the proposed extensive financing. The leading industries, as expected, receive additional stimulus from Government contracts of magnitude, allotted at special figures, and most of the works are pushed to the limit of capacity, with further heavy demands foreshadowed. Extensive payments through the banks continue at the leading centres, and total clearings this week amount to $4,871,c6,361, an increase of 20.7 per cent., as compared with the same week last year, and of 61.2 per cent, as contrasted with the corresponding week in 1915."

OTHER FACTORS.

Apart from the international situation and in particular the American factors in it, the stock market has comparatively few, if any, important influences with which to reckon. The proportion of the bond issue to the total sum of money raised for war expenses will determine the maximum possibility of financial inflation. As the bonds might be issued in several installments, the danger of any serious inflation could be minimized.

SOUND ADVICE TO FLIRTATIOUS WIVES

How many examples do married women need to teach the flirtation mind that casting sheep's eyes at men not their husbands can be dangerous? Some women crave fine clothes and luxuries, but it ends with their day dreaming. Some women have a passionate longing for glittering gems and shimmering silks. Deliberately they plan how they can get them without toiling for them. Others are so infatuated with the admiration they create when they are well dressed that judgment flees before the wand of folly.

It is justifiable for the single woman who hopes to attract interest unto herself to turn a pleasant face toward all men who approach, for is not one among them the hero who will woo and win her? The married woman has no such reason for looking eagerly about for admiration from a man.

It is almost impossible to try to safeguard the married woman who holds her husband's honor lightly. She may promise to keep away from the tango parlors but is she not just as liable to meet a gay Lothario in the street, in the theatre, or standing at a soda fountain counter?

Not so many moons ago this country was startled over an elopement. The woman in the case was a bride of a few months—the man a gay Adonis who had met her for the first time only a few weeks before at an ice cream parlor. He pretended to pick up her glass of soda in mistake and laughingly apologized. At the same time he gleaned the information that the simpering young woman who wore a profusion of diamonds and fine clothes was wont to come there most every afternoon. He made it a point to be there also. The woman soon became infatuated with the glib stranger. He proposed that she gather up her jewels and what woman she had, and flee with him. In a moment of madness she consented. When they boarded the train he took charge of her little satchel, which contained her jewels and cash. Under the plea that he was going into another car to smoke he left her. He did not return. When the conductor came to collect the tickets she made her plight known. No ticket had been provided for her. She was without cash. The man with the little black bag had leaped from the train just as it was getting away.

Her experience did not teach other women a lesson. The papers more recently told of another woman's folly—the breaking up of a home and a husband's misplaced confidence. The woman in this case did not get off so easily. The lure of diamonds cost her not only her honour but her life. She became acquainted with a man who sat next to her in a theatre. A large diamond ring that she wore to attract the eye of foolish women captivated her fancy. She proved not averse to flirtation. It was but a step to a graver folly.

When will this class of married women realise that the stranger who speaks to them is by no means fascinated with them? Why are they so foolish that they do no understand? In encouraging his advances they should know that they are dealing a foul blow at the heart of the honest, unsuspecting husband at home. The law should ferret out and make an example of the men who live upon their wits and foolish, well to do married women, who permit them to make love to them.

CAVALIER NECKWEAR.

The old problem of why people do not wear riding clothes all the time, since in them they look the best, is apparently about to be solved. Regular riding stocks are about to be worn with the sport costumes of spring for ordinary wear. These are the Ascot stocks of striped khaki-kool colors, vivid greens. Some of them have plain neckpieces of blue or green silk and checked tie parts of the plain color combined with black.

JUNIOR LEAGUE PLAYERS ORGANIZE

An enthusiastic meeting of the boys of the King George Athletic Club was held on Monday last to reorganise for the sports of the coming season. The boys are anxious to hold for another season the shield awarded to winners of the Junior series, brought to Ashburnham for the first time last year. The following officers were elected:

Hon. Pres.—Mr. A. A. Fowler.
President—Miss Walker.
Vice Pres.—Percy Revoy.
Sec.-Treas.—Beresford Hay.
Manager—Mr. O. M. Steer.

BOWLING NEWS

Mr. N. R. Early won last week's prize for high five-pin score at the Water Street Alleys. His score was a 203 count and is a record for the Alleys. Fitzpatrick was second with a 180 count.

To-night the Grocers and the De Laval clash in a league fixture and a good game is expected.

The Grocers took two out of three games from the De Laval last night in a city league game. Some good bowling was witnessed by the large and interested crowd of spectators present. Ross, for the Grocers, had high single of 193, also high three games, with 519. Outram of the same team, was a close second with three game count of 504. Barrett of the De Laval team, had high single for the night, rolling 220 in the first game, and also having three games, with count of 533. Next game will be Thursday night, West Ends vs. C. G. E.

The scores:

Grocers—
Heard	152	130	171	453
Ross	193	161	165	519

B'ILED SHIRTS BARRED.

LONDON, April 24.— Englishmen will wear unstarched linen now, because from now on the Government has forbidden the use of cereals in starch making.

The use of cereals in bill poster paste is also forbidden, killing what has been a big industry, unless substitute pastes are devised.

Gambling Charges Against Chinaman Were Dismissed

When Hum Hoy was fined $200.00 and costs for keping liquor and opium in the store at 385 Water street, the law spent itself. This morning all the other charges of gambling were dismissed and the seventeen Chinamen returned to their tubs. Jim Hum, who was jointly charged with Hum Hoy for keeping opium, and liquor, escaped without a fine, but was soundly warned by Magistrate Dumble to give no cause for suspicion or arrest in the future.

In dismissing the seventeen gambling cases for alleged violation of the Lord's Day, Mr. Dumble said: "The Lord's Day Act in England, is a very old statute that was aimed at making the people religious by Act of Parliament. It levied penalties on persons violating the Sabbath by gaming. That means gambling for money or its equivalent. Games of skill on Sunday may be condemned by some persons, but the law does not forbid them. It does not interefere with games of skill on Sunday, but does interfere with games of chance played for money. In this case I do not find any evidence of gambling. There was no money on the table, nor was there anything found to offer proof that there had been gambling for money. I am compelled to dismiss the charge for gambling."

Mr. Dumble told the Chinamen if they understood him, that the filthy hole they they had fitted up in the cellar was not fit for anything but dirty business.

Corporal Thos R. Blunt, late of the 93rd Band, has been appointed sergeant on the staff of the Army Medical Corps, and appointed infantry instructor for Queen's Depot, Kingston.

PTE. BUTCHER OUT OF DANGER.

A cablegram in reply to Mr. Harry Butcher's request for information was received to-day stating that his son, Private R. L. Butcher, reported seriously ill, is making satisfactory progress and is out of danger.

Two more recruits enlisted in the 57th Regiment C.D.F. last night. They were Earl Maxwell Robertson, 265 Bolivar street, and Sidney S. D. Shaw, 275 Stewart street, both former members of the 57th Regiment.

It should be understood that the 57th Regiment is also recruiting men for overseas service, and that men who desire to join the Canadian Expeditionary Force are taken on the strength immediately, and their pay and allowances commence at once.

TORONTO, April 24.—Eighty returned soldiers have made application to the Ontario Government To take up land in northwestern Ontario under the conditions of the Act passed last session. The first party will be despatched to Monteith as soon as the snow is gone in that district. Residences for soldiers are now being erected at Monteith. The soldiers' farms will be selected as soon as the weather conditions permit.

Pte. Robt. Wiltshaw, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, arrived home on Sunday night on furlough. He has been troubled with a broken ankle, but expects to return overseas and go to France with a labour battalion. Pte. Wiltshaw's father also went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and a brother has been in France for a long time. Another brother, Pte. Geo. Wiltshaw, who was with an Imperial battalion, recently died of wounds in England. The family reside on Union Street.

RECEIVE A DEATH SHOCK THROUGH MAN'S BODY.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 24. — Alfred Hatcher was killed last night when he attempted to repair a broken electric light wire in his home at McKeesport near here, and in pulling Hatcher's body from the wire two members of the family were killed and three persons burned, one seriously.

Hatcher was killed instantly when he grasped a heavy current wire near a live wire. In attempting to release Hatcher's hold on the wire a sister, Mrs. Harry Zigmund, was killed. Henry Lutz, Hatcher's stepfather, seized the body of Mrs. Zigmund, and fell unconscious dying later.

Lutz's wife was burned seriously when she took hold of her husband's arm. Two persons in attempting to rescue the victims were rendered unconscious and burned.

Supply of Coal After War Confronts France

PARIS. — However pressing the problem of coal may be to France in war time, it will be even more pressing with the return of peace. Already the government is studying possible ways and means of freeing France after the war from bondage to German coal. The industrial situation before the war was continually aggravated by the fact that France had to depend on Germany for so large a proportion of her supply of coal. Everybody in France hopes that some way out of a return to that condition of dependence may be found after the war.

The situation is complicated by the French expectation that Alsace-Lorraine will again become French. The return of these provinces would mean virtually a doubling of the nation's requirements of coal, owing to the immense amounts required for the development of the iron deposits in Lorraine. This means that instead of doing with about 60,000,000 tons of coal a year as before the war, France will need more than 100,000,000 tons.

A French expert, Maurice Alfassa, has just published a report showing where France must obtain her coal if she wishes to maintain independence of Germany. He indicates three main sources. Development of the deposits of coal in France, England and the coal mines on the left bank of the Rhine, the output of which is estimated at 30,000,000 tons yearly. This opens up the future of the German territory west of the Rhine, and M. Alfassa suggests that in the peace negotiations the left bank of the Rhine should be given a special economic standing, enabling France to remove some of the tariff walls which existed before the war between herself and Germany.

M. Alfassa suggests that the peace treaty ending the war should provide for the opening of the Rhine as a free waterway for international trade.

SUMMER SURELY HERE

A young man quite unconscious of anything out of the ordinary walked down George street last evening about six o'clock wearing a straw hat. There have been straw hats out earlier than this date in other years, but this season has not been conducive to such an early ushering in of summer headgear.

To share a thing with a friend is to add to its weight and substance.

Large Buildings Only Desired For Hospital

A local citizen who has been investigating the possibilities of a Convalescent Hospital being established in Peterborough, has received the following letter from Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P.:

My Dear Sir,—At last I have been able to run down this Convalescent Hospital business. I saw Sir James Lougheed himself and this is his pronouncement. The Commission has given up or is giving up as lost as it can the small hospital and will consider only a building holding not less than 200 beds, with further quarters for administration purposes and ample grounds. They will pay a moderate rental, they will not consider purchase but will erect huts if they think them necessary. When you find anything like this he will send an officer immediately to report. If I were you I would have a chat with the Mayor about it and if necessary the Council.

Yours faithfully,
J. H. BURNHAM.

City Solicitor Asked to Report

City Solicitor Gordon will be asked to report on the advisability of putting in a boom at the Peterborough Lock for the benefit of canoe owners who desire to portage over the locks. This was decided at a meeting of the Legal Committee held last evening.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Jamieson was born in Cavan, Ireland, July 22nd, 1832, and has lived in Canada since she was one year old. In 1850 she was married to Thomas Jamieson, who predeceased her six years ago. Of her twelve children, six are left to mourn her loss, namely, Mrs. John Keenan, Peterborough, Mrs. Philip Tennyson Otonabee, Mrs. John Mein, Picton, Mrs. James Craig, Toronto, Matthew of Peterborough and Robert of O'Donnell. Seventeen grandchildren and nineteen great grandchildren also survive.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock to the Little Lake cemetery. Rev. Canon Cornish will officiate.

WASTE FROM KITCHEN GIVES MUCH GLYCERINE.

LONDON. — Waste from the army camp kitchens is now supplying enough glycerine yearly to produce the cordite necessary for ten million eighteen pound shells. Moreover this glycerine is being supplied to the army at the pre-war price of 60 pounds a ton, whereas the present market price is 240 pounds. A portion of the profits made on the process goes to the messing departments of the armies, which are now receiving about 30,000 pounds monthly from this source.

The proposal to turn the camp waste into glycerine was made by a committee of soap manufacturers. They convinced the army authorities after some effort that their scheme was possible and they immediately organized the collection of the waste, especially fats and bones.

The collections go immediately to the nearest soap maker for the production of tallow and glycerine. The fat contains about 10 per cent. glycerine. The system has since been extended to the base camps in France, where the fat is rendered down, and sent home in barrels, and also the navy, which used to throw all the waste overboard.

French Commission Has Landed Safely In United States

Respect Approaching Veneration for Marshal Displayed by Americans—Cross Atlantic on a Faster Liner—Mr. Balfour Receives Invitations to Visit Many Cities in States

SLIPPED OUT OF PARIS

WASHINGTON, April 25. — Arthur J. Balfour, British Foreign Secretary, spent yesterday in consultation with other members of the British Commission on means to dispose of the enormous amount of work which has already developed. Officials of all the American Administrative departments to do with the conduct of the war, have indicated to the British information which would be of value, and Mr. Balfour personally is trying to work out the means of securing and distributing the results of England's experience to the best advantage.

Invitations have been received from all parts of the country asking Mr. Balfour or other members of the Commission to visit them, but at present the British officers do not intend to take any time away from the Capitol.

Mr. Balfour, deeply appreciative of the welcome, is nevertheless so completely the directing head of the Commission that it might seriously cripple his conferences with the Government here if he left town.

LUNCHEON WITH MR. WHITE.

Mr. Balfour took luncheon with Henry White, former Ambassador to France, and an acquaintance of many years' standing, and passed the afternoon making and receiving official calls. Last evening came the formal dinner given by Secretaries Lansing, Baker and Daniels to the diplomatic, military and naval officials respectively, and afterward the Pan-American reception.

The French Commission which has safely landed in the United States includes Marshall Joffre and former Premier Viviani. The party arrived early yesterday morning on board a speedy steamship of the French line, which was convoyed across the Atlantic. The vessels were met off the coast by American torpedo boat destroyers and escorted to a port.

The naval and military attaches of the French Embassy at Washington and American naval and military officers, together with a representative of the State Department immediately boarded the French vessels and extended a welcome to American shores.

Later the State Department issued this statement: "The Department of State is advised that the French mission will reach Washington Wednesday morning. The precise time and place of arrival will be announced later."

CROWDS BARE HEADS.

The Associated Press correspondent, who accompanied the party from France, sends the following despatch from the port of arrival:

"As the ship bearing the French commission came into port yesterday, American warships broke out French colours from their mastheads and American bands played the French national anthem. American and French sailors lined the rails of their respective ships. No salutes were fired. The special train bearing the mission slipped out of Paris in the early morning observed only by a few secret service agents and railway men. The hour of leaving was known nowhere in advance and when the train stopped at cities along the way to the port of departure, Marshal Joffre walked up and down the station platform acknowledging pleasantly the salutations of the few persons who happened to be in the stations, they looked at the great commander with a respect approaching generation. When the train pulled away men stood solemnly with heads bared until his car had passed from view.

"The transfer from the train to ship was without event, as was the voyage across the Atlantic."

Programme for Peterboro Motor Show

The Peterborough Motor Show opens To-morrow and will continue for 3 days, concluding on Saturday.

The show will open on Thursday afternoon at two o'clock, with an address by Mayor J. J. Duffus and Lieut.-Col. D. Walker.

In the evening at seven o'clock there will be a grand Parade from the Market Square to the Armouries. Two bands in attendance. Bicycle riders will take part in the parade.

The show will continue on Friday and Saturday. An orchestra comprising members of the 57th Regiment Band will supply music for the three days of the show.

War Profits Will Be Affected By New Taxation

Additional Levy to Be Made on Business Gains—No Tariff or Income Tax Changes Are Proposed in Budget Speech—Forecast Another War Loan in June—The Increased Tax Will Chiefly Affect Manufacturers of Munitions and Other War Supplies.

QUESTION OF FURTHER REVENUE

OTTAWA, April 25.—In delivering his budget speech in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon Sir Thomas White announced the following new taxation:

"From persons, firms and companies liable to the Business Profits War Tax 50 per cent. of all profits in excess of 15 percent., but not exceeding 20 per cent. annum, and 75 per cent. in excess of 20 per cent. per annum on capital.

"That is to say, up to 15 per cent. they will be liable to the existing legislation, and in addition we will take one half of their profits between 15 and 20 per cent., three-quarters of their profits beyond 20 per cent. The new legislation will apply to the last accounting period of the three year term, provided for in the tax of 1915. There is no income tax proposed There are no tariff changes proposed."

Sir Thomas White forecasts another war loan in June.

TAX ON ABNORMAL PROFITS.

Sir Thomas then spoke of the necessity of increasing the revenues of the Dominion in order to meet the growing war expenditure. A higher customs tax on luxuries had been proposed, but they overlooked the fact that most of these articles are embraced under fixed rates in the treaty with France and in respect to them the tariff cannot be raised. Income tax had also been suggested, but the sum which could be raised in this manner would not be large.

He doubted the desirability of imposing such a tax at a time when the cost of living is on the increase. The cost of levy and collection of such a tax would be high, and on the whole it would appear that an income tax should not be resorted to.

The question of further revenue, Sir Thomas went on to say, narrows itself down to abnormal profits made by business firms during the period of the war. This, in his view, was the proper and legitimate source to which to look for increases in revenue. The Government therefore, proposed to take from persons, firms and companies liable to the business profits war tax, fifty per cent. of all profits in excess of fifteen per cent., but not exceeding twenty per cent. per annum, and seventy-five per cent. of all profits in excess of twenty per cent. per annum on capital. That is to say up to fifteen per cent. they will be liable to the existing legislation and in addition we shall take one-half of their profits between fifteen and twenty per cent. and three-fourths of their profits beyond twenty per cent.

NO TARIFF CHANGES TO PROPOSE.

The increased tax will chiefly affect manufacturers of munitions and other war supplies.

The new legislation, he explained, will apply to the last accounting period of the three year term provided in the business tax of 1916.

Sir Thomas announced that he had no tariff changes to propose.

Big Advance In Wheat Prices

Wheat markets took another long upward during yesterday, carrying all the options up 8c to 10c above Monday. The strength of the market was attributed to persistent buying by British interests and to heavy premiums for all cash grades. The May option at Chicago closed 3 1-2c up and at Winnipeg 3 3-4c up from Monday's close. Ontario flour advanced 20c.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern, $2.69 1-2; No. 2, $2.65; No. 3 $2.60; No. 4, $2.48; track, bay ports.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 33 cars, with 368 cattle, 428 calves, 874 hogs, and 41 sheep and lambs.

There was a very small market yesterday morning with an unusually light run offering. Prices were steady to firm at Monday's quotations, and everything cleaned up.

Sheep and lambs still very scarce and high.

Good run of calves, with market steady.

Some hogs were sold a quarter lower than yesterday, but mostly held over for to-day's market.

THE BRISCOE

"The Car With The Half Million Dollar Motor"

The Car Itself

A quality car, unmatched in its year-round service, unparalleled in its efficient, economical motor, and unequalled in its power and longevity.

A Car that can be bought and economically operated by the man of modest means.

In beauty of design, exquisite finish and perfectness of detail, the BRISCOE is built to satisfy the taste and pride of people of refinement.

An exceptional amount of room is given in both the driving and tonneau compartments.

Riding in a BRISCOE gives you the feeling of riding in luxury. It adds a whole lot to the pleasure of motoring.

It's Wonderful Motor

The half-million dollar motor is a masterpiece: it has been internationally accepted as such.

It is full of power and always possesses a reserve force to give that extra "go" that is indicative of quality and superiority.

For economy in operation it surpasses all records. The BRISCOE motor has gone 800 miles on a gallon of lubricating oil and 32 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

You can shift the gears of the BRISCOE B 4 - 24 with one finger. The Control is as easy and simple as that.

There is no opportunity for the clutch striking, the brakes are quick, sure, and easy of control.

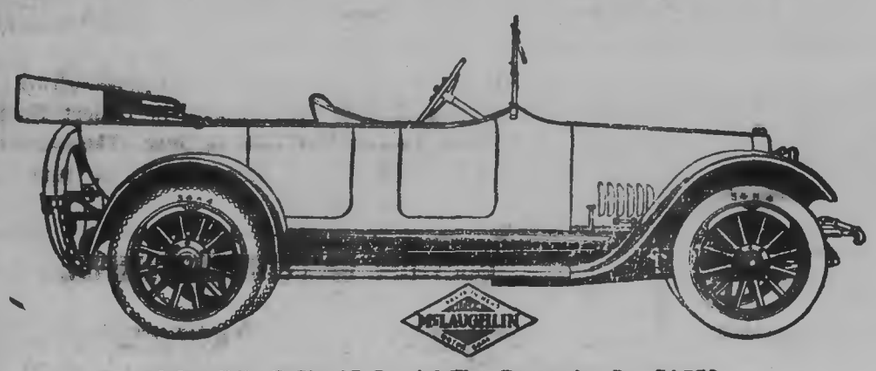
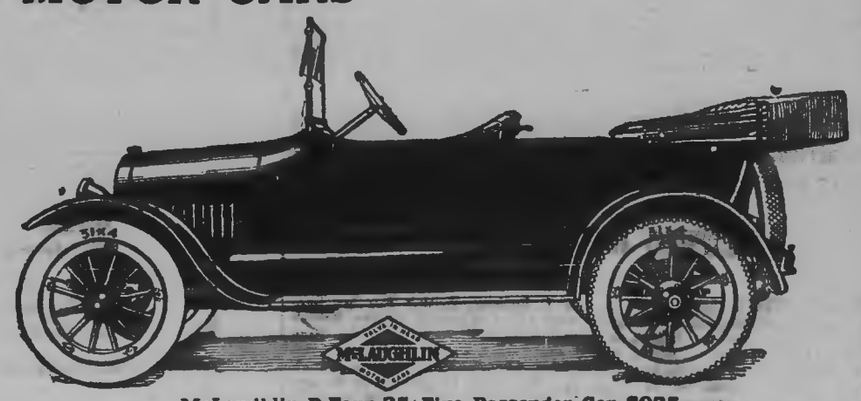
NEW SERIES, VALUE-IN-HEAD MOTOR CARS



McLaughlin D-Six-45 Special Five Passenger Car $1550

The McLaughlin "Value-in-Head" Motor conserves and uses a larger percentage of the power contained in Gasoline than any other Motor.



McLaughlin D-Four-35 Five Passenger Car $925

The McLaughlin Valve-in-head Motor differs from the other types of motors in both appearance and action. It is different in appearance because the valves through which gas enters and leaves the cylinders are in the tops, or heads, of the cylinders, whereas in other types of motors these valves are placed in sockets at the side of the cylinder.

Because of this different method of placing the valves in the McLaughlin cylinder, the McLaughlin motor, in action, has two great fundamental advantages over all other types of motors. This method of locating the valves makes the McLaughlin motor absolutely different from and superior to any other type of motor.

No car on the city boulevard or the country highway has such an enviable reputation for beauty, symmetry, grace and performance as the McLaughlin six cylinder valve-in-head D-Six-45 Special. In points of construction—chassis, wheels, motor, etc., this model is a replica of Model D-6-45. In body appointments and refinements it meets the demands of the most fastidious.

The New McLaughlin Four Cylinder Car has rightly been called the Challenge in Canadian motor car values. Designed and built to meet the requirements of the motorists who desire a car with Power and Sturdiness. It is equipped with the famous valve-in-head motor. So sturdy and well built is this new McLaughlin "Four" that it will travel anywhere the wheel can find a foothold.

Don't Fail To See the McLaughlin 1917 Model Exhibit at the Motor Show, Booths 6,7,8,9,10 (South Section).

Every McLaughlin owner will receive the prompt and efficient service to which he is entitled—the kind of service that will insure him the motoring pleasure he expects.

BE COURTEOUS

Courtesy in motor driving is the recognition of the rights of all others—either motorist or pedestrian. It is that and more, it is the willingness to yield certain recognized rights of our own.

First, do not hog the middle of the street. Give the other fellow room to go by and when he attempts to pass you do not speed up and perhaps crowd him into a safety zone. Be courteous.

Keep out of the safety zones. They are for the pedestrian. It is up to you to make them safe. Be courteous.

When a fellow comes in from a side street, give him room to turn the corner—do not crowd. When you park behind another car, remember perhaps he wishes to leave before you do. Give him room to get out—don't crowd. When you expect to stop or turn, do not keep your intentions secret. Think of the fellow behind. Be courteous.

Do not dodge in and around cars in line in traffic. Remember they were there first, and have just as great a desire to get through as you have. Be courteous.

Do not presume too much when you have the right of way. Perhaps the other fellow does not know it. Be courteous.

Do not cut in front of a street car. Remember the motorman is human and most of them will learn all the courtesy you will teach them. Be courteous.

When you get the "Go" signal from a traffic officer, remember to give the pedestrian time to get out of the way. Be courteous.

When you see people on the curb trying to reach a car, or vice versa, slow up, stop if necessary, but let them cross without danger. This is one of the greatest courtesies that will pay the motoring public best. Be courteous.

When a pedestrian does not or will not pay any attention to your horn it is well to remember that the deaf, hundreds of them, use the streets as well as you. Be courteous.

When you have an insane desire to speed, remember the other fellows you are passing have just as much right to break the law as you have. Think of the sentiment you are creating against them by your mania. Think of the accidents that may happen by your hitting some other driver coming in from a side street, or pedestrian who does not see you coming. Think of the people in your own car, perhaps, who have a fear of speeding and are trying to be game and not let you know it. It is not sport to drive fast in the city, it is the most rank discourtesy to your fellow motorists and fellow citizens. Be courteous.

When a pedestrian sees you coming and deliberately pays no attention to you, remember that same are mentally deficient and you cannot tell them from the clothes they wear. Be courteous.

When you see a child on a curb, slow up. Remember the child can start quicker than you can stop. Be courteous.

Do not open your cutout on the streets during the day. Remember there are many sick people and people on their death beds, which such a sound greatly disturbs. Do not open your cutout at night, for you probably remember some night when you were disturbed when trying to sleep by some fool whose greatest claim to fame was his noise. Be courteous.

And remember that your horn is just a few times worse than your cutout. Be courteous.

Be courteous to police officials and they will more than repay it. And if you feel like swearing at the ordinances, or if you do not like the traffic arrangements, remember that perhaps you may be wrong.—Wolverine Automobile Club.—Ford Times.

The next best device is a pocket flashlamp. It may be used anywhere, but it is not so satisfactory, as the battery must be renewed occasionally. On this account it must be flashed, as a steady light from it will run down in a very short time.

Go over the wires at the same time to see if they are properly secured, are not chafing where they touch some other part, and that the armor is not sliding up to the terminal so as to make a short circuit. If it comes loose wrap it well with electric tape.

Also try the fastenings at each lamp. The swaying of the wires causes them to weaken where they enter the lamp, so that they may break readily. Sometimes it makes such a drag on the wire that it pulls it loose. So carry a small screwdriver and try the fastenings of your wires in the sockets. By attention to the above hints you will avoid having to look for trouble when it is least convenient to hunt for it—at night.

EHRE'S THE TRUTH ABOUT THE FOOD IN GERMANY

The food conditions in Germany were described to the London Daily Mail by an English woman who escaped to Holland to ensure food for her children. Married to a business man in Dusseldorf, she was in Germany before the war and lived there until six weeks ago.

"There is partial starvation in Germany now. The German housewife fears real starvation in the spring—say, when vegetables are scarcest, in April. I know of boys of fifteen who have fainted at school. I weighed only 90 lbs (6st. 6lb) when I escaped from Germany. In eight days in Holland I gained 6 lbs. In six weeks, with nourishing food, I have gained 25 lb., and though still thin I am gaining daily."

The speaker was a slight—almost fragile—young widow, the daughter of Mr. J. R. Rock, 34 Endlesham road, Clapham Common, S. W. Her German husband, called up, at the outbreak of the war, was killed at Ypres. She was left with three young children; one died of diphtheria in November. A boy, aged one year and nine months, and a girl of three years and nine months she has succeeded in bringing to England after a series of adventures that reveal British tenacity and maternal solicitude.

STARVING TO SAVE THE BABIES

"In Dusseldorf we had a shortage of food last spring," she said last night, "and the famine in butter and other fats led to tremendous struggles in the shops. At three shops one Saturday night to my personal knowledge there were casualties. One woman was killed, another had her ribs broken and I was thrown down and trampled under foot. The clamor for fats grew until rioting set in and the soldiers appeared to sympathize with the women. When I moved to Crefeld and tried to deal with new butchers I could get no meat until tickets were introduced. Then we got our allowance and took it, asking no questions. The soldiers in the trenches may be well fed, but I have seen soldiers at home in training or on guard duty begging for bread from house to house. Every foot of land is cultivated, especially near the camps.

"Gradually the situation grew worse. Now there are no pigs, and potatoes, almost the only thing to be got, are growing scarcer. For a long time before we got away the allowance was 6 lb. of potatoes per person each week. In September we could get no milk powder or condensed milk for a fortnight. I had to go without dinner and supper in order that my children must be kept alive. Bear in mind, I had money to buy but could not get food at any price. Six weeks ago the weekly allowance per person on food tickets in Crefeld was:

6 lb potatoes, 1-2 lb. of meat, 3 1-2 lb. of bread, 1-2 lb. of sugar, 1 1-2 oz. of butter or other fat, no more than on kind.

"One egg a fortnight was allowed. For my two children I could get only 3-4 lb. meat. The news that a store has some cheese causes a crowd to mob the entrance, and the cheese is sold at twenty times the normal price. Jam cannot be got for love or money. The coffee substitute is frightful. A little coffee is smuggled from Holland, and also cocoa, to be sold at exorbitant prices. Prunes, rice and white flour are 2s 6d a lb. when you can get them. Household soap such as sells here at fivepence a bar costs 6s. You wash your hands in stuff made of clay. Hat elastic is 6s a yard.

"The Germans knew better than we how to store vegetables and how to cook them or they would not have done so well. The spirits of the women are marvellous. But in her heart the hausfrau believes that unless the government has somewhere enormous reserves of food for distribution she is close to starvation. Germans think England, too, is nearly as badly off for food as their own country."

CRAWL OVER THE FRONTIER

Finally she determined to escape. "Twice I tried," she said, "to gain the frontier, only to be stopped. Then one night I tried again and was pulled up by a sentry. He was insolent at first, but at last, when the guard changed at 10 p.m. he let me pass on my explanation that I was going to Holland to smuggle some things over. I got into the fields, but in trying to regain the main road was caught and handed over to another guard. This man finally said he would not hinder my doing a little smuggling. I passed several barking dogs and ran into the fields.

"After walking for an hour or so I came to a small forest surrounded by barbed wire by the Dutch. I walked round three sides trying to find my way. Eventually I struck the road again and saw a signpost that I was close to the German lines still. German sentries, in fact caught sight of me and started in my direction while I crawled on my elbows and toes. Turning, I saw another guard, and this time it was half an hour before I could move. I heard a clock in the distance strike 2 a.m. At last I got away and came to a Dutch cafe, with lah, three garden chairs a t[illegible] and a sack. With these I made a bed, and slept till six o'clock. As a result I still have a frozen toe."

In the morning she found a Dutch friend and arranged for a Dutch business man to bring her children over, which he did the following night.

NEW ZEALAND MEN 'MAY' GET $10 ABOVE WEEKLY WAGE.

"Wents" and "Sents" Fare Like

Over 80,000 Men Out Deplete Civilian Activities—Number of Children Affects Pay.

NEW ZEALAND, April 23.—From the fact that New Zealand soldiers in this war "may" now be paid up to $10 a week above their ordinary wages it is asserted in the dominion that they are the highest paid soldiers in the world. The special allowance is for men who can establish that their civil obligations justify their receiving it. And it is palable alike to "wents" and "sents."—as volunteers or drafted men are called. One of the grounds entitling a soldier to additional payment is: "Expenses in respect of the management of his business during his military service."

Prior to the new grant the weekly rate of pay for a married private in the New Zealand expeditionary force ranged from $10.50 for a man with a wife only to support to $17 for a man with a wife and five children. Some time ago the recruiting board decided to refuse enlistment to any more married men with more than three children. Under the new scheme a private with a wife only "may" receive $20.50 a week.

The first draft of the dominion's compulsorily enlisted men to the number of over 1,000 went into camp the latter part of January. These men were chosen by the "ballot" or drafting system: that is by the use of numbered marbles and card indexes. They are no different in appearance or in any other detail from voluntary recruits. Meantime, voluntary enlistment continues in some districts. If the full quotas are obtained that way, the ballot system is not applied there.

The men drafted with but few exceptions responded cheerfully, and many of them plainly welcomed a system by which the government shouldered the responsibility of deciding that they were to take up arms.

With over 80,000 men in the field or in training the civilian walks of life in New Zealand have been depleted to a noticeable extent, but the general opinion is that as long as the major part of these men return the temporary loss of man-power will not have been too heavy a price to pay for the establishment of a future national army. The dominion's population is about 1,[illegible],000.

Two-toned wide satin scarfs having deep pockets at the ends are already taking the place of the fur stoles. The scarfs are dressy and are worn with little mushroom hats to match, the rolling brims showing the light colours on the reverse side. Some of the hats have a single bunch of flowers at one side to match the brim facing.

History of The Automobile

The automobile is one of the most important devices ever made by man. With it as a servant distances are annihilated. The formerly remote and inaccessible corners of habitation have been brought to our very doorsteps. The farmer has been neighbourized; no longer does the gap of a few miles prevent social intercourse, or the availability of town. City dwellers are now able to negotiate distances in a prompt and expeditious manner. The short business call, or the long tour into the country with the family, is made easily and effectively with the automobile.

The history of the automobile is more wonderful than the tale of Aladdin's lamp. Its romance makes the stories of Captain Kidd sound as the playful Tales of Kindergarten. Of all industries, it has experienced the most phenomenal growth.

The automobile has met with the readiest reception on the part of the public because it is fundamentally a useful instrument. It is probably the most useful instrument in the world, because it most effectually solves transportation problems.

Civilization is a direct trailer of effective transportation. It is absolutely dependent on it. The human race has experienced the greatest advancement in the past ten years because the improvement of transportation facilities has affected the greatest number of people.

In spite of the wide acceptance of the atuomobile, people are still reluctant to grant it proper credit. In spite of the fact that there are approximately four million automobiles in use, or scheduled for use this year, people do not realize the tremendous proportions this business has assumed.

The automobile is one of the greatest factors in broadening and increasing the scope of pleasing activities, and credit should be placed where credit is due.

New cloth Al[illegible]e shaped hats in plain colours and in the black and white plaids are being selected for southern touring use. These hats go well with the new rainproof dust coats. Peltinvain, they are called. The coats are of gabardine with plaid linings, cut in full top coat model.

Hanshee cashmere chawl robes are excellent for early spring use, and they come in fascinating colours, the reverse side being a pale shade of the darker colour. For instance, a purple robe has a linen reverse, a brown a tan reverse, a navy a pale blue, and so on. The frings at the ends is three inches long.

Steep Gradients Are No Bar To Concrete Crowning of Roads

When the State of New York began to build concrete roads, this type of construction was not used on grades exceeding five feet rise in a distance of 100 feet. Experience has shown, however, that this limitation was unnecessary, and concrete roadways having grades of eight feet rise in a distance of 100 feet, or 8 per cent., have been built. These grades are steeper than road builders like to have on highways carrying more than a light traffic, no matter what kind of construction is employed.

H. Eltinge Breed, First Deputy Commissioner of the New York Highway Department, recently stated that the grade of concrete roads seems to be limited only by the character of the mixture forming the concrete, the ability of the wet concrete to stay in place until it hardens, and the nature of the traffic on the road. He reports that even on steep grades the use of coarse sand in the concrete prevents the surface from being slippery, and he advocates brooming the wet concrete so that the very minute particles which make the surface smooth will be dislodged before the mass hardens. As a matter of fact, concrete pavements have been laid in a number of cities on slopes steeper than those of the New York highways. Dale Place, in Little Falls, N.Y., has a pavement of this kind on an 18 per cent. grade, as has Twenty-Second street, in Kansas City, Mo. The pavement on Baxter street, Los Angeles, is on a grade of 29 per cent., and holds the record at present.

HEROINES

(By Patrick MacGill, Author of "The Great Push," Etc.)

"D'ye mind the bird that was in the farm at Bethune?" said the youth nicknamed Spudhole, as he sat on the fire-step and looked at the German trench through a periscope. Spudhole was a Cockney and a mate of mine.

"Yes I remember her," I replied. "The Sergeant said that her ankles were abnormally thick."

"The Sergeant's a fool!" Spudhole exclaimed.

"But her ankles did really look thick."

"You're a bigger fool than 'e is!"

"I didn't know that you had fallen in love with her," I said. "How did it happen?"

"Blimey! I'm not in love," said my mate; "but I like a girl with a good 'eart. 'Twas out in the orchard in the farm that I first met 'er. I was pullin' apples, pinchin' 'em if yer like to say so, and I was shakin' the apples from the branches. I 'ad to keep my eyes on the farm to see that nobody seed me as I was gettin' them. It takes a devil o' a lot o' strength to rumble apples off a tree, doesn't it? All at once I saw the girl o' the farm comin' runnin' at me wiv a stick. Round to the other side o' the tree I ran like lightenin' and after me she comes. Then round to the other side went I——"

"Which side?" I asked.

"The side she wasn't on," said Spudhole. "After me she comes and round to the other side I 'ops——"

"Who was on the other side now?" I enquired.

"I took good care to be always on the other side, until I saw what she was up to giv the stick," said Spudhole. "But d'yer know what the stick was for? Lor Lummy! 'twas to 'elp me to bring down them apples. Savvy? Ah! they're great women, the women of France."

"Yes, they are," I said.

"And d'ye mind at Les Brebis the girl, Fifi?" asked Spudhole.

"No, I don't remember her," I said. "I was in another section then."

"Well ye remember that time that we were there diggin' trenches, and 'ow we asked to go up to the work every night," said Spudhole, "and one night the Germans were shellin' the road like blazes and we did 'ave the wind up, 'specially when we got as far as Grenay and found all the 'ouses flyin' about through the streets. The church was comin' in for it; gettin' shelled continual. And there wasn't no civilians in the place; they had been turned out o' there by the French. We came to the church and Gawd! it was witherin', goin' to pieces. And the stretcher bearers comin' down the road and the wounded groanin'. And wot should we meet outside the church, but the young French girl Fifi, walkin' along the road wiv a French soldier. They didn't take no notice o' us, for they were talkin' about things that had nuffink at all to do wiv the war. But the sight bucked us up and we began to sing like 'ell, for it was good to see a woman as didn't care a 'ang about the war and sboo grand.... Ah! they're great women, the women o' France," said Spudhole lighting a cigarette.

The women of France, what heroism and fortitude animates them in every shell-shattered village from Switzerland to the North Sea. The sickle and plough are symbols of peace and power in their hands, in a land where men destroy and women build. The young girls of the hundred and one villages which fringe the line of destruction proceed with their day's work under shell-fire, calm as if death did not wait ready to pounce on them behind every corner.

There was a woman in the hamlet of [illegible] and she owned a white horse. [illegible] Germans shelled the place one day brought this horse up to the window, went inside and stuck out her right hand through a hole in the shattered [illegible]. Once when a [illegible] passed over. I have seen the [illegible] through the air [illegible] Once when we came back to [illegible] after a spell in the trenches the woman greeted the hand through the window. Then it was [illegible] enough, not the [illegible] right hand this time, but the left. A splinter of shell had [illegible] two fingers off the woman's right hand a few days before we came.

This hamlet had a saying of its own and it was this: "When the Boche shells Philosophe the soldiers run in for their lives and the women run out for their washing."

In a bundle of bricks that was once her home a woman sells cafe noir near Cuinchy Brewery. Once it was cafe au lait and cost four sous a cup, but now she only charges three sous since her cow got shot in the stomach outside the ramshackle estaminet. In company with a few mates I was in the place a few months ago, when a bullet entered the door and smashed the coffee pot; the woman now makes coffee in a biscuit tin.

The French girls have a great admiration for British soldiers, and this is a song about the matter. The Tommies sing it up and down the roads of France.

Apre lay guerre finy,
Soldo Anglay partee
Maselle Frongsay boko ploory,
Apre le guerre finee.

They are great women, the women of France, and Spudhole who is in love with a girl at Bethune is quite justified in making the assertion.

SYSTEM IN BRITISH MUNITION FACTORY

Bonuses for Foremen and Managers—Rich Women Work at Week-ends to Keep Machines Busy

Brenda Girvin classifies many workers in English munition factories as follows:—The Foreman has under his charge a certain portion of the shop. In addition to his wages he receives a bonus on the output from the machines under his control. The Manager has the whole shop under his care, and in addition to his wages receives a bonus on the total output.

The Storekeeper is the man in charge of the stores, who doles out cotton-waste, files, grease, gauges, cranks, turnkeys, overalls, gloves, and all the requisites of the workshop.

All Paid at Same Rate

The Timekeeper is the clerk who checks the arrival and departure of the hands by giving out time-cards which are "clocked." The Pay Clerk is the girl who pays the wages every Friday through the office window in small white packets inscribed with the date, the number of the machinist, and the hours she has worked during the week. The Relief Worker is the woman of leisure who keeps the lathes running during Saturday afternoon and Sundays so that the week-day machinists may have a rest. She wears a blue overall and cap and is paid at the same rate as the industrial hands.

Nurses and "Guardians"

The Hospital Nurse is there for the purpose of attending to cuts in fingers or any small injuries which may happen to a worker during the shift. The Welfare Superintendent is the woman appointed by the Welfare Department of the Ministry of Munitions to superintend the moral and social welfare of the hands. She acts as intermediary between the girls and the manager, and is responsible to the nation for their health and well-being.

Amusing Incidents Related by Wounded Hero

Sergt.-Major Thos. Geggie writes:—At five a.m. the Sister, who is fra' Lancashire, begins to show her authority. "Get oop," and, if the patient is in a sufficiently convalescent stage, he gets oop on-time. Having washed, we indulge in bed-making. I have found out that though the more male man may dig a canal, bridge chasms, and dam torrents, he cannot make a bed—at least not to the satisfaction of a nursing sister. I have turned the mattress, smoothed the sheets, carefully laid the blankets, placed the quilt in its mathematically correct position, and cautiously tucked in the whole. I have bobbled round its beautiful neatness on my crutches and viewed the effect from north, south, east, and west. I have pronounced it good and straightway got into it. But no, it won't do. I am told it must be tidy. Tidiness let me say, is the Alpha and Omega of hospital life.

Breakfast is an incident which happens to most people, even in war time. I pass it by with the remark that I have tasted stronger tea.

Now comes the event of the day—Dressings—I wish I could do justice to this painful subject.

Dressing continues, more or less, all day, and is only interrupted by the doctor's daily visit. He doesn't stay long as a rule. He sees a case here and there, marks some one for a tour at a convalescent home, suggests a further operation for some unfortunate wight, and disappears.

So arrives 6 p.m. and the Night Sister; another crotchet is added to my temperature chart. The electric light is snapped out. We have come to the end of (Would you call it?) a "Perfect Day."

Value of Victoria Cross

The intrinsic value of the Victoria Cross does not exceed 2c or 4c. When first made, it was alluded to as the "two pean'orth of bronse." Its value lies entirely in the deed it is granted for, and when worn, takes the precedence of all other medals and decorations.

Fired Canada's First Gun

The man who fired the first Canadian gun in the present war was Sergt.-Major William Eden, of the 1st Battery, 1st Brigade, C.F.A. He returned on furlough to Victoria once after spending seventeen months in France.

Barbers and Jews as Doctors

In Persia surgery is almost solely practised by barbers and Jews; the former also act as dentists and bonesetters.

RUTHLESS WARFARE CLEVERLY JUSTIFIED

Secret Orders to German Press—"Only Way to Win"—Hoped to Hoodwink the United States

When Germany started out on unrestricted submarine warfare the following secret army order was issued to the press: Newspapers are requested to act on the following advice when discussing unlimited "U" boat war:—(1) Opinions regarding the usefulness of the measures and of the time chosen, after the decision has been made, would have the effect of weakness and lack of harmony, would encourage the enemy, and perhaps induce wavering neutrals to come in.

Ring Out the Lies

(2) For the beginning of the concluding struggle absolute internal unison is essential. The determined approval of the entire people must ring out from the Press. (3) It is a question, not of movement of desperation—all the factors have been carefully weighed after conscientious technical naval preparation—but of the best and only means to a speedy, victorious ending of the war.

"Outwardly Friendly"

(4) Towards America it is advisable to use the outward forms of friendliness. Unfriendliness would increase the danger of America coming in—the breaking off of diplomatic relations, even active participation, hangs in the balance. The attitude of the Press must not increase this danger.

(5) The Navy, fully conscious of its powers, enters into this new section of the war with firm confidence in the result. It is recommended that the phase he called unlimited, not ruthless, "U" boat war.

SERB WOMEN SHOT

Story by German Writer who "Cast Down His Eyes"

The Serbian Legation issues the following:—A German author, Oscar Maurus Fontana, who accompanied the German Army to Serbia, publishes a long description of the deeds of the German troops on Serbian territory, which is the more remarkable because it contains a great number of cynical admissions and "explanations of the atrocities committed on the civil population. Among others he describes the following scene: — "During a march we came to a house which was on fire; that was a signal. Shells were raining on us. The soldiers put out the fire and brought along three women and an aged Serb whom they had found near the fire. They were accused of having set the house on fire. They reply, 'No.' They are told to confess. They reply, 'We have done nothing—it was done by others, it is our own house which is burning—it was set alight by other people.' They are then asked how many Serbian troops have passed that way. They reply, 'We don't know.' Thereupon the commander says, 'Shoot them.' The group stand still. This takes their breath away. Nobody tells these women in their own native tongue what is going to be done to them. But they have understood; they cast down their eyes like an animal expecting a blow; they do not utter a sound. A momentary shiver passes through them. They do not believe, they do not comprehend; their eyes look for deliverance—expect a miracle. They walk slowly, or rather drag themselves; before their condemnation they had looked fixedly at some of us, mutely and without tears in such a manner that we also had to cast down our eyes. . . . Afterwards the crackling of the rifles was heard.

Canada's Fish Needed

Immense amounts of herring, caught off Port Simpson, have been stored away at the Seal Cove plant at Prince Rupert, says the Colonist of Victoria, B.C. Scores of tons are being landed by the companies' boats, and as the fish are of a first-class grade, an excellent bait supply is assured for the halibut fishermen. This trade thrived greatly after the war shortages in food began to be experienced.

Nettles For Clothes

Nettles, considered useless weeds before the war, are now being collected in Germany in large quantities for textile purposes. A society for the use of nettle fibres was formed, and collected 1,650 tons of dried nettle stalks in its main storerooms, in addition to collections in its branch establishments.

A Curious Kind of Mind

The German mind is curious. For instance, all Germany needs to justify a crime is the announcement that she intends to commit it.

Keep going; a bicycle idle has to be propped up.

"Buzz Wagons" Save Circus $1,200 Daily

Motor Truck Becoming Real Competitor of Railroads and Electric Lines

Twelve hundred dollars is the amount of money the new motorized circus expects to save every day in railroad transportation charges. This estimate is based upon the daily average cost of hauling to all big circuses minus the estimated motor upkeep for the new enterprise.

As a result of this statement, issued at the headquarters of the United States Circus Corporation, motor truck manufacturers are watching the project with a great deal of interest.

"The success of this enterprise means that the motor truck has become a real competitor of the railroads and electric lines on short hauls," said one manufacturer in discussing the motorized circus. "When it can be proved that 100 motor trucks with 100 trailers can save $1,200 each day in overland hauls of from 30 to 50 miles as this circus claims it will, then a new field has opened for the motor truck."

The upkeep cost of the caravan is expected to be kept at a minimum. Only skilled mechanicians will be employed as drivers.

STITCHES IN TIME

Do you neglect the universal joints on the car. They are hard to get at and are always dirty. But they must be properly lubricated or they will wear rapidly. When they wear they become noisy and reproach you for neglecting them, as they give a loud thump every time the clutch is let in.

Don't overlook the bearings of the electric generator and starter. They run at high speed and so need frequent attention. Neglect here means ruining a costly part of the mechanism.

The best grinding material for engine valves is carborundum, although emery is very good. Use the compound which contains it ready mixed. If none is obtainable buy 120-degree emery if valves are badly pitted, finishing with flour emery. Mix with oil to a paste like thick cream. This will do the work, but is not as good as the compound.

Try the fan belt once in a while to make sure it is being driven at the right speed. If you can spin the fan the belt needs tightening. If the fan does not run at the right speed the engine is more likely to overheat.

Auto Furnished Idea for "Tank"

When Graham Bell invented the telephone he did not think his invention would be the stepping stone to another great discovery—the wireless telephone. When the first automobile was invented—you can still hear it chugging down the street—the inventor did not dream that his idea would be enlarged to the extent of the production of a motor driven machine that could penetrate walls, tear down trees and perform many other acts of destruction. Surely the "tanks" that have been used so successfully against the Germans can be rated as a cousin to the automobile.

It is true that the tank does not possess tires, but it has, on a gigantic scale, many features common in an automobile. The censor's regulations do not permit publishing the tank's details, but it is commonly known that a man who is accustomed to a car is more or less at home when guiding the huge machines of destruction over shell holes and trenches and through strongly constructed brick walls.

Like its cousin, the tank is power driven and to-day British scientists are devising ways and means of improving it so that the consumption of fuel may be minimized. It is more than probable that to-day new engines have been invented to take the place of those that have driven the tanks for a few months and are now seemingly antiquated.

Why Automobile Prices Are Higher

Asbestos, which is used in brake linings, has advanced from $300 a ton to $1,500 a ton, says the Timken Magazine. This mineral comes from Canadian mines, and the British Government has first call upon the supply. Only about 25 per cent. of the total mine output is of the long fibre variety suitable for spinning yarn. The Canadian Government also requires all producers of asbestos to get a signed statement from all customers to whom they sell Canadian asbestos that the same shall not be exported to the enemies' countries.

The following advances over 1915 prices show the increased cost of manufacturing automobiles and parts: Steel for stampings, 175 per cent.; cap screws, 175 per cent; pig iron, 25 per cent; cold rolled steel, 150 per cent; nickel steel, 36 per cent.; steam coal, 452 per cent.; malleable iron castings, 35 per cent.; Rex. AA tool steel, 498 per cent.; fuel oil, 96 per cent; six-inch belting 30 per cent., and chemicals have advanced from 300 to 500 per cent. over the high prices of a year ago.

Chin strap or bridle toques in suede, leather or satin, while not altogether new, are very good for touring wear on breezy days. The bridle holds the hat in place without pins, besides being quaintly becoming to the face if it is of just the right width.

STILL CHEERY.

The Experiences of Private Lonsdale in German Prison.

Private W. Lonsdale, the Leeds tramwayman who is a prisoner of war in Germany and whose death-sentence (afterwards commuted to twenty years' penal servitude) recently aroused great indignation in this country, writes bitterly about the treatment meted out to him. He is now in the fortress prison of Spandau, and, though in good health, is feeling the full rigour of German "discipline."

In one letter to his wife he says:

"The captain came to see me yesterday and gave me some papers. The only time I have for reading is on a Sunday. During the week it is all work and sleep, and not a large amount of the latter. . . . Pleased to hear that —— (someone at the Front) is still alive and well. You can tell him that I don't fancy being a prisoner of war; and also tell him that, if he is so placed that he is likely to be taken prisoner, he had better put a bullet through his brain. Death is far preferable to what I have already gone through. If my time were to come over again, I should never be a prisoner of war. I would be with my comrades on the pithills in Flanders. They have tried several ways to kill me. Now they are trying to starve me because I am English. I only get half as much to eat as the German prisoners. This is not the Salvation Hotel; it is the Starvation Hell."

In another letter he urges his wife not to worry about him, as he is quite well. "So cheer up," he adds, "keep up a good old British heart the same as I am doing, and all will come well in the end. Remember: Once British always British. That is a good motto, and it takes a lot to break the heart of a true Britisher."

Ocean Greyhounds as Cruisers.

Since Britain became a sea power the British Government has claimed the right to convert merchant and passenger vessels into warships in time of war. Indeed, we have paid subsidies to certain lines in order that we might have the means of taking over vessels which we intended to convert.

In Elizabeth's time every trader became a warship at need. The fleets of the East India Company consisted of armed vessels which could and did fight on occasion in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and there is an historic incident in the annals of the Navy concerning Commodore Dance, who, in 1804, with his squadron of Indiamen, put to flight the French fleet under Admiral Linois.

To-day such vessels as the Lusitania, the Mauretania, the Aquitania, and the Carmania, which performed the gallant feat of sinking the German armed cruiser Cape Trafalgar off the Brazilian coast, have been taken over by the Navy, or remain at call. The same remark applies to the vessels of the P. and O. Line and those of the White Star Line, such vessels as the Teutonic, the Adriatic, the Olympic, and the Oceanic, which was wrecked off the North Coast of Scotland. Having been transformed into armed cruisers.

[illegible] vessels do not seek action like the ordinary cruisers and Dreadnoughts. Their business mainly during a time like this, is to patrol the trade routes. Naval officers and men are drafted on board, and although they would stand little chance in a pitched battle with armed cruisers and Dreadnoughts, they can, as is illustrated by the case of the Carmania, be reckoned upon to give a good account of themselves in an emergency.

All Want Gowns.

The craze for legal gowns, says a Calcutta newspaper, has now spread to the mukhtears of Bengal. A few years ago vakils obtained permission to wear gowns. Black gowns were suggested by vakils but as these would have led to their being mistaken for members of the Bar, blue gowns were given them. Recently the pleaders asked that the privilege of wearing gowns should be extended to them and the necessary sanction was granted, green being the color selected. Not to be outdone the mukhtears are now moving in the matter and the initiative has been taken by those practising in the Jalpaiguri courts who have petitioned the Registrar on the Appellate Side of the Calcutta High Court to be allowed to wear gowns. The color suggested is chocolate. The matter is under consideration by the Chief Justice.

Make Jaw From a Rib.

Part of a rib of a Toronto soldier has become his new jaw. This surgery has just been wrought at Toronto upon one of the 800 injured who have recently returned from the Canadian army corps fighting in France. The subject, a private, had a big section of the bone from the back portion of his lower jaw carried away by a shell at Ypres.

Reaching Toronto, he was badly disfigured, as the cheek had fallen in. General hospital surgeons decided to operate, but they needed a piece of bone to fill in the gap. So they removed a piece of one of his own ribs and built it into his face where the jaw-bone had been before.

Revenue of the Punjab.

The total revenue raised from the Punjab population of twenty millions is eighty-seven million rupees. This includes all sources of revenue under the heads of excise, stamps, opium, salt, forest, law and justice, jails, agriculture, and education, which are for services rendered or goods supplied, as well as direct taxes, such as revenue from the land or income tax. This works out at a little less than four and a half rupees per head, about equal to $1.50.

Goggles Don't Keep Out All of The Dust

Notwithstanding the best fitting goggles automobile tourists are frequently inconvenienced quite seriously by dust in their eyes, and although it seems impossible to exclude the dust, the subsequent treatment for the abatement of the annoyance is quite simple. A solution of boracic acid in warm water will quickly remove the dirt, and may be applied either by means of an eyecup or by a small swab of cotton, particular attention being given to wiping out the inside of the lower eyelid, where the bulk of the dust will collect. Besides cleansing the eye, this solution will be found decidedly soothing, and to allay the natural inflammation.

Ten Commandments For Tire Users

1. Ascertain the right size and type of tire for your car, and use them exclusively.
2. Apply tires with care, so that tire and rim fit properly.
3. Use inner tubes with proper type of valve, and carry in tube bags.
4. Don't over-inflate or overload tires.
5. Don't drive in street car tracks, or let wheels get out of alignment.
6. Don't scrape alongside of curbs or drive or back against them.
7. Don't look the wheels of your car in stopping, or skid, or use tight chains.
8. Don't expose tires to the light, or let unused car stand on tires all winter.
9. Don't neglect casing cuts, no matter how slight, or let grease, oil or gasoline soak into your tires.
10. Demand rims bearing the official standard inspection stamp.

Tufted leather pillows are newer than the plain ones, but are not comfortable. Velvet pillows trimmed with worsted flowers are novel and are in the bolster shape, gathered and finished at the ends with tassels. Still newer are the pillows made on pongee or India silk, stencilled. These are done in bold floral designs on natural tan. They clean perfectly and it is said will wash if great care is taken. They are made slip fashion to button in place.

Amber wrist rings finish a bag made of a mandarin yellow Chinese embroidered square. The bag is done in blue, gray, gold, black, green and white, in a lotos and rice bird design. The bag is lined with old blue silk and has a fringe of amber beads and blue silk tassels at the bottom.

AUTOMOBILE PRICES HAVE ADVANCED LESS THAN TEN PER CENT

In Comparison With Other Commodities, Advance Increase is the Smallest of All

Last fall and in the early winter, then during the show season and even at the approach of spring, advances in the selling prices of automobiles have been announced. As a rule, these have varied from $50 to $100, and in some instances have slightly exceeded the last named figure.

So automobiles, with the exception of a very few makes, are costing a little more than they did during the 1916 season. The average is under 10 per cent. in the advance, and a comparison between the automobile and other commodities makes the difference quite the smallest of all. Staples in the line of catables are up 25 per cent. or more, some of them 500 per cent through a short crop; stoves 30 to 40 per cent.; shoes have advanced as much as 30 per cent.; many fabrics for clothing men and women more than that—everything is on the rise.

The materials which enter into the construction of an automobile are "out of sight" in some instances, the advance in certain metals being very very pronounced.

And, above all this, the manufacturers have found that they could get by on an average of less than ten per cent., without the slightest sacrifice of quality. It only shows that this is the greatest manufacturing industry in the world.

IMPROVEMENTS ARE NUMEROUS.

It would seem that to keep the price down the makers would have to cut cross lots, so to speak, in everything that pertained to production. Cheaper materials, for instance, cheaper methods, and so on, but the striking thing of all is that they have done nothing of the sort.

On the contrary, the 1917 models are best cars ever produced. Nobody who went to the Detroit automobile show left there with any other impression. The product of the Michigan plants and of those who are fetching coals to Newcastle, all of them had a look of newness, refinements in every way, that distinguished them from any of the past.

"This car costs just $100 more than did the corresponding model of a year ago to-day, but contains more than $100 worth of improvements on that car," explained a dealer. Then he went on to enumerate, and if one were to have taken a pencil and jotted down the items and their cost he would have found that there was an excess of the $100 added to the selling cost. Also, he explained that, pound for pound, the metals in the car cost the maker a tidy sum more than the model of 1916.

By the addition of some wonderful pieces of machinery and the most careful scrutiny of the making of the cars, the makers have been able to counteract the price of raw materials. That is the answer, that is why the 1917 cars are superlative.

EQUIPMENT FAR BETTER.

Cars are better equipped this year than ever before. The list of accessories furnished with the car is not any longer, but the accessories themselves are more refined. So are the auxiliary systems, such as lubrication, ignition, lighting, starting, carburetion, etc.

Take the dash instruments. All the speedometers are now mounted flush with the instrument boards. They do not project above the surface. The ammeters now register discharge and charge, giving a clue to the entire electrical system. There are more pressure gauges for the oiling system mounted on the dash, as would be expected with the increase in the use of pressure feed.

The increase of pressure feed is to be expected in connection with the ever increasing rotative speed of motors. It is becoming more and more necessary to lead the oil positively to the bearing points under great pressure. Hence pressure feeds are now sending the oil at 25 pounds pressure directly into the bearings.

In starting and lighting equipment there is greater simplicity than ever. The use of the simpler means of meshing the starter with the crank shaft is one improvement. The screw gear used here is a good example. In generator drives there has been some change. One prominent maker has just mounted the generator in unit with the fan and drives both off the same belt. This is illustrative of the general trend toward simple and accessible electric drive.

FOR LOW GRADE GASOLINE.

Carburetors have been improved to take the lower grade of gasoline now on the market. The principal manner in which this situation has been met is in the use of more heat to aid in the vaporization. Whereas formerly it was the custom to preheat some of the air entering the carburetor, many are now preheating all the air. This helps to vaporise the heavy grades of gasoline.

Great improvements in ignition have been necessary to take care of the multi-cylinders and the high speeds.

A few new systems have been introduced. One prominent manufacturer who has been supplying a large part of the trade has just introduced a new system that is taking quite well.

This is a closed circuit device—that is, the circuit is normally closed, being broken every time a spark is desired. A successful system can readily take care of a 12-cylinder motor running at 3,000 revolutions a minute. This means the development of 18,000 sparks a minute. A few years ago this would have been declared impossible.

In the little details of equipment the same great care is noticeable. The steering wheels are larger to give better leverage, clutch pedals are not so hard to depress, gears are simpler to shift, and driving is generally easier. Even cooling, which was standardised in most respects, has come in for its share of refinement and more water space and better pumps are found on the cars of 1917 than of 1916.

ALL PASSENGERS COMFORTABLE.

Passengers have more comfort in 1917 models. Occupants can generally sit as they please, and not as they have to sit. There is also a greater choice in bodies for all purposes.

Among the body developments of the year are the club roadsters, the touring sedan, movable and adjustable sedan, movable and adjustable seats, better upholstery, better arrangement of instruments and guages, better tops, windshields, and tire carriages, and more luxurious fittings.

An important improvement is a wider choice in painting colors and trim. Many makers are getting away from the solid black and offering instead blues and grass as standards of options.

Most important of all the improvements in bodies is the better arrangement of seats. The front compartment of the touring car is now as comfortable as the rear, and is no longer neglected when the body is laid out.

The close-coupled touring car has about passed out of existence and in its place is the club roadster, so that in the pure touring design there is always plenty of room in the tonneau.

Two factors have been very important as regards room in bodies. The wheel base is longer on most cars and and the engine is shorter, due to the block method of casting. This has allowed from five to six inches more space to be used in the bodies of a great many cars, and it has been used to great advantage.

DEVELOPMENT OF ROADSTERS.

A great amount of ingenuity has been displayed during the year in the development of the roadster. The passenger type, which has all the room of the small touring car and which still preserves the graceful lines of the roadster, have been the season's popular developments. These cars are seen around the country clubs and the shops and are often owned by people who have one or more other cars in their garage.

The touring sedan, which was introduced three years ago, is now developed to a higher extent than ever. In fact the sedan has become the most popular type of closed body and has made the limousine secondary.

If anyone were to place his finger upon this or that tendency of motor car construction at the present time the fact that the purchase of automobiles is now a family affair would stand out as one of the most distinct.

It has only been within the last few years that this development has come about, for it can be readily remembered how, only a short time ago, the men of the family were the only ones considered capable of operating an automobile. Nowadays the situation is entirely different; probably no one enjoys driving a car more than the women of the family.

A glance at any exhibit will reveal how automobile designers are treating with more than passing importance the elements which make a suitable car for family purposes. Woman-demand is placing a premium upon comfort, convenience, ease of handling, and safety.

Ford Costs More Than Packard

Here is the story of the highest-priced Ford in the world, brought back from Boston by a businessman:

Maine farmers are genuine down-east Yankees and shrewd at driving a bargain. One of them wanted a Ford rather badly, and last fall he made a dicker with the dealer to give him 400 barrels of potatoes on March 1 for a touring car.

On that particular day Maine potatoes were worth $10 a barrel, so that the farmer had to pay just about $4,000 for his car.

If this is so, it is a record; if it isn't, it is a good story, anyhow.

Keep Your Rims Clean to Avoid Tire Troubles

The demountable rim is demountable in name only unless it is properly taken care of. If mud and dirt are allowed to collect in between rust, which will grip the rim so tightly that it may take hours to remove it instead of seconds. A few suggestions along this line will be particularly valuable just at this time, as this is the muddy season and matters will get worse until the spring rains are over.

Do not wait until a puncture obliges you to remove the rim, but seize the first opportunity to remove it and break up an adhesion which has already formed. Of course, if you have a spare rim of two you will go over these first. Clean off the rust with sandpaper or emery cloth. Kerosene will soften rust, but it will also cause it. If you use it at all remove it carefully afterward, using gasoline. When the rim clean and dry it should be painted with special rim paint, obtainable at any auto supply store. This is unaffected by the rust and will not flake off. It will wear off, however, and should be renewed in places whenever the rim is removed.

Aluminum paint may be used if you prefer the finish of aluminum. It is nothing but powdered aluminum held together with banane oil. It protects the surface very effectually and, being a powder, does not flake off. It looks very well at the sides, but is not thick enough to protect the part where the tire touches the rim or the rim rests on the wheel. For this reason a mixture of graphite with the shellac to give it a good colour, thinning it a little with alcohol to make it flow readily. Apply this carefully, letting it dry and giving it two coats if thought necessary. Give it plenty of time to dry, or it will stick and pull away where anything touches it.

Even where no demountable rim is used the rim should have this treatment so as to prevent the shoe from sticking to it. While it may seem irksome, the tires should be removed and the rims painted even before a puncture calls for a change. The welding process is going on all the time, each day adding something to its holding power, so that some day when you are required to change tires in a hurry you will find the tire so tightly fastened that you will lose many times the short time required to remove the tire originally and paint the rim.

Another point of immense importance is to put grease on the bolts and nuts. If the threads are filled with grease the water cannot work in and rust the two together. Some rims have bolts going through the fellow of the wheel. This hole should be filled with grease to keep out the water. Another place where grease is of primary importance is in the hub of a detachable wheel. After removing it look carefully and you will see where it is bevelled to make a tight fit on the axle. To provide for this, fill the space between the ends with grease and there will be always some within reach.

If you prefer grease to paint on the rings or other parts which secure the quick detachable timer it may be used, but it is advisable to work a good deal of graphite into it. This is especially advised if the grease is to be used where the tire can touch it. Have it mostly graphite, with only enough grease to hold it on. If these directions are followed you will have reason to be thankful if ever you have to change tires in a hurry.

For the motorist who gives the attention to detail that doubles the a measuring device for determining accurately if his wheels are in alignment. If they are not, excessive wear on the tire results and the tires do not last long. The device is made of one-inch steel tubing and at either end has graduated scales of figures which give the exact measure between rims. The price is $10.

An engine-driven tire pump, which is operated through gears by the motor has special brackets and fittings to assure ready installation. Any motorist can put it in place, the makers say. A movement of a lever places the pump in mesh. It is claimed for the pump that it will inflate a 34x4 inch tire in ninety seconds. A pressure gauge is attached to the hose. The pump costs $10.

HIGH QUALITY WORKMEN EAGERLY SOUGHT BY CAR MANUFACTURERS

Hire high class men if you want quality work is the axiom laid down by the automobile industry.

The class of workman employed has almost as much to do with the quality of the product as the class of materials that enter into automobiles and motor trucks.

A large percentage of workmen employed in factories nowadays are what might be termed "floaters." These men seem to have no definite purpose in life but are obsessed with the wanderlust and they keep changing from place to place, always sure in good times of some kind of a job. That's one way to get experience of course, but such men do not make desirable or dependable workmen.

Neither do factories care to employ men from other factories. First, because they do not want to deprive competitors of the men they have trained; and, second, because men trained from the ground up in each manufacturer's way of doing things, are infinitely superior.

They prefer to take young fellows right off the farm, when they can get them, put them in at the bottom, and show them that nothing save their own shortcomings stands between them and the top.

Great pains are taken to educate such men and as they become proficient they are promoted. Because of the constant and the steady growth of the factories there are always positions open for foremen, superintendents and managers of departments. Consequently there is always an incentive to a man to do his best in order to obtain advancement.

In that way manufacturing organizations are kept together and give the fellows who show talent an opportunity to constantly advance and better themselves.

Every manufacturer knows the superiority of married men over single ones—the very fact that they have homes with home interests, and are settled, makes them better men mentally, as well as physically.

When a man owns his own home, he is anxious to hold on to his job, and of course he is anxious for advancement. The wife is a very important factor in this matter of advancement. Invariably she encourages and urges the husband to get along for the children's sake.

The old theory that a man never did his best unless he was always in terror of losing his job is an exploded theory. Such a man is worried mentally and becomes physically unfit to do his best.

What Does It Cost To Drive An Automobile?

The following table is a compilation of figures taken from the reports of a large number of automobile owners, and covering many different kinds of cars. They apply not to expert mechanics, but to the average man with no great technical knowledge of the machine he is driving. The estimates are based on 6,000 miles a year:

Item.	year	500 car Cts per mile year	$1,200 car Cts per mile year	$2,000 car Cts. per mi. year
Tires	$ 33	$ 1.33 $ .60	$ 2.50 $ .60	$ 2.70
		$ 1.00 1.30	1.50 1.70	1.90
Gasoline	$ .90	1st 2d to 5th	1st 2d to 5th	1st 2d to 5th
Oil	$ .25	.35 .45	.35 .50	.60
Repairs	$ .12	.40 .12	.50 .12	.70
Total actual running cost without chauffeur, etc	$ 1.50	$ 8.08 $ 2.47	$ 5.00 $ 2.92	$ 590

Early spring days will find the man who drives his own touring car wearing the latest model in leather coats. The coat has a Shetland wool lining that snaps in place and may be removed if too warm. Buttoning from right side way over to the left with one button, the coat is secured at the waist line with a belt fastened to the coat except for a space in front where it may be tightened or loosened. A convertable collar can be regulated to suit the weather. The coat is loosened enough to admit of perfect freedom in driving. The smartest touch to this outfit is an aviator model cap worn with the coat. The cap comes in three models—the curtained hood, the fur-lined hood and the leather lined skull cap with ear protectors.

HOW THE MOTOR FUNCTIONS TOLD SIMPLY BY AN EXPERT

Prefacing the Following Brief and Simple Explanation of the Operation of a Gasoline Motor Car's Power Plant, Mr. Stewart Points Out the Advantages That Accrue to the Motorist Who "Knows His Car"

"Many persons have trouble with their automobiles because they do not understand," says William H. Stewart, Jr., president of the Stewart Automobile School. "They never can expect to obtain the best results from their cars unless they understand the functions of each part of the mechanism, the operation, the troubles, and the minor repairs. This seems like a large undertaking but it can be accomplished if one applies himself systematically to the task. The mystery of mysteries to the average individual is the engine. Unless the construction and the operation of the engine are known, the novice can never hope to clear his mind of that haunting dread that 'something' is going to happen.

"The essential parts of the motor are few are easily learned. Every one has heard of an engine having four, six or more cylinders. The cylinder is the important part of the engine. Inside it are the moving parts which give power. The more cylinders employed the smoother the engine is supposed to run. The moving parts inside are first the piston, then the wrist pin passing through it. This serves as a hinge for the connecting rod which transmits the power to the crank shaft, running the length of the engine, and receiving power from all the cylinders.

"The purpose of the piston is fourfold: First, to draw in the fresh mixture on the suction srtoke; second, to compress it on the compression stroke; third, to receive the force of the explosion on the power stroke, and transmit it to the crank shaft, and fourth, to push out the burned gases on the exhaust stroke. The wrist pin serves as a hinge and the connecting rod passes the power along transmitting it to the crank shaft and causing the same to revolve. The action is almost identical with that of the foot on a bicycle pedal. The leg moves up and down in a reciprocating manner and causes the pedal to revolve. In the same way the connecting rod and crank shaft change reciprocating motion into motion of revolution.

"The four strokes of the engine, just mentioned, however, cannot fully be understood until the valves are explained. There are two of these to each cylinder, one to let in the fresh gas, called the 'inlet valve,' and the other to let out the burned gas, called the 'exhaust valve.' They are held tightly closed by springs, and are only opened when occasion requires. To do this a cam shaft is necessary. It is a long shaft, running the length of the motor with as many cams as there are valves. A cam is a projection on the side of a shaft, smooth in outline, which revolves with the shaft and so opens the valves. It does not close the valves directly, however, as there is a small part called a 'valve lifter,' which reaches from cam to valve stem. This gives a more direct push to the valve, gives a broad surface for wear, and has an adjustment which enables one to secure the best results in operation.

"The necessary connecting with the crank shaft is provided by the 'two-to-one gears,' or 'half time gears,' as they are sometimes called. The gear on the cam shaft has twice as many teeth as the gear on the crank shaft. Since this arrangement drives the cam shaft at half the speed of the crank shaft it will readily be seen why they are called 'half time gears.'

"Now that we have arranged for the operation of the valves, it will be easy to understand what follows. The piston goes down with the inlet valve open. This sucks in the fresh gas and is called the suction stroke. Having filled the cylinder with explosive mixture the piston now rises, forcing the gas into the top of the cylinder, the 'combustion chamber.' As both valves are tightly closed the gas cannot escape but is compressed in the top of the cylinder. So this is called the compression stroke. Now comes the electric spark setting fire to the compressed gas, which burns, expanding as it does so. The pressure developed by the expanding gas drives the piston down, setting crank shaft and fly wheel in motion, thus producing the power. This is the power stroke. Both valves remain tightly closed until the piston nears the end of the power stroke. This is followed again by the to let out the burned gases. As the piston returns upward it drives out the burned gases effecting the exhaust strock. This is followed again by the inlet stroke and the series of operations repeated so long as the engien runs."

MOTORISTS SHOULD HAVE TOOL BOXES IN BEST OF ORDER

There is no rational reason why the tool box on your motor car should be such a disorganized receptacle. It is worse than the coat pockets of an impossible business man, and immeasurably worse than the hand purse of a woman. The majority of tool boxes are simply impossible spaces into which everything goes promiscuously. This is exactly what a tool box should not be. A tool box should be the final word in organization, in order, in convenience, in neatness and in accessibility.

The multiple tool box is what is needed. The tool box with a little design to it and bearing a few resemblances to a wardrobe trunk in that there has been an attempt to have a special place for a few things. The multiple tool box might bear a little resemblance to the up-to-date hotel dresser drawer which has special compartments for shirts, for collars, for handkerchiefs, and in a top drawer has compartments for milady's jewels, gloves, etc.

It boils down to our asking for a sensible tool box. Make it so that the top and perhaps the front side are hinged. The box proper might consist of a series of drawers; there can be three or four of them. One of these should have compartments for extra headlight bulbs, spare spark plugs and other spares that should be handled with care. Another drawer should be given up entirely to an orderly arrangement of tools, pliers, wrenches, screw drivers, hammers, files and other dozens of little tools that are needed around a car when the owner drives it. Lastly, you can have a space or a compartment for miscellaneous parts, waste and other things. We do not attempt to analyze into the final details everything that should be had in this wardrobe box, but rather to draw attention to the real need for such and to briefly outline a possible scheme to follow.

We are not in favour of carrying the tools in the same space with other tools. Give them a separate space. Tire tools are bulky and often dirty. When you need them you should not have to interfere with the regular arrangement of your regular tool box. Tire tools should be carried in a most convenient place. When you want them you want them in a hurry. You are always behind your touring schedule when you need them, and so the more reason to have them in a super-convenient place. With them you may require a special hammer and wrench as well as jack, tire pump, and perhaps tire tol and pump, and perhaps tire tool and will find it better for your patience and also better for the other tools, which should be kept as bright and clean as knives and forks for the dinner table.

HELPFUL HINTS

A cracked water-jacket is not as serious trouble as one might imagine. The cylinder should be removed and the inside examined to make sure that there is no leak into the cylinder. If there is, that must be repaired also. If not, the leak in the water-jacket can be welded and the casting made serviceable again. If you wish to experiment before having the above repair made, try rusting the edges together. Make a strong solutio nof sal-ammonia in water and pour into water-jacket. As it works out through the leak it fillt it with rust and so gradually closes it up.

Never neglect a leak of gasoline, even if it is slight. The colourless vapour accumulates and damaging fire may result. If tightening the joint doesn't stop the leak, rub soap in the threads. If the carburetor catches fire do not give way to panic. Shut off the gasoline at the tank and start the motor if possible. A self-starte is useful here, but one should spin it by hand if necessary. This draws the flame into the carburetor, where it will do no harm. Water from the radiator may be thrown on burning woodwork, but never throw water on a pool of burning gasoline on the floor, as it only spreads the fire.

The edges of the rails wear away the tread rubber and cause a sharp bending action of the fabric, which will usually develop breaks inside. It is just a matter of time until the rubber covers loosens underneath and the fabric weakens from moisture and decay.

Be careful when driving on wet rails; quick twisting of the front wheels may result in accident from the rear of the car skidding sideways when leaving the rails.

Punctures through the thread and fabric of the casting should receive prompt attention at all times of the year, and more particularly in winter.

TORONTO OF OLD.

Mrs. G. R. R. Cockburn Formed Link With Picturesque Past.

The recent death of Mrs. G. R. R. Cockburn will recall to many the Toronto of forty years ago when social life was not as crowded as it now is. Her dinners and soirees in the Principal's residence of Upper Canada College in King street were events of importance in those days. Mrs. Cockburn's humorous sketch of their epergne, which formerly had graced the dining-table in the Tuileries, was worthy of De Maupassant. It appeared when the decoration was purchased that a new dining-table worthy of the epergne was necessary; then chairs worthy of the table; then a carpet worthy of the chairs; then curtains worthy of the carpet, etc., and then the upsetting of a lamp caused the destruction of everything in the room—except the fateful epergne.

The bright cricket afternoons, over which Mrs. Cockburn so graciously presided in the terrace overlooking the well-remembered playground, were social-athletic functions of special interest to Toronto people. Her memory was remarkable, and her recollections of the boys who had distinguished themselves in the class lists or in the athletic field were wonderfully clear.

Mrs. Cockburn was a Miss Zane, the daughter of a distinguished Kentucky family. Louis Philippe when an exile in America stayed for a time with the Zanes, and when later he was on the throne of France and members of the Kentucky family visited Paris their former hospitality was graciously acknowledged. Her father, Mr. Hampden Zane, came to Canada at the time of the Civil War, his lameness unfitting him for military service. It seems the family came from England at the time of the Restoration, when members of the Hampden and Zane families would feel more comfortable in the colonies than in England with the recollection of the Civil War and the names of the Cromwellian leaders still fresh in the minds of the people. Miss Betty Zane's exploit in furnishing an Indian-beleaguered fort with ammunition is one of the heroic episodes of early Virginian history. Mrs. Cockburn's mother was a Miss Churchill, of a well-known Virginian family.

While Mrs. Cockburn, by reason of her long residence in Canada, was thoroughly British, she never forgot her southern origin nor lost her southern sympathies. She was a young girl living in Louisville at the time of the Civil War, and was accustomed to recall incidents of that great struggle. Kentucky was occupied by the North, though the occupation was interrupted by frequent raids. On one occasion she was on a train journeying from the plantation of an uncle north to Louisville. The train carried, besides passengers, some hundreds of Union soldiers. It was stopped by a large body of raiders led by Colonel Morgan, a brother of the still more famous raider. A fusillade ensued and the Union soldiers retired. Miss Zane rushed to the platform of the car eager to see our (southern) soldiers. She was recognized by Colonel Morgan, for the Morgans also were Louisville people. He said that he deeply regretted he had to burn the train, but that he would first remove the baggage of the passengers and provide for their further journey. The young lady told Colonel Morgan that this was the first chance she had had of seeing any large body of southern troops, whereupon the gallant Colonel lined up his cavalry, over a thousand strong, and they sang for young Miss Zane's benefit "Cheer, Boys, Cheer," as she stood on the platform of the car. The incident illustrates the chivalrous spirit of the South even when at war.

Mrs. Cockburn is survived by her daughter, Lady Tait of Montreal. Her son, Major Churchill Cockburn, was killed a few years ago by the kick of a horse. It will be remembered that he held the Royal Humane Society's medal for saving two lives in Lake Rosseau, and also the Victoria Cross won in South Africa. He seemed to have inherited his daring from his southern mother, and his coolness in danger from his Scotch father.

Helps Woman's Movement.

One of the most interesting personalities amongst the working women of Britain is that of Miss Mary Macarthur, Hon. Secretary of the Central Committee on Women's Employment. She was born of Scottish parents thirty-four years ago, and educated at Garnethill High School, Glasgow. She spent some time abroad in South Germany, and on returning to Britain became her father's secretary doing also desultory journalism for local papers. She was editor of her school journal at the age of eleven. Early in 1903 she worked in London with Miss Margaret Bondfield, Lady Dilke, and Miss Gertude Luckwell. In 1911 she was married to Mr. W. C. Anderson, now chairman of the executive of the Labor Party and M. P. for the Attercliffe Division of Sheffield in England.

Like some other well known women, Miss Macarthur prefers to retain her own name for publicity purposes. Into her private life when she goes home and is Mrs. Anderson, she tries to bring none of the worries that make Miss Macarthur's life a struggle against growing odds. Miss Macarthur has done much to help the working women in Britain.

Wills V. C. to His Men.

The late Captain Francis Grenfell of the 9th Lancers, the first officer in the present war to win the Victoria Cross; was so grateful to his men that in his will, just admitted to probate, he leaves them all his chattels. Captain Grenfell, who was a well known polo player, left unsettled property of the gross value of $202,945. His will reads:

"I give to my regiment, to whom the honor of my gaining the Victoria Cross was entirely due, thanks to the splendid discipline and traditions which exist in this magnificent regiment, all my medals, including the V. C.

"My pony, Pearl of Price, which was ridden by my brother, Captain Riversdale Grenfell, all through the retreat from Mons and by myself on all other occasions, I give to Mrs. Duggan of Birfield, Old Windsor."

Important Items in Production of 1916 Compared With 1915

The two commanding achievements of the automobile industry in 1916 were that car production passed the 1,000,000 mark, and that the total value of motor vehicle production entered the billion dollar class. Chief items of 1916 compared with the preceding year are:

The motor vehicle production for 1916	1,617,708
The motor vehicle production for 1915	893,618
Passenger cars sold in 1916	1,525,578
Passenger cars sold in 1915	845,249
Motor trucks sold in 1916	92,130
Motor trucks sold in 1915	48,369
Retail value of motor vehicles sold in 1916	$1,088,[illegible],273
Retail value of motor vehicles sold in 1915	691,[illegible],950
Retail value of passenger cars sold in 1916	921,[illegible],000
Retail value of passenger cars sold in 1915	565,[illegible],450
Retail value of motor trucks sold in 1916	166,650,273
Retail value of motor trucks sold in 1915	125,[illegible],500
Average retail price of passenger cars in 1916	[illegible]805
Average retail price of passenger cars in 1915	[illegible]672
Number cars and trucks exported first ten months, 1916	67,616
